GUNMEN GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE

PRISONERS STAND AMAZED

Cannot Grasp Idea That Protection on Which They Counted Has Failed Them.

WIDE EFFECT, SAYS WHITMAN

May Break Up Gang Rule and Discourage Gunmen—Appeals to be Taken for All Four.

INFORMERS NOW TO GET OUT

Rose, Webber, and Vallon Will Leave Prison in a Day or Two—Schepps to be Tried for Vagrancy First.

"Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, "Whitey" Lewis, and "Dago Frank" Cirofici, the gunmen who had been on trial for ten days before Justice Goff in the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, were found guilty yesterday afternoon of murder in the first degree for the killing of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler who had threatened to reveal to the District Attorney the intimate connection of the police with gambling and organized vice. The jury reached a decision in just twenty minutes and took only one ballot. The youthful gangsters were remanded to the Tombs until this morning, when the usual motions will be made by their counsel, ex-Magistrate Charles G. F. Wahle, and then Justice Goff is expected to remand them for another week before sentencing them.

Before the end of next week, however, the youths, little more than boys, who obeyed the orders of "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose, directed by the master mind of ex-Lieut. Charles Becker, one-time head of the Strong-Arm Squad, will occupy cells in the death house at Sing Sing, where Becker has been for several weeks. When the cell doors close behind them there will be in that death house five of the ten men who have been accused of participation in the conspiracy which cost Rosenthal his life.

Four of the ten will go free. They are Rose, "Bridgey" Webber, Harry Vallon, and William Shapiro. Rose, Webber, and Vallon, the informers, may be released to-day or to-morrow. No indictment was found against them, and they are held simply on Coroner Feinberg's commitment. By the stipulation which induced them to testify for the State, District Attorney Whitman is bound to authorize their release immediately, and the District Attorney will make good his word by asking the Coroner to discharge them from custody.

Shapiro, although under indictment with Becker and the gunmen, will be liberated because his testimony has shown him to be guiltless of any crime except that of driving his gray murder car when a pistol was held to his head and he was threatened with death if he disobeyed. Mr. Whitman will move the dismissal of the indictment against him.

And then there will remain but one of the ten still to be tried. He is "Jack" Sullivan, or Jacob Reich, the ex-king of the newsboys and the close friend and client of Becker. Mr. Whitman will put him on trial as soon as the trial of ex-City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, which begins to-day, is concluded.

Whitman on the Effect.

The District Attorney was exceedingly pleased at the outcome of the trial. But he was very serious, and made it clear that he felt the trial had been one of the most important which ever had been held in this county, as well as being the only one in which four men ever had been tried together and found guilty of murder in the first degree.

"I believe the verdict marks the beginning of the end of the rule of gangsters and gunmen in certain parts of this city," he said. "The murder of Herman Rosenthal in all of its attendant circumstances, protected as it was by a man high in police affairs, was a direct challenge to law and order and to every decent man in this city and State.

"The support which this office received, and which it gratefully acknowledges, from the public and press, demonstrates that the people of the State of New York were ready to accept this challenge and to respond to the call to vindicate the law.

"Twenty-four jurors have now passed on the issues involved in the indictment, to say nothing of the Grand Jury of the county, and I am yet to hear a single dissenting voice."

Mr. Whitman declared that not the least value of the verdict lay in its moral effect on the underworld and on gangsters and gunmen. He said he had it from the lips of Rose, Webber, and Vallon, as well as Shapiro, that for years the boast of the east side had been that not a gunman had ever been convicted of murder. A belief had been generated in the hearts of gunfighters and bad men that they were immune from prosecution, that powerful political interests would always suffice to keep them from the electric chair. The conviction of Becker was a blow to gangsters, but it was as nothing compared to the effect yesterday of the conviction of the gunmen.

And to the slayers themselves, the men who had been on trial, the verdict came as a tremendous surprise. They seemed

RAID GUNMEN'S RESORTS.

East Side Cafe Proprietors Arrested by Inspector Cahalane.

Police Inspector Cahalane, with Capt. Rohrig of the Fifth Street Station, early this morning visited two coffee houses in lower Second Avenue and a place in Seventh Street, armed with warrants for the proprietors, who were arrested for "maintaining a public nuisance."

One of the places visited was the café from which "Big Jack" Zelig emerged to his death at the hands of "Red Phil" Davidson. It was visited often by the Rosenthal gunmen—"Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, "Dago Frank" Cirofici, and "Whitey" Lewis. Four arrests were made.

HYDE ON TRIAL TO-DAY.

Cummins Carries His Conviction to Court of Appeals.

Ex-City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, now under indictment for bribery in connection with the Carnegie Trust Company scandal, will go to trial before Justice Goff in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court to-day. District Attorney Whitman will appear in person and will be assisted by Assistant District Attorneys Frank Moss and John Clark. Max D. Steuer, Hyde's counsel, said he was ready.

The specific charge against Hyde is that he corruptly compelled Joseph G. Robin, the former head of the Northern Bank, to lend the Carnegie Trust Company $130,000 by threatening to withdraw all the city funds from the Northern Bank if Robin failed to do so, and that he also promised to deposit $160,000 of the city's money in the Northern Bank if Robin consented to lend the money.

The principal witness against Hyde will be Joseph G. Robin, who has pleaded guilty to grand larceny, in that he stole funds from the Washington Savings Bank, and has been in the Tombs for twenty-two months. Yesterday it was learned that Robin will get a suspended sentence for his work in building up the case against Cummins and Hyde. The matter of sentencing Robin now rests entirely with Justice Seabury of the Supreme Court, before whom Robin pleaded.

William J. Cummins, former Chairman of the Board of Directors of the defunct Carnegie Trust Company, who was convicted of stealing $300,000 of the funds and was sentenced to five years in Sing Sing, appeared at the bail department of the District Attorney's office yesterday and gave $75,000 bail pending the appeal of his case to the Court of Appeals.

RAID IN OYSTER BAY.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Nov. 19.—While services were in progress at the Episcopal Church here last evening the house across the street was stormed by Constable Scott Thompson and two assistants, who had heard from a young Italian that one of his countrymen was holding a 16-year-old girl there against her will. The appearance of the constable was the signal for the three Italians in the house to open fire with pistols and a real volley emptied the church across the way. Three bullets pierced the constable's coat.

When the smoke had cleared away the constable found himself in possession of the girl and a man named Joseph Vareka, who will be arraigned here on Saturday charged with shooting with intent to kill and with violating the laws against white slavery. The other men fled over Bayles Hill to the Italian colony and from there, it is believed, made their escape to New York.

The girl was Eva De Preu, daughter of a once prosperous produce dealer, who disappeared two months ago from her home at 1,207 Bergen Street, Brooklyn. According to the story she told this morning to District Attorney Wysong, she was drugged by Vareka, taken by him to Saybrook, Conn., to Jamaica, and finally to Oyster Bay and compelled at the point of a pistol to do his bidding.

WON AFTER 106 REFUSALS.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19.—A woman may be asked 106 times for her hand and say "No" each time, but 107 is one too many.

It was one too many for Mrs. Catherine Mackie. Tiring of repetition, she said "Yes" when F. A. Mackie popped the all-important question that last time.

According to the story Mrs. Mackie related to-day in the divorce court, Mackie at 61 was an ardent, never-say-die, I'll-win-you-yet kind of wooer. She told Judge Monroe that Mackie asked "Will you be mine?" 107 tmies in thirty-six days. Dreading the thirty-seventh day, she made an end of matters before they had gone as far as the 108th count.

She was 55 and doing a good business in face lotions and toilet articles when she received her proposals. Mackie, she asserted, promised her that there would be no need of her worrying about other people's complexions if she would only be his. So she took down her shingle, and there was rejoicing.

The awakening, she told Judge Monroe, was disconcerting even for one with a great store of composure, such as a freckle remover is supposed to have. Mackie earned only a limited salary, she said, and there was no chance for him to make good his promises.

Mackie was in court to-day on an order to show cause why alimony should not be paid. The application for alimony was denied, pending the trial.

4 ROBBED IN TRAIN HOLD-UP.

Pullman Porter a Victim—Bandits Otherwise Strictly Professional.

OTTUMWA, Iowa, Nov. 19.—Two masked men held up a passenger train of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway early to-day between Mystic and Ottumwa, and got $350. They robbed two passengers and two employes.

A. Young, a passenger from the West to Chicago, gave up $80 and a diamond ring valued at $150. J. G. Zook, his companion, was robbed of $72.35.

The robbers boarded the train as it was leaving Mystic. As a porter was closing the vestibule doors of the observation car a revolver was pointed at his head and he was robbed of $5.30. He then was compelled to lead the way through the car. In a sleeper, a Pullman conductor surrendered $29.80 and a diamond stud.

The bandits rode into this city on the platforms of the observation and sleeping cars, holding off passengers and escaping when speed was reduced. Four suspects have been arrested.

MANIAC COMMANDS POLICE 70 MINUTES

STUNNED BY A DETECTIVE

Another Kicks Infernal Machine About and So Averts an Explosion—Crank Seeks Southern Pacific Victim.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19.—Armed with an infernal machine containing enough dynamite to destroy a city block, a bottle of nitroglycerine, and a .45 calibre pistol a masked maniac took possession of the Central Police Station and held it for about seventy minutes, while hundreds of occupants of this building and others for blocks around sought safety in distance.

When Detective James Hosick knocked the man unconscious with a leather "billy" after slipping up behind him, the fuse of the infernal machine was automatically ignited. Detective Samuel L. Browne grabbed the box with its fuse sharply spluttering and hurled it into the street. Sticks of high-power dynamite scattered over the pavement, while hundreds of spectators stood apparently paralyzed by fright. Through a freak of chance there was no explosion, and Browne continued kicking the sticks of dynamite and jumping on the fuse until he had broken the connection and extinguished the fire.

Manacled to a cot in the receiving hospital to-night the would-be dynamiter, who has admitted he is Carl Warr, a laborer, is suffering with several severe scalp wounds, but the police surgeons say his injuries are not serious.

Warr entered the outer office of Chief of Police Sebastian this forenoon. His face and head were completely covered with a grotesque mask and he carried in his arms a large box covered with cloth, which was strapped around his shoulders and resembled a small hand organ. First startled and then amused by the strange spectacle Police Sergt. R. C. Hilf, who suspected a practical joke, asked the man what he wanted.

"I've got enough dynamite in here to blow us all into eternity," he said, "and I want you to send for the highest official of the Southern Pacific Railroad."

He rested the box on a filing cabinet, and Assistant District Attorney R. O. Graham, who was in the office, started joking with him.

"This is no joke," said Warr. "I mean business, and if you don't believe me try to take this away from me. My hand is fastened in this box, and if I pull it out—bang!—we all die."

A hole had been cut in the box, and the occupants of the room saw that the man's left hand had been pushed through it. They began to realize that it was no joke.

Warr then walked into the office of Police Secretary C. E. Snively, which opens into the private office of Chief Sebastian, and repeated his request that the head official of the Southern Pacific be summoned. Snively asked if he had any preference in the man he desired to blow up, and he replied that he only wanted the head man. Snively took down the telephone receiver and pretended to hold a conversation with Paul Shoup, General Manager of the Pacific Electric Company.

"Mr. Shoup is busy, but he will be here in about fifteen minutes," said Snively.

"Well, he'd better hurry," replied Warr, "I'm getting nervous."

Meantime Chief Sebastian, who had held a brief conversation with the man and realized that he was in earnest, ordered the street roped off for a block either way, and took steps to have the 100 prisoners in the city jail removed. Upstairs in the building two courts were in session, and both rooms were crowded. A detective passed the word to a bailiff in Judge Chambers's court, and the bailiff whispered to the Judge.

"Court's adjourned until 2 P. M. Clear the room," said the Judge promptly and there was a rush for the stairway. A similar scene was enacted in Justice Frederickson's court.

There were not enough patrol wagons to remove the prisoners from the jail to the Doyle Heights prison, and two street cars were sent for. It was an orderly procedure, and the prisoners were soon on their way to the east side, guarded by the reserves. Ambulances removed the patients from the city emergency hospital, just around the corner from the Chief's office. This institution was crowded with patients injured in last night's fire at the St. George Hotel.

One of the spectators attracted to the scene was J. Randel, a mining man from Chihuahua, Mexico. He shook hands with Warr, and asked if it was really dynamite in the box.

"Yes, and it's 60 per cent. stuff, too," declared Warr.

"I don't believe it. You are bluffing," laughed Randel.

Warr lifted the cloth cover of the box, which had a glass front, and drew out a stick of dynamite. Randel took it, bit off a piece, and tasted it, miner fashion. He knew what it was, but dissembled.

"That's not dynamite," he said contemptuously. "Somebody cheated you."

"Light it and see," said Warr.

Randel lighted a piece of the "giant" with a match. It burned briskly, and those who had hitherto clung to the joke made a hasty exit.

As Warr had said his left hand was attached to the mechanism of the infernal machine, and its withdrawal ignited the fuse, but the quick work of Detective Browne prevented the sparks from reaching the explosive. There were sixty half sticks of dynamite, and an expert said it was 60 per cent. in strength, as the man had boasted.

A San Diego detective said that Warr was in that city at the beginning of the I. W. W. outbreak last Spring, and was one of the men driven out of the city at that time, but the man denied that he was affiliated with any such organization or that he had ever been in San Diego. A local official of the Industrial Workers of the World said he had never seen the man.

Warr apparently had been brooding over the Southern Pacific shopmen's strike of more than a year ago, but denied that he had been employed by the company.

"They brought a lot of scabs out here and they overrun the country, taking the jobs away from other men," he said. "I wanted to see if the company wouldn't treat their men better. That was all I wanted."

The infernal machine was an ingenious contrivance with a large number of springs, and a wire lever attached to the hammerlock of an old army rifle. Warr's hand was attached to the wire that led to this detonating device.

Officers who searched Warr's house to-night found no explosives or anything that resembled infernal machines. There were, however, all sorts of contrivances and devices, numberless gears and lever arrangements, indicating that he had given much time to the study of mechanics.

The would-be dynamiter said at first that his name was Davis, but he was identified by tax receipts bearing his name found in his home. After much questioning by detectives he admitted that Warr was his name. He also said that more explosives were secreted in the vicinity of the house, and that when he recovered from his injuries he would take the police to the hiding place. He stole the dynamite from the powder house of a quarry at Bloomington, Cal., near Colton, having obtained an impression of the lock, and made keys which opened the building.

GOVERNMENT TO SUE IN GRAND TRUNK CASE

Wickersham Promises Quick Action to Stop Deal with the New Haven.

WISE CALLS WITNESSES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Quick action was obtained by official representatives from Massachusetts and Rhode Island who made protests to-day to President Taft and Attorney General Wickersham against the stoppage of work on the Palmer-Providence extension of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada.

Their allegation that this suspension of activities was due to a deal between the Grand Trunk and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway Company, with the object of stifling competition, was accepted by Attorney General Wickersham, who announced to his visitors that the Government would proceed against both the New Haven and the Grand Trunk for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Whether the Attorney General will cause a suit to be brought in equity on the civil side of the statute, or will institute proceedings on the criminal side, has not been determined, but the Department of Justice contemplates action under the Sherman law on the basis of the alleged agreement, the effect of which would be to block the promised competition between the New Haven and Grand Trunk systems in New England.

The officials who obtained the assurance were members of the Railroad Commissions of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, who came to Washington in accordance with an appointment to see President Taft. When they called on the President they found that he had arranged a conference for them with Attorney General Wickersham at the White House for this afternoon. In the delegation were Railroad Commissioners MacLeod and Jordan of Massachusetts, and Railroad Commissioners Will C. Bliss, Samuel E. Hudson, and Robert F. Rodman of Rhode Island.

These five men met the Attorney General at the Department of Justice this afternoon for a conference, at which Special Assistant Attorney Jesse C. Adkins of the Department of Justice was present. From now on Attorney Adkins will have charge of the department's work of investigating all phases of the New Haven and Grand Trunk case. After spending an hour in Mr. Wickersham's office the New England Commissioners adjourned to the office of Attorney Adkins, where they had another conference lasting nearly two hours, during which every feature of the alleged combination in restraint of trade and commerce among the States was discussed.

Before meeting the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Commissioners, Attorney General Wickersham said that he had been convinced that enough evidence had been presented to warrant the belief that the action of the New Haven and Grand Trunk Roads could be shown in the courts to constitute a violation of the Sherman law, which bars all combinations in restraint of trade. Mr. Wickersham added that he did not know what the course of procedure would be and could not know until after further investigation. During his conference with the New England delegation he said practically the same thing.

When his private conference with the Railroad Commissioners ended Attorney Adkins declined to discuss the case further than to say:

"We have gone over the matter together, and the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Commissioners have given us all the information in their possession. It is entirely too early to predict what the department will do, further than to say that the investigation will be most thorough."

After a series of conferences, Chairman F. J. McLeod of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission expressed himself thoroughly satisfied with the outcome of the visit to the department.

Chairman Bliss of the Rhode Island commission agreed with Mr. McLeod. He said:

"The attitude of Attorney General Wickersham shows that he means business. The investigation by the department will be aided in every possible manner by the Rhode Island Commission, and I feel that something will be accomplished."

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Vice President Timothy E. Byrnes of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and Alexander H. Cochrane, a member of the Board of Directors of the road, were to-day served with summonses to appear before the United States Grand Jury in New York on Thursday. The papers were sworn out by United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise of New York. The only information to be had here is that Byrnes and Cochrane are to give testimony in an action pending against the New Haven Road.

District Attorney Wise said last night that he could not break his invariable rule not to talk about matters before the Grand Jury.

GOVERNOR ATTACKS MONOPOLY.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 19.—Gov. Pothier issued a statement to-night in which he declared that if the General Assembly will support him he will take action to break the monopoly which the New Haven Railroad has upon all the transportation facilities in the State.

"There is no reason," said the Governor, "why competition should not be restored between steam railroads, electric railways, and steamship lines within this State.

"I am determined that it shall be restored, and that the power under which one company owns all lines shall be broken if it is to use that power to deprive our citizens of the facilities they require and demand."

WICKERSHAM BLOCKS ARREST OF ARCHBOLD

Refuses to Permit the Service of Texas Warrants on Him, Folger, and Teagle.

WANTS A FURTHER INQUIRY

Gray, So-Called Nemesis of Standard Oil, Vainly Demands Action—The Incident Amuses Archbold.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Attorney General Wickersham has taken the ground that there is not sufficient evidence so far as he is at present advised to bring about the removal to Texas of John D. Archbold, President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Henry C. Folger, Jr., President of the Standard Oil Company of New York, and W. C. Teagle, a Director of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, to stand trial on the indictment returned against them in Texas, charging criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in connection with the alleged co-partnership between the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas. Mr. Wickersham has instructed the United States Marshal at New York not to arrest Mr. Archbold, Mr. Folger and Mr. Teagle util further orders.

This attitude of the Attorney General was made known by him to-day to Representative George F. Burgess of Texas, and W. H. Gray, a lawyer of Houston.

Gray Tells of Conference.

Mr. Gray this evening made this statement:

"In company with Congressman Burgess I called on Mr. Wickersham this morning at 10 o'clock and discussed with him the status of certain indictments returned by a Federal Grand Jury in Dallas, Texas, against the Magnolia Petroleum Company, its Trustees and owners, and the Standard Oil Company.

Wickersham Takes Responsibility.

"Mr. Wickersham stated to me that he personally was responsible for these warrants not being served; that he had ordered the Marshal at New York not to make the arrest pending an investigation by the department to see whether the Grand Jury was warranted in finding the indictments. Mr. Wickersham stated that he did not believe there was sufficient evidence to convict the three men at 26 Broadway of the charge laid in the indictment. He did not believe that on a hearing before the United States Commissioner after arrest there would be sufficient evidence for their removal to Dallas for trial.

"On both these points I took issue with Mr. Wickersham, and stated that I believed there was sufficient evidence to convict these men of the charges laid in the indictment. I said I believed that proof of the finding of the indictment and proof that the parties under arrest were the particular ones named in the indictment would be sufficient to warrant the Commissioner to compel them to give bond for their appearance before the Federal Court at Dallas in January, or, in case they did not give bond, to remand them to the custody of the Marshal at Dallas, Texas.

"I stated that I did not believe it was within the province of the United States Commissioner at New York to try the case on its merits, to ascertain whether he, in his judgment, thought the evidence sufficient to convict them of the crime charged in the indictment, but such was the province of the Federal court at Dallas, and for that reason I thought the warrant of arrest ought to be served. Were these ordinary men that is the way the matter would undoubtedly be disposed of—and therein lies the core of it: are they ordinary men?

Tried in Department of Justice.

"From the statement of Mr. Wickersham that he did not believe there was sufficient evidence to compel the removal of Archbold, Folger, and Teagle for trial, one might infer that the three 26 Broadway men would not appear before the Commissioner and willingly give the bond for their appearance before the Federal Court in Dallas, Texas, for trial in January, but would contest every move in the case, and that dismissal of these indictments, rather than vindication by public trial, is what they seek. This inference is based on the remarks of Mr. Wickersham to the effect that he did not believe they could be removed.

"Fortunate, indeed, is one who can have his case, after indictment and before arrest, tried in the Department of Justice and every detail of it examined with a view to determining the extent of guilt before the trial. This is a privilege not extended to ordinary men, and not involved in ordinary cases, and I say this dispassionately and with all respect to Mr. Wickersham and the high office which he holds.

After seeing the statement issued by Mr. Gray, Attorney General Wickersham to-night said:

"I told Mr. Gray that I had directed that the warrants be not served upon the non-resident defendants because the evidence at the disposal of the Government, so far as it had been disclosed to me, was, in my opinion, insufficient to sustain removal proceedings. I told him that I had sent for the United States Attorney at Dallas to come to Washington and confer with the department about the case. Mr. Gray stated that he was counsel for the Waters-Pierce Oil Company; that he had been a witness before the Grand Jury, and that he knew the facts which would sustain the charge. I then called in Mr. Fowler, (assistant to the Attorney General,) who has immediate charge of the matter, and made with him and Mr. Gray an appointment for the latter to confer with him to-morrow (Wednesday) morning at 10:30 o'clock. This was practically all that passed between us. Apparently, he has repented of his promise to return and assist the department, and prefers to rush into print with his statements."

MR. ARCHBOLD IS AMUSED.

When John D. Archbold, President of the Standard Oil Company, was informed by THE NEW YORK TIMES last night of the Attorney General's summary disposal of the indictments brought against him by the Federal Grand Jury for the Northern District of Texas, he enjoyed a quiet chuckle.

"I am gratified to hear that," he said. "Of course, there was no ground for the Grand Jury's action, and I am not surprised that the Attorney General has quashed the indictments. As for Mr. Gray——"

Mr. Archbold laughed again, and decided that he had said enough.

NEW SURGEON FOR CZAR'S SON

Court Doctors Admit That the Case Is Serious.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 19.—The Berlin surgeon, Prof. Israel, has been summoned to Tsarskoe-Selo, and Dr. Feodoroff has been in attendance since the imperial family returned from Opala.

Circumstances point to the continued gravity of the condition of the Czar's son. The Court doctors themselves admit that it is a serious surgical case.

NO PAINTED LEGS FOR PARIS.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Hearing reports that Leon Bakst has been gaining effective original effects in New York by painting the legs of ballet dancers, some Parisian authorities have been giving their opinions of the alleged innovation.

"Sem," the caricaturist, says that if the new mode finds favor in New York, it certainly must be successful in Paris; but all the Paris danseuses are up in arms against it.

$50,000 IN GOLD STOLEN.

Shipment from London to Alexandria Arrives Short That Amount.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Ten thousand sovereigns ($50,000) have been stolen from a consignment of 200,000 shipped to Alexandria Nov. 12. When the boxes were opened on arrival two were found to be filled with lead.

ROBS WELLS FARGO SAFES.

Burglar Empties Two and Gets Away with Their Contents.

The police discovered at midnight last night that some time earlier in the evening a burglar had made his way into the offices of the Wells Fargo Express Company at 133 West 125th Street, and there opened two of the safes. A third safe, nearer the front of the store and in plain view from the street, was shunned by the visitor. The ladder against the wall of the yard at the rear told which way the man had departed, and a forced sidewalk door leading into the cellar of the building told which way he had come.

How much he took from the two safes could not even be conjectured by the police, for at 2 o'clock this morning the agent of the office had not yet reached his invaded premises.

W. ROCKEFELLER AS JUROR.

Agrees to Serve on Sheriff's $300,000,000 Third Panel.

Sheriff Harburger dispelled all doubts yesterday as to the willingness of his $300,000,000 jury panel to serve by showing a letter containing the acceptance of William Rockefeller.

The note was a personal one, expressing the financier's delight at the Sheriff's invitation and declaring his willingness to submit to the traditionally onerous duties that fall to the lot of the third panel of the Sheriff's jury.

In commenting on the acceptance of Vincent Astor and William Rockefeller the Sheriff observed:

EXTRA RAILROAD FARE LEGAL.

Passenger Must Pay if He Fails to Buy Ticket, Says Court.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—The right of the Long Island Railroad Company to exact an extra fare from passengers who fail to buy a ticket before boarding its cars, a privilege given by statute to railroad companies operating between cities in the country districts, was upheld by the Court of Appeals to-day.

The question was raised by Edward C. Hogan to recover a penalty of $50 for being compelled to pay an alleged unlawful rate of fare because he failed to buy a ticket at one of the company's offices.

JERSEY-GROWN PINEAPPLE.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, N. J., Nov. 19.—School Trustee Morris B. Allen of Union Township possesses what he declares is the only pineapple ever grown in that municipality. He expects it to adorn his table on Sunday. Allen planted the core of a pineapple in his garden about six years ago. It sprouted that year and he potted it for the Winter, the plant making a welcome addition to the others in the house.

The next Summer he set it out again and the process of repotting was repeated. The fruit first began to show signs of appearing last Winter. It developed slowly, but surely, and now it apears to be quite edible. The plant gives promise of producing other pineapples in time.

MIDDIES LOST WEIGHT.

Cruises Not Beneficial to First Three Classes—Fourth Class Gained.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 19.—That a marked loss of weight and strength among the members of the first and second classes of midshipmen was the result of the Summer cruise in the battleships of the Atlantic Fleet is the statement of Surgeon R. W. McDowell, medical officer in charge of physical training at the Naval Academy. The fact is ascribed to the lack of systematic exercise and the complete change of habits in regard to work, sleep, recreation, and diet. It was also found that there was a slight decrease in the average weight and strength of the members of the third class, who cruised in Northern waters on the Massachusetts and maintained about the same schedule of work and exercise as that which prevailed at the academy, and a marked increase in the weight and strength of the members of the new fourth class, due to the graded system of physical development to which they were subjected during the Summer.

According to tests of all the midshipmen taken in April and again in October, after the completion of the summer cruise, the average loss of weight among members of the first class was six pounds, and among members of the third class was half a pound, and the average gain among members of the newer fourth class was nine pounds.

AN AUSTRIAN-SERVIAN CRISIS

Report That Three Austrian Army Corps Are About to be Mobilized—Italy May Not Support Her Ally.

Dispatch to The London Times.

SOFIA, Nov. 19.—Last night the replies of Greece and Servia to the Bulgarian communication regarding the Turkish proposals for an armistice were received here, and this morning a Cabinet council was held at which the demands of Bulgaria were added to those of her allies and joint reply was drafted.

This was immediately telegraphed to the Governments of the other States, and, their approval having been signified, the conditions which the allies are prepared to accept for an armistice were communicated this evening to the Porte.

The tenor of the joint reply cannot, of course, be disclosed until it has been ascertained that it has reached Constantinople. The conditions undoubtedly are severe, but this was only to be expected in the circumstances.

As already indicated in The Times, the surrender of Adrianople and Scutari and of the troops engaged in withstanding the sieges of those towns is held to be indispensable, and the delivery of Yanina to the Greeks is also insisted on.

I have further reason to believe that the Porte has been given to understand that Constantinople, the shore of the Sea of Marmora, and the Dardanelles, with a small adjacent territory, may remain under Turkish sovereignty.

Even should the terms be accepted, the Bulgarian Government will have no little difficulty in arresting the advance of its troops, who, as well as their commanding officers, are burning to enter Constantinople and dictate terms of peace at the capital of their hereditary foe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Peace negotiations have been begun between the four allies of the Balkan League and Turkey. Plenipotentiaries appointed by the league will treat with the Ottoman Commander in Chief.

It is stated that an armistice will be proclaimed at once and that negotiations for a final treaty of peace will be begun without delay.

It is hoped that the eight hours' truce which the hostile forces at Tchatalja agreed to yesterday for the purpose of burning their dead will thus be prolonged into a final cessation of hostilities.

King Ferdinand, according to information which has reached the French Government, has, says a telegram from Paris, given up the idea of trying to force an entry into Constantinople. The inference drawn is that the Bulgarian commander is not sanguine of success in his attack on the Tchatalja lines, and that the Bulgarian Army is exhausted.

The cholera is regarded as the strongest factor making for peace. The epidemic that is attacking the two exhausted armies places the possibility of continuing the war by either side beyond human power.

In this connection the information received by the French Government receives curious confirmation in a dispatch received by a Roumanian paper from Sofia, to the effect that the situation of the Bulgarian Army is very critical. The original plan, according to this dispatch, was that the Bulgarian, Servian, and Greek armies should unite on the Lule-Burgas line and march together to Constantinople. Now the Bulgarian Army is fighting alone against the Turkish Army and fleet.

This telegram must be considered in the light of the fact that it was passed by the Bulgarian censorship. Another implication it contains is that the cholera has attacked the Bulgarian Army, for it is stated that the eight hours' armistice was arranged in order to give time for the burning of the bodies of the men of the two armies who have died from cholera.

It is believed that King Ferdinand will not now exact a triumphant entry into Constantinople. The conditions imposed by Bulgaria for a truce for the discussion of peace terms are said to include the surrender of a certain number of places, including Adrianople and the Tchatalja lines.

A telegram to The Daily Mail from Sofia says:

"The allies' conditions for an armistice were telegraphed to-day (Tuesday) to Kiamil Pasha, the Grand Vizier, in Constantinople. The allies demand the evacuation of the Tchatalja lines and the surrender of Adrianople, Scutari, Yanina, and Dibra.

"Constantinople and the Dardanelles are to be left to Turkey."

Opinion in London is not quite so optimistic as it is in Paris. It is pointed out that Turkey's acceptance of the terms laid down by Bulgaria and her allies for an armistice is by no means certain, especially in view of the successes which Nazim Pasha claims in the defense of the Tchatalja lines. Mussulman fatalism makes a cholera epidemic a less important factor to the Ottoman Army than to the Bulgarians, and, furthermore, there is some ground for believing that the Ottoman Government does not yet realize the full extent of its débacle.

On the other hand, the demands of the allies strictly follow precedent. The Russo-Turkish armistice in 1878 provided for the surrender of several fortresses which were still uncaptured. The Russians signed the armistice at Adrianople and did not have to fight their way across Southern Thrace, yet they claimed and received possession of the Tchatalja lines.

As The Times this morning points out, its Sofia correspondent does not include the evacuation of the Tchatalja lines among the conditions of an armistice, the reason probably being that the Bulgarians do not aspire to plant their flag on the cholera-infected trenches.

The Times expresses the hope that the Porte will accept the terms offered, adding:

"Peace now lies with Turkey. If she is wise she will accept her fate with that dignity and resignation which never yet have failed the Turks in their darkest reverses. They themselves asked for terms, and they got the best terms they can expect.

"They will do well not to be misled by the resistance they are able to offer at the Tchatalja lines. All the valor they can summon to their aid can never now repair in the slightest degree the territorial losses they have sustained. The decrees of Fate are written. European Turkey, except for one small corner, disappears from the map. If they continue the struggle they will not only forfeit their last claim to the sympathy of the European nations, but they will assuredly lose Constantinople.

"We interpreted a widespread feeling when we adjured Bulgaria to stop short of Stamboul, but if Turkey now compels the Bulgarians to fling themselves against the Tchatalja lines not a voice will be raised against the final expulsion of the Turks from the European continent."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 19, (11:30 P. M.)—The Porte to-morrow will appoint plenipotentiaries to meet the Bulgarian plenipotentiaries with regard to an armistice.

An official note issued to-night says that the Bulgarian Government has replied to the Porte's recent communication respecting an armistice, and that Bulgaria is ready to enter into relations with the Ottoman plenipotentiaries with a view to the conclusion of an armistice and to the discussion of conditions of peace.

M. de Giers, the Russian Ambassador, went to the Porte at 7:30 o'clock this evening and handed to the Foreign Minister Bulgaria's reply to the Turkish peace proposals. The Council of Ministers sat until a late hour discussing it.

Owing to the cholera the Government has ordered the closing of State and private schools until further notice.

Bulgaria has nominated the commander in chief of the army at Tchatalja to negotiate the armistice. The negotiations will be conducted at Hademkeui, where Turkey will send her delegates.

SOFIA, Nov. 19.—It is understood that the terms of the allies for an armistice are moderate and that Turkey may save Constantinople and a strip of coast territory in Europe if she accepts them.

Respecting Albania, it is said in well-informed quarters that the Balkan League will probably not object to that country remaining under the suzerainty of the Sultan, and that the powers will acquiesce in this.

The reply sent to the dispatch of the Grand Vizier to King Ferdinand reads:

"The Bulgarian Government, after agreement with the allied Cabinets of Servia, Montenegro, and Greece, informs the Porte that plenipotentiaries have been appointed with instructions to arrange with the Commander in Chief of the Turkish armies the conditions of an armistice and subsequently to proceed to the conclusion of peace."

The Council of Ministers has decided to defray the cost of maintaining the Turkish prisoners from the funds provided for the campaign. The Turkish soldiers will receive the same rations as the Bulgarian troops. The captured Generals will each receive 20 francs ($4) a day for food and pocket money, and the other officers from 7 to 11 francs, according to their rank.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The conditions of the Balkan allies with respect to an armistice, according to information received here, include the unconditional surrender of important points, such as Adrianople, the Tchatalja lines, and Durazzo. Bulgaria will renounce an entry into Constantinople.

Many believe that Turkey will yield on most of the points in the hope that Europe will eventually undertake to reduce the claims of the allies when peace is concluded. If the pourparlers are successful Constantinople will remain in Turkish territory, which the powers desire.

Numerous difficulties, however, remain, including the status of the Aegean Islands, the matter of a Servian port on the Adriatic, the delimitation of autonomous Albania, the partition of territories, and the claims of Roumania. Nevertheless, it is considered that the situation has become clearer.

VIENNA, Nov. 19.—Prof. Krauss and five other bacteriologists started for Sofia to-day to fight the cholera and typhoid that have appeared in the Bulgarian army.

TIGHTER GRIP ON ADRIANOPLE.

Bulgars Steadily Move Closer to Turks' Many Forts.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Bennet Burleigh, correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, wiring Monday, says:

"I witnessed the bombardment of the Adrianople forts to east and north of the city. The firing was not heavy, but accurate. The besiegers are not attempting to break or destroy the city, but are devoting their attention solely to the demolition of the Turkish works, of which many interlines of trenches and bastions have been constructed. The bombproofs are legion. The Turks have artfully concealed their gun positions, and most of their fire is delivered from batteries securely hidden far behind the front.

"They must have worked very hard and skillfully to construct such a honeycombing of the terrain around Adrianople. But irresistibly the Bulgarians are advancing—always contracting their steel halter. The Turks again attempted a sortie to-day to the eastward. Fighting desperately, they strove to pass out by the Turkish cemetery roadway, but the Bulgarian gunners and infantry beat them back into Adrianople. They left rows of dead. The Bulgarians were able to follow the enemy up and move their lines of attack still closer to the masses of ramparts, bastions, and trenches."

REPORTS GUNS CAPTURED

Turkish Artillery Hold the Enemy at a Distance—Fresh Troops Joining the Tchatalja Defenders.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 19.—Dispatches from Nazim Pasha, the Turkish Commander in Chief, have kept the Government and the public informed to-day of the progress of the Tchatalja defense. The latest dispatch, timed at 8:30 o'clock this evening, says:

"The battle which has been raging for days throughout the whole extent of the Tchatalja lines ended to-day also in our favor. We repulsed the enemy's infantry, which attempted to advance in the centre, and annihilated several of their batteries. On the right wing we captured two machine guns and a quantity of ammunition.

"From one of the forts in the centre we made a sortie at sunset and dispersed the enemy, who had occupied a position in the face of the fort. The greater part of them were killed. We captured 200 rifles and a large quantity of ammunition."

A dispatch sent at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon said:

"A desperate artillery engagement began this morning, and is being continued with success. The Bulgarian infantry, operating in front of the centre of our line of defense, was repulsed by our artillery fire. Part of the enemy's batteries were silenced.

Found Servian Helmets.

"We ordered a detachment of troops to advance. They attacked the enemy's entrenchments and forced them to flee. We captured a number of rifles, machine guns, helmets, shovels, and pickaxes.

"A number of the helmets bore badges inscribed 'Thirty-fifth Regiment, Vrania,' showing that there are Servian troops with the enemy. The battle continues."

A previous dispatch from Nazim Pasha read:

"The enemy, who yesterday attempted an advance to the front of our right wing, were repulsed and compelled to withdraw, suffering heavy losses. This morning again the enemy's infantry, advancing on our left wing, suffered heavily and were driven back. The artillery duel continued along the whole line."

Another telegram estimates the Bulgarian losses in yesterday's fighting on the Turkish right wing as 400 killed and wounded, including twenty officers. Two machine guns were captured.

Mahmud Mukhtar Wounded.

Among the wounded who arrived in Constantinople yesterday was Gen. Mahmud Mukhtar, who has a bullet wound in the leg. He was the Turkish General who successfully attacked the Bulgarian left wing at Bunarhissar in the battle of Lule-Burgas.

Mahmud Mukhtar Pasha received his wound while riding to inspect the positions with his staff. Approaching a trench, which was supposed to be occupied by Turks, he discovered too late that it held Bulgarians. A fusillade from the Bulgarians wounded Mahmud Mukhtar and three other officers. The bullet was extracted this morning, and it is expected that the General will recover within a week.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The first official intimation sent out by the Government at Sofia that fighting between the Bulgarian and Turkish armies has taken place at Tchatalja arrived here yesterday afternoon. It consisted of the laconic sentence:

"The day before yesterday and yesterday the Bulgarian Army engaged the Turks in battle on the advanced points of the Tchatalja lines with a view to preparing the ground for its further operations."

This was issued subsequent to the announcement of the appointment of plenipotentiaries to conduct peace negotiations with the Ottoman Government.

The silence of Sofia as to the results of the fighting is taken as an indication that Gen. Savoff, the Bulgarian Commander in Chief, has discovered that the task of getting within the Turkish line of forts and intrenchments will prove a tremendous test of the staying power of his troops.

TURKS' GUNS KEEP OFF BULGARS

Fresh Troops Are Daily Joining Nazim Pasha's Army.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The Times correspondent telegraphs from the Tchatalja lines under date of Monday:

"Last night a strong northeast wind brought on a Scotch mist, which greatly impeded the operations of the Bulgarian artillery against the Hamidiyeh forts.

"In comparison with that of yesterday, to-day's cannonade on both sides was desultory. The Bulgarian batteries in front of Papas Burgas had been severely punished. The effect of the Turkish naval guns had apparently induced the Bulgarians to withdraw these batteries, as they did not fire a shot all day.

"At midnight a Turkish battalion advanced and occupied the village of Papas Burgas on the heels of the Bulgarians, who evacuated it precipitately before them. This rather gives the impression that the Bulgarians found the extreme Turkish left to be impracticable.

"Up to the dusk of the evening the Turkish gunners were easily able to keep the Bulgarians at a distance, as their heavy guns have a longer range than that of the opposing batteries.

"The Turks had no need to call up the reserves, who blacken the crests of the hills and the slopes behind the lines, while they watch the long-distance artillery duel with the greatest interest.

Belief in London—Expectation That Allies Will Be Asked for Help.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"The Bulgarian position before Tchatalja is regarded in well-informed quarters in London as serious, as the Turkish troops holding the famous lines are 60 per cent. of them fresh troops brought up from Asia Minor, and not demoralized remnants of the Turkish Army which retreated from Lule-Burgas.

"The view is expressed that the Bulgarians will have to seek help from their allies—perhaps from Monastir, now that the latter place has surrendered.

"This would in the meanwhile give Nazim Pasha every opportunity further to strengthen his position, as troops could not be brought from Monastir and Thrace in less than a week."

HORRORS OF TURKISH RETREAT.

Ruin and Slaughter Everywhere—Massacre of Christians Confirmed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—William Maxwell, correspondent of The Daily Mail, sends a dispatch, dated Istranja, telling of the terrible scenes he witnessed after the Turks were overwhelmed by the Bulgarians in the five days' struggle near Lule-Burgas. He says:

"The horrors of the road to Istranja are evidence of the demoralized flight of the Turks after their defeat along the line from Bunar Hissar to Lule-Burgas.

"Miles of ox wagons, toiling through the heavy clay, pass over the dead in whose bodies ruts are worn. At Tartarli, south of Visa, I came upon a sight which surpassed in horror everything else. Yards back of the dark earth seemed to have been churned by some mighty force. Here were limbers and wagons, splintered and half buried in the quagmire. Many scores of soldiers, who had fallen in the rearguard action, lay with bloodstained hands stretched out in the clay. Their livid faces seemed to float on the morass. Some were gray-haired men. Others were mere boys.

"A motor hung over the ditch. In it lay two men, shot through the head. At its side was stretched a soldier, rifle in hand, upon whom death came as he turned to flee.

"Amid these terrors, which the infernal regions could not match, roamed women and children seeking what the dead no longer need.

"I passed through three or four villages, which the Turks in their retreat had given to flames.

"There is, I fear, no doubt that they added to the horrors of their position by foul massacres of Christians. The evidences of these atrocities are buried, but I heard from eye-witnesses, whose word I cannot dispute, that women were murdered in cold blood and their slaughtered infants were cast down in the mud.

"The atrocities were limited to two or three places. Most of the people of the Christian villages, with which the whole country is dotted, escaped, though their houses were burned, and they are left without shelter or means of subsistence."

HUGE LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES.

Turks Are Fighting with Great Bravery and Desperation.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Telegraphing from in front of Hademkeui, Monday night, the correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says:

"The battle has proved one of the bloodiest of the present war, both sides sustaining fearful losses. Magnificent courage was displayed by the Turks, officers of the highest rank exposing themselves to the fire of the Bulgarians with unequaled devotion in order to set an example for the men.

"The battle is still raging with unabated fury. The Bulgarians are directing their fire against the forts west of Hademkeui and attempting to break through the Turkish line. The Turks, holding their ground and disputing every inch desperately, are making a heroic resistance."

WAR LESSONS FOR AMERICANS.

Our Officers May Visit Battlefields in European Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The United States has asked the Balkan allies and Turkey to permit a party of American army officers to join their forces and go over the fields on which some of the greatest battles of modern times have been fought within the last few weeks. If the permission is given, the members of the special cavalry board now touring Europe and the available Military Attachés at London and Paris will be ordered to the scene at once.

None of the military attendants assigned by foreign nations to accompany the belligerent troops in the Balkan war has been allowed to get to the front so far, but the War Department desires to take advantage of the probable immediate conclusions of hostilities to send experts over the fields before details are forgotten. Even after the forces have been withdrawn, it is said observers may study the ground with profit.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA ARE NEAR A BREAK

Servians and Montenegrins Give Further Offense by Occupying Alessio.

THREATENING NOTE IS SENT

Austria Demands a Precise Reply to All the Questions at Issue—Servians Deny Alleged Cruelties.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The Vienna correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs under yesterday's date:

"There are indications to-night that the situation between Austria and Servia, which has been growing steadily worse from day to day, is nearing a climax.

"Despite the urgent request of the Austrian Government to be allowed to enter into communication with its Consul, Herr Prochaska, at Prisrend, the Servian Government has hitherto taken no steps to re-establish connection between the Consul and his Government, and up to this afternoon had made no reply to the representations of Foreign Minister von Berchtold.

"Unless satisfaction is forthcoming very soon the Vienna Cabinet will take energetic steps at Belgrade, at the same time making it clear to the Servian Premier that it can brook no further delay.

"In the meanwhile, though every effort continues to be made in official circles to represent that the situation is not yet critical, it is clear that the Austro-Hungarian official world, now at Budapest, is fully prepared for things to take the worst possible turn.

"The Emperor to-day received Count von Berchtold, and afterward Gen. von Schemua, head of the General Staff, who also had a long audience with the Duke of Avarna, the Italian Ambassador.

"The Narody Listy, a Prague newspaper, reports that the Emperor said to a highly placed personage at Budapest yesterday: 'We are for peace, but not for peace at any price. We cannot put up with everything.'"

According to a telegram from Budapest to The Morning Post, a rumor was current there last night that Austria-Hungary would to-morrow mobilize three army corps. On the other hand, Die Zeit's report of an ultimatum is not confirmed.

Count von Berchtold's new statement to the Hungarian Delegation yesterday regarding Servia's remissness in not answering either Austria's note about her Adriatic harbor policy or the Austrian demand for free intercourse with Consul Prochaska at Prisrend was noticeably sharper than his speech on Monday.

A Berlin dispatch to The Daily Telegraph indicates that Germany continues to hold back her ally, while a Rome telegram to The Morning Post suggests that Italy, despite the secret treaty entered into with Austria as to the Adriatic some years ago, will not give Austria unlimited support. Premier Giolitti has no desire, it is said, to bind Italy to follow the Austrian policy on the Servian question, and as the Premier has been since the war in Tripoli began the real director of Italy's foreign policy, and his word is law, it is obvious that the Italian Government will do what he desires.

A noticeable modification of the language of the Italian semi-official press in the last three or four days is regarded as proof of this change of front. Don Leone Caetani, Prince di Teano, has joined in the chorus of opposition to Austria's policy as to Albania. After describing the present war as the final triumph of European civilization over the last vestiges of Asiatic barbarism on the Continent, he says:

"The one discordant voice is that of Austria, the eternal trampler upon right and freedom."

Addressing Premier Giolitti and the Foreign Minister, the Marquis di San Giuliano, he warns them thus:

"If they have committed the grave error of compromising themselves in favor of Austria's policy of unjust aggression they would do well to reflect that all Italy is solid with the Serbs against Austria. The anti-Austrian sentiment which slumbers in even the mildest Italian is raised to-day with disquieting unanimity. Will those two statesmen dare to face the whole people? For us Italians a Servian or Bulgarian Albania is a guarantee against Austrian ambitions, while an autonomous Albania, Mussulman, savage, anarchical and opposed to all progress, as it would be, would mean leaving the door wide open to the Austrian peril and would be a constant menace to the peace of Europe and the interests of Italy."

RIEKA, Montenegro, Nov. 19.—A combined army of Servian and Montenegrin troops to-day occupied the town of Alessio, Albania, near the Adriatic Coast.

Alessio has been the chief source of supply for the besieged Turkish garrison of Scutari. Although only a small place of 3,000 inhabitants, its possession is of great importance.

The Montenegrin and Servian armies met before Alessio yesterday afternoon. The combined forces then delivered an assault of such fierceness on the Turkish garrison that the Turks in the evening hoisted the white flag.

The Servian and Montenegrin troops entered the town to-day. Their losses were inconsiderable.

BUDAPEST, Nov. 19.—Vice Admiral Monte-Cuccoli, Commander in Chief of the Austrian Navy, in discussing the naval estimates before the Austrian Delegation to-day, emphasized the necessity of strengthening the navy, because, he said, he was convinced that strong navies would soon appear in the Aegean Sea. Austria, he declared, must be prepared for whatever might happen.

VIENNA, Nov. 19.—Ismail Komal Bey, the Albanian leader, left Trieste by steamer to-day for Durazzo, where the Albanians intend to proclaim their independence and establish a Provisional Government before the entry of the Servian troops.

BELGRADE, Nov. 19.—A semi-official statement denounces as unfounded the reports of cruelties perpetrated by the Servian troops on the Albanians, which, it declares, "are spread for the purpose of supporting the Albanian aspirations." The statement continues:

"During the fighting, measures which may have been severe were adopted, owing to the treacherous attitude of the Albanian combatants, who in many cases raised the white flag in token of surrender and then traitorously murdered Servian officers who approached them.

"Moreover, the Albanians terrorized the inhabitants of the villages and burned the houses. We did not proclaim their misdeeds at the time, because the attention of Europe was then centred on the events of the war."

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 19.—The statement issued in Athens that Russia had recognized as definite the Greek occupation of Salonika is officially denied here to-day.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The occupation of Alessio by the combined Servian and Montenegrin Armies, giving them another foothold on the Adriatic Sea, is considered in diplomatic circles likely to add fuel to the flames of the Austro-Servian dispute, which have again blazed up in a critical way.

The Austro-Hungarian Government has sent a sharp note to the Servian Government, demanding a precise reply to all the questions at issue. According to the Zeit, the note was distinctly threatening in tone. The paper adds:

"Vigorous military measures will give emphasis to the diplomatic demands should Servia's answer again be unsatisfactory."

Some papers assert that Servia is preparing to concentrate her main force on the Austrian frontier.

Diplomatic circles do not exclude the possibility that Servia, relying on the sympathies of the Slavs in Austria-Hungary and on the support of her Balkan allies, may challenge an issue.

BULGARIAN-GREEK FRICTION.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—According to a telegram from Salonika to The Times, the relations between the Bulgarian and Greek Armies are far from amicable, and the fact that more serious developments have not occurred is due to the pacific intervention of M. Stancioff, the Bulgarian Minister at Paris, who is attached to the suite of Crown Prince Boris.

The correspondent relates that when the Bulgarians on Nov. 9 sent an envoy to Salonika to demand the surrender of the city it was found that the Greeks were already in possession. The Greeks refused to allow the Bulgarians to enter the town, with the result that Crown Prince Boris and his brother, Prince Cyril, were obliged to sleep under the bridge at Aivali.

An ultimatum was then sent to the Greeks, who were given to understand that the Bulgarians intended to enter the town by force, with the result that the Greeks abandoned their opposition. A contingent went in directly after King George, having been kept outside twenty-four hours.

The Greeks express discontent with the actions of the Bulgarians in the town after the occupation by themselves, but the Bulgarians say they were on the spot and could have entered at the same time as their allies. They also complain of the actions of the Greeks in hoisting only the Greek flag, issuing proclamations in the name of King George only, ignoring the Bulgarian language in their proclamations, and not providing barrack accommodation—in short, in acting as if the town belonged to them.

Relations were further complicated by the action of the Greek authorities in seizing a locomotive while it was being driven from Seres by a Bulgarian officer and in placing sentries to guard the railway to Seres, which town is occupied by the Bulgarians.

In consequence of these proceedings the Bulgarians have addressed an official note to the Greeks demanding the release of the locomotive and the recall of the sentries under threats of disarming the sentries by force.

Another incident arose from an attempt of the Greeks at the Mosque of St. Sophia, of which the Bulgarians have taken possession in order to provide accommodation for their troops. The Greeks interpreted this as indicating a desire on the part of their allies to dedicate the Mosque to the Bulgarian Church. The Bulgarians were forced on two occasions to drive Greek troops away.

MAY QUARREL OVER MONASTIR.

Allies Did Not Decide Which State Was to Have the City.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—A Belgrade dispatch to The Standard says that in the three days' fighting at Monastir the losses were 20,000, of which number 5,000 were Turks.

The war spoils were enormous and are estimated to be worth $10,000,000. They include 100,000 rifles of the latest pattern, eighty-two wagons of ammunition, and sixteen heavy guns. The lack of artillery, most of which was lost on the retreat from Kumanova, greatly handicapped the Turkish resistance.

King Peter, says the dispatch, may make a triumphal entry into Monastir, as the Servians wish to emphasize their occupation.

The question as to which State was to possess that city was not included in the allies' convention. Bulgaria may claim it because it is situated predominantly in the Bulgarian district. The Greeks point out that the leading part of the population is of Greek nationality. Crown Prince Constantine, with the Greek Army, will enter the town.

A dispatch to The Daily Express from Belgrade says the capture of Monastir has provided a difficult problem for the Servian Government, which is puzzled about housing and feeding the 40,000 prisoners.

"Fethi Pasha, who was among those that surrendered," continues the correspondent, "was Turkey's popular Minister at Belgrade. He wept as he handed his sword to the Servian commander. Luxurious apartments await him when he is brought to Belgrade."

BELGRADE, No. 19.—The Turkish casualties were enormous in the three days' desperate fighting prior to the fall of Monastir. They are reported to have reached a total of 10,000.

The Servian Government feels that with the fall of Monastir the work of the Servian armies in Macedonia can be regarded as completed. In one month they have swept the Turks out of Old Servia and captured booty worth many millions of dollars.

King Peter will make a triumphal entry into Monastir in a few days. Decoration of the streets to welcome him has begun already.

KING PETER SERIOUSLY ILL.

Caught Cold at Uskub—May Be in Bed Several Weeks.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The Austrian Cabinet is disposed to await Servia's reply until King Peter has returned to Belgrade from Uskub, according to a Vienna dispatch to The Daily Mail.

The King, who caught a cold on his way to a Te Deum service at Uskub, is seriously ill, it is added, and his return to the capital may be postponed indefinitely.

The attending physicians think he may be confined to bed for several weeks.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—M. Stéphane Lauzanne, in an article in the Matin, gives details of the difficulties encountered in inducing ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid to leave Salonika aboard the German guardship Lorelei.

At first he flatly refused, but when the commander of the Lorelei in the gorgeous uniform of the German Navy was ushered into his presence, the Sultan's tone of defiance changed.

"I have every confidence," he said, "in the loyalty and friendship of the Kaiser. Under such auspices I will follow you all over the world."

The ex-Sultan provided a surprise to those aboard the ship. It was generally supposed that he had fallen into a condition bordering on idiocy, but he displayed instead a remarkably accurate knowledge of affairs.

Moreover, although Abdul all through life was never known to speak twenty words of French, always declaring himself ignorant of the language, he began to speak French not only with accuracy, but with an extraordinarily good accent.

"Deux guerres malheureuses dans la même année. C'est beaucoup," ("Two bad wars in the same year. That is a good deal,") he remarked.

He was very curious to know whether Sir Conan Doyle was still amusing the world with the exploits of Sherlock Holmes. These stories were the only ones that ever appealed to him.

"Conan Doyle," he said, "would have made a magnificent Chief of Police."

He begged the commander of the Lorelei to convey his personal remembrances and thanks to Emperor William for the consideration and attention shown him on the voyage, and gave each officer either a diamond pin or a gold cigarette case, studded with diamonds.

When the voyage ended at Beyler-Bey, Abdul refused to occupy the palace itself, the place which in days gone by had sheltered an Empress of France, but decided to be installed in the small pavilion adjoining it.

Then once again relapsing into silence and appearing entirely indifferent to all around him, he became absorbed in thought. This spell did not last long, for soon he began to take an interest in the fowls and turkeys in the courtyard below, and called for some corn to feed them.

On learning that one of the officers of the guard for whom he had a certain liking had been called away to his sick wife, he remarked dryly on hearing of the man's distress:

"Ah, well, the poor fellow has only one wife. What would he do if he had ten, as I have?"

NOTED MEN AID SERVIAN FUNDS.

Mme. Grouitch to Visit Other Universities to Further Cause.

Mme. Slavko Grouitch, wife of the Servian Minister to England, who has been in this country a month to raise funds for the relief of the suffering soldiers and non-combatants in the Balkan war zone, returned yesterday from a trip to Washington, Baltimore, and Princeton. In all of these places she obtained the coöperation of prominent persons, including Cardinal Gibbons, President Hibben of Princeton, and Mrs. Grover Cleveland. Her mission was so successful, she said last night in her apartment at the Stratford House, 11 East Thirty-second Street, that she will go next to Yale, Harvard, and the University of Wisconsin to enlist further aid from students and alumni of these universities.

There are really two separate funds which Mme. Grouitch is furthering. One is for specific use among wounded and destitute Servians by the Circle of Sisters, an organization in which every woman in Servia is enlisted. Mme. Grouitch's own sister-in-law, according to a letter received yesterday, has assumed the rôle of a nurse in the Belgrade Hospital and is one of the leading workers in the Circle of Sisters. The larger fund, however, is turned over to the Red Cross, and it is this fund which Mme. Grouitch hopes to enlarge by her extensive travels.

"Our many victories over the Turks," said Mme. Grouitch last night, "are apt to create the impression that the Balkan States have everything their own way, and that they are not in need of everything. Just the opposite is true, however. Money was never needed more. With the coming of Winter the worst can be expected, and starvation is looking hundreds of thousands in the face. The Servian Red Cross needs food supplies, medicine, and clothing, and anything will be accepted with gratitude."

This is Cardinal Gibbons's letter, received yesterday:

Madame Slavko Grouitch,
New York City.

Dear Madame Grouitch—I beg to assure you that I am heartily in sympathy with your humane mission to this country to obtain assistance from the Red Cross in behalf of the sufferers and wounded in the Balkan war, and I sincerely trust that the American Red Cross will do all in its power to assist in alleviating their suffering. Wishing you success, I beg to remain,

Most faithfully yours,
J. CARDINAL GIBBONS,
Archbishop of Baltimore.

GRAND VIZIER ON CONDITIONS.

Cables Oscar Straus That Cholera Is Doing More Than Enemies.

Kiamil Pasha, the Turkish Grand Vizier, cabled from Constantinople on Nov. 17 to Oscar S. Straus, former American Ambassador to Turkey, that Constantinople was being successfully defended against the Balkan allies. The cablegram was in reply to a message from Mr. Straus, as the representative of American missionary societies in New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, asking the needs of sufferers from the war in and about the Turkish capital. The message from the Grand Vizier is as follows:

> Forced to an unjust war before accomplishing our mobilization. Enemies conquered most of Rumelia. Defending successfully Constantinople at Tchatalja. Atrocities and massacres obliged thousand of Mohammedan families to emigrate. Dreadful misery followed. Cholera doing more harm than enemies. Thousand thanks for endeavoring to help sufferers.

The missionary societies represented by Mr. Straus are raising funds for the sufferers on both sides.

SHOCK IN GUNMEN'S HAUNTS.

Lower Second Avenue Still Hopes for a Way Out.

Lower Second Avenue and all the haunts and byways of the city where guns are carried as naturally as walking sticks on Fifth Avenue, were filled last evening with whispered expressions of surly resentment. Four of its men had done away with a fifth. Here the city had been in a hubbub about it. And in the end a jury had actually found the four guilty of murder in the first degree and the four would be sentenced to die in the electric chair. Second Avenue said it was going a little too far.

Hitherto, in the experience of the Zelig clan, a killing was the cue for a little circumspection, a little guardedness, a little revenge, or, at most, a little disappearance for awhile. For almost the first time in the history of that particular gang of gunmen, there loomed up a new and interesting hope and refuge in an institution called the Court of Appeals. There was a lot of talk about the Court of Appeals in Second Avenue last night.

They were a little cloudy on the subject, but very determined that the murder quartet should have a new trial.

"How much do you think a new trial would cost us?" one of the gangsters asked last evening. The one questioned hazarded $50,000. Whereat the gangster actually laughed with relief.

"Is that all?" he exclaimed. "Why, we can raise that overnight. We are ready to put $200,000 down on the table for the bunch any time it's called for."

This confidence that money would flow freely in behalf of the four men who killed Herman Rosenthal was based to no small extent on the feeling that has taken firm hold of the underworld—the feeling that Becker's fate depends on the fate of the gunmen. The gangsters cannot think of the once powerful Lieutenant as really shorn of his power. They cannot believe that an influential portion of the Police Department is not back of him and ready to help him out when the time is ripe.

Strangely enough, there is very little hostility to District Attorney Whitman expressed among these men. They look upon that official's activity as more or less part of a big game, which he played squarely and which he won.

After the shock of Becker's own conviction the Zelig crowd was more or less prepared for the conviction of three of the gunmen, but their faith in alibis was rudely shaken by the conviction of "Dago Frank."

"Why," one of them asked, "should the jury swallow all that stuff that Rose and Webber handed out, and then turn down the stories told by the boys' witnesses? I don't know what the courts in this city are coming to."

BECKER DOESN'T KNOW VERDICT

Will Learn of Conviction When Gunmen Join Him.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Warden Kennedy was asked this afternoon whether Charles Becker had been informed of the fate of the four gunmen, and he answered that Becker had received no information and would not until the four men were brought to the prison. It was against the rules of the prison, said the Warden, for a condemned man to receive any news as to what was going on in the outside world. When the four men were brought here and placed in the death house, the Warden added, Becker would quickly learn of their presence, as news of a new arrival spreads quickly.

Becker will not be able to see the four men, but if they want to talk to each other the rules of the death house do not prevent their doing so.

unable to realize that the immunity which they had always enjoyed had failed them at last. When they crossed the Bridge of Sighs yesterday morning to take their seats behind the counsel table to listen to Justice Goff charge the jury "Gyp" and "Lefty" smoked cigarettes and sauntered along with as confident an air as though they had fore knowledge of what the verdict would be. "Whitey" and Cirofici were equally jaunty and confident.

Quick to Blame the Charge.

But as they listened to the words of Justice Goff their expressions changed, and when they were led back to their cells at 1:38, after Justice Goff had concluded and the jury had departed for the consultation room, declaring that they did not wish to go to lunch, the gunmen walked with drooped heads. Later, when they had heard the verdict and realized that their only hope of life lay in a new trial, "Lefty," speaking for all of them, declared:

"When we heard Goff we knew it was all off. We were certain we would be acquitted before that, but when we got back here after listening to him we threw up our hands. He ordered our conviction and the jury obeyed orders. We knew that they would."

The conviction of the gunmen was one of the most rapid on record. The jury left the courtroom at 1:38 o'clock and it probably was a few minutes later before they began to deliberate. It was only 2:03 o'clock when they sent word to Justice Goff that they had reached a verdict, and allowing them only five minutes to compose themselves to a consideration of their verdict, the jurors employed only twenty minutes in determining on a conviction for murder in the first degree. The fact that they declined the proposal to go to luncheon before beginning their deliberations, and that they refused to have sandwiches brought in to them was recognized at once as a bad omen for the gunmen.

The gunmen, looking serious and thoughtful, were led into the room, each man under escort of two deputy Sheriffs, while five uniformed policemen marched close to them. It was evident that Justice Goff meant to allow no opportunity for the least disorder. The prisoners took their places this time at the rail behind the counsel table instead of in the chairs they usually occupied, and there they stood for a moment or two until there came a loud rap as Mr. Kierney announced the arrival of the Justice, and then Justice Goff ascended the bench, bowed to the jury, and took his seat.

District Attorney Whitman, Assistant District Attorneys Moss and Rubin, as well as Messrs. Wahle and Kringel, were in their places when William Penny, the white-haired clerk of the court, rose, and facing the jury, said: "Gentlemen, please answer to your names."

As he read the twelve names the jurors answered "Here," and they answered in low tones, scarcely audible. Their faces were a little pale and most of them were set and expressionless as though each man was striving to conceal his feelings. Leo Kramer, Juror No. 2, smiled nervously. The face of the foreman, William H. Montgomery, was white.

When the last man had answered Penny hesitated a moment and then said: "Gentlemen, please rise." The jurors arose with a shuffling of feet and almost every eye in the courtroom except those of the gunmen were fixed on them. "Gyp" and "Lefty" never looked in their direction but kept their eyes straight ahead of them. Frank and "Whitey" glanced at the jurors somewhat nervously, especially "Whitey," who grasped the rail in front of him as though for support. Frank stood so erect that he seemed to have stiffened and braced himself for a shock, while only "Gyp" and "Lefty" stood calmly and apparently at ease. And then the deep-throated voice of Penny rang out with the customary phrase:

"Jurors, look upon the defendants. Defendants look upon the jurors. Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

Even "Gyp" and "Lefty" looked now and "Whitey" seemed on the point of collapse, and Mr. Montgomery, speaking apparently with difficulty and in quite a low tone, responded: "We have."

"How say you? Do you find the defendants guilty or not guilty?" boomed out the voice of Clerk Penny.

It seemed as though the gunmen leaned forward a trifle to catch the next words and they came, quietly but not haltingly, as Mr. Montgomery said:

"We find the defendants guilty."

"Gyp" raised his left hand and in a curious posture scratched the right side of his nose with his thumb. "Whitey" swayed a little, while "Dago Frank" peered straight ahead of him as if he had not heard the words. "Lefty" snatched a silk handkerchief from his pocket and dried his lips, turning with a whisper to "Gyp" as he did so. "Gyp" gazed at him earnestly an instant, as though in dread that "Lefty" was going to break down, and then he smiled sarcastically. Meantime Mr. Penny, continuing the usual form, had demanded:

"Harken to your verdict as it stands recorded. You say you find the defendants guilty of murder in the first degree as charged in the indictment?"

"We do," responded Mr. Montgomery, and then the clerk asked if the verdict applied "as to each" and "as to all," and several jurors joined Mr. Montgomery as he replied that it did.

Mr. Wahle, whose face had gone white as he heard the verdict, arose and asked Justice Goff if he might reserve making the customary motions at that time.

"I will hear them to-morrow morning at 10:30 o'clock," replied Justice Goff, and Penny called out: "Remanded until 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning."

Crowd Wild with Curiosity.

No other person in the room was allowed to leave until Justice Goff had discharged the jury, with the thanks of the court, and they had been escorted out by several court attendants and policemen to a waiting sight-seeing automobile, in which they were taken to the Murray Hill, there to collect their clothes and later to depart for their homes. But they did not escape from the building without running the gauntlet of a curious crowd of several hundred persons.

Meantime from the building had run a screaming girl, her new blue chinchilla coat flying behind her in the wind, her hat awry, and tears streaming down her cheeks. It was little Mrs. "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, the eighteen-year-old bride of one of the gunmen, and as she ran her sister ran with her, fending off the curious who crowded on either side of the girl asking her how she felt, what she thought of the verdict, and other cruel questions. The girls escaped their persecutors at last and disappeared.

The police charged the mob on the stairs. They formed a cordon around the gunmen and hustled them along to the opening of the Bridge of Sighs, and in what was actually less than a minute, though it seemed five, the gumen had passed from view.

The conviction of the gunmen places the freedom of Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps only a few days off. In fact, they will be liberated as soon as their counsel ask it, and this may be to-day or to-morrow. By the terms of their stipulations, the District Attorney agreed to release them at the conclusion of the trial of issues arising from the blanket indictment which names Becker, the gunmen, Sullivan and Shapiro. Five of these seven have been tried, Shapiro is to be released without trial, and the informers will scarcely be needed in Sullivan's trial, and if they are, they have promised to be on hand. Mr. Whitman explained yesterday that there remained nothing for him to do but release the men.

"My word is pledged," said Mr. Whitman. "I do not think a lawyer can be fair to himself and still contend that an indictment remains alive after there has been a trial and conviction. I have been advised to keep the informers in jail until the matter of appeals from these decisions is settled, but I do not see how I could do that and be honest to myself. I pledged my word, and I intend to make it good."

The District Attorney realized that he had been subjected to criticism hitherto for having accepted the confessions of the informers, and consequently permitted them to escape punishment, and once more yesterday he called attention to the fact that only the granting of immunity to three men had made it possible to convict five, and that but for his adoption of this course there probably would have been no one ever convicted for Rosenthal's death.

It will require only the discharge by Coroner Feinberg to set Rose, Webber, and Vallon at liberty, but Schepps must stand trial for vagrancy. He has been held from week to week for several months on this charge, and now he will be allowed to go to trial. It was suggested yesterday that it might be amusing if the dapper Schepps were found to be a vagrant in the eyes of the law and were sent to jail for several months.

The District Attorney has little fear of the results of keeping his word with the informers. He could arrest them immediately as material witnesses, but he has admitted that he will not do this, feeling that it would be a violation of his agreement with the men, in spirit if not in letter. However, Rose, Webber, and Vallon all have agreed to remain within reach, and even have offered to put up bonds for their appearance when they may be needed.

There was excitement throughout the District Attorney's office yesterday over the result of the trial, but it was not a circumstance to the excitement in the cells of the gunmen in the Tombs. There, late in the afternoon, they received the newspaper men.

The gunmen were not frightened. Such terror as they might have felt in the few instants that they listened to the verdict had long since departed. They were not frightened, but they were angry. Their words came tumbling out one on top of the other as they told their opinions of Justice Goff, of Mr. Moss, and of the conduct of their trial. They were bitter against the Justice and their prosecutor, and "Whitey" exclaimed:

"Why they're no better than murderers to send us up. The jury would have convicted a priest after listening to that charge."

"We didn't have a fair show, but we'll prove our innocence when we get a new trial before some one other than Goff," was the consensus of opinion among the men.

New Experience for Them.

But as they spoke of the injustice of their trial and its outcome it was apparent that the men could scarcely realize that they had been convicted. Even as they had listened to the verdict they had seemed not to recognize that it meant for them the end practically of all things, that nothing but a successful appeal could save them from the death chair. And the reason for it was clear, too. Throughout their short careers as gangsters and gunmen they had seen the operation of underworld influences. They had seen men in trouble plucked out of that trouble by the exercise of "pull." They themselves had been saved more than once from the consequences of their acts, and apparently it had never entered their heads that they were not to be so saved again. That they had not been was a blow such as never before had they experienced, and it had left them stunned and for the moment incapable of realizing their position.

For some reason they refused to admit that the testimony of Shapiro had damaged them, and their very reluctance to admit a fact which was apparent to every one who listened to the testimony raised the question as to whether Shapiro had not been telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and whether they had not recognized it and were trying to bolster their own courage by denying its value.

As to what one person had injured their cause most the gunmen were not in accord. "Gyp" and "Lefty" agreed that Rose had given the most damaging testimony. "Whitey" thought Moss had done them the most harm when he advised the jury to show their freedom of fear of the gunmen and to bring in a verdict which should prove that they were no cowards. Cirofici was inclined to think Justice Goff's charge had been more harmful than anything else.

"Were we surprised at the verdict?" repeated Cirofici in answer to a question. "Why, before that charge we had our grips packed. That's how surprised we were."

Then he showed a letter from Jean Gordon telling him that she was praying for him every night, and that she expected to have him with her soon. "Dago Frank" spoke of his love for the girl and of how he had expected to marry her.

"Goff lied when he told the jury I didn't leave the gang at Webber's the night of the murder to go see Jean," he exclaimed. "Why, I left those fellows every night when I was having the time of my life at Rockaway to be with Jean."

"Lefty," usually the most calm of the group, was slightly excited yesterday, and it was "Gyp," his cell mate, who showed the least worry. "Lefty" declared that Shapiro's testimony had been bought and paid for with $5,000 of Webber's money. "Gyp" assailed the integrit of the District Attorney's office.

He said that a year ago when he had been arrested for stealing money and rings from women in a disorderly resort he had paid his lawyer $1,300, and that the case against him had been dropped. Afterward, he said, his lawyer told him he had split the money with a representative of the District Attorney's office.

So far as their own fate was concerned the gunmen seemed resigned to it. It was their families to whom they referred constantly.

"It ain't our lives," said "Whitey." "It's the lives of our folks, our fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers."

"That's right," chimed in "Dago Frank." "I wouldn't be surprised if you were to go to my home to-morrow and find my mother dead. Such news as this might kill her. Why, what would we want to commit murder for? Think it over. 'Gyp' and 'Lefty' have young wives. 'Whitey' and I have families, and I was going to be married. What would we take a chance like that for?"

"Why should I," shouted "Lefty" from the next cell, "why should I kill a man for $250? Why, I've got more than twice that much in the bank, and I've got jewelry worth $1,000. I could always get a couple of hundred from my father when I needed it."

"Lefty's" father was in the court building all day yesterday. He wandered back and forth along the corridors barred from the room by Justice Goff's orders that no relatives should be admitted, and it was pathetic to see the man hang on the words of those who came from the court room, striving to catch something favorable to his son. When the verdict was announced he hurried from the building with no show of emotion, but those who watched him realized that he was hurrying to his home to tell his wife the awful news.

The gunmen will be arraigned in court once more this morning, when Mr. Wahle will make the customary motions, and then it is expected that Justice Goff will remand them to the Tombs for one week before their sentence.

JUSTICE GOFF'S CHARGE.

Finds the Case Unique in That Defendants Accused Their Accusers.

Justice Goff began his charge at exactly 10:30 o'clock, and spoke in a voice almost inaudible at first, which grew stronger as he spoke. He said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, considerable effort has been made in this court in behalf of and against these defendants, and I must thank counsel for the defendants for the way they have conducted this trial. There have been no clashes; counsel did not in any way divert your attention. The case has been presented to you. Now you are called on to weigh the evidence and deliberate on the guilt or innocence of the defendants."

Justice Goff went on to say that the jurors had been selected by both sides, and whatever might be the verdict, no criticism could attach to the jurors, since each side had expressed its satisfaction with their qualifications.

"You will please bear in mind, gentlemen of the jury," went on Justice Goff, "that what I say of one of the defendants applies to all. In one particular instance I will make a particular exception. I will now present to you the issue of the case, for these defendants were indicted and they entered a plea of not guilty."

Justice Goff continued: "They are charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal on the 16th of July. There is no question here that Herman Rosenthal was murdered. The people of the State assert that these four defendants did the shooting.

"I shall explain in skeleton form the testimony of both sides without favor or prejudice."

Justice Goff took up the testimony of the defense, briefly reviewing that of the gunmen themselves, who were the first witnesses to testify. Coming up to July 15, Justice Goff touched on the visit of Rose, Vallon, and Schepps to the Seventh Avenue flat, and the trip of "Dago Frank" with them to Webber's place. He then told of the trip by "Whitey," "Gyp," and "Lefty" to Webber's following his 'phone call to their hangout, at Seventy-sixth Street and Second Avenue, and of the subsequent murder. Justice Goff continued:

"We have a unique situation here. The prosecution—through Rose and other witnesses, but particularly Rose, Webber, and Vallon, and to a certain extent Schepps—says to these four defendants, 'Herman Rosenthal was murdered, and you are the murderers.' The defendants say, 'We admit he was murdered, but you are the murderers,' so that the accused here accuse their accusers.

Did Rose Tell the Truth?

"Take the testimony of Rose. He admitted that he was an agent and had got the men who performed the murder. Gentlemen, that is the remarkable situation. Take Rose's manner and carefully examine him. Do you believe Rose was the man who actually shot Rosenthal? Do you believe there is any foundation but truth in his charge against these defendants?

"Bear in mind, gentlemen, that Rose did not say he saw these men shoot Rosenthal. He testified he laid down on a couch in Webber's poker parlors. He did not see the shooting.

"Would he have stopped short before the culmination of the plot by lying down and failing to take a position where he could see the prisoners actually do the shooting? These comments are made without any prejudice on either side of the case."

Justice Goff recited the contention of the defense that the gunmen had been lured to the Metropole that the murder might be laid at their door, and demanded:

"If the defendant's contention is true that Rose and his companions shot Rosenthal, would Rose have invited them around to the Metropole to see the shooting. Is it reasonable? Is it conceivable? The testimony of other witnesses bear upon this. It is for you to weigh this phase of the case and see if there is corroboration.

"Consider one moment the testimony about the physical facts surrounding the case. Dr. Schultze said that in his opinion the bullets struck Rosenthal from the right and that the bullet wounds were powder marked and that the shots were fired three inches from the head. Not one of these defendants says that he saw Rosenthal at all though they saw the slayers. You must weigh all this and find if they told the truth when they said they saw and heard shots but did not see Herman Rosenthal shot nor see him fall.

"If you compare the testimony of the witness for the prosecution and for the defense on this point you will notice a wide discrepency and contradiction. The testimony of Luban is in one way contradicted. It is true that Luban was once convicted of a crime, and there has been some testimony that he was in his brother's house that night, but you must weigh the evidence and find if he saw the shooting of Herman Rosenthal or not.

"Next, Krause, the waiter. He was, so far as the evidence goes, a stranger to Rosenthal and the four defendants. He swears that 'Whitey,' 'Lefty,' and 'Gyp' fired at Rosenthal. Is there anything in his testimony that shows he testified falsely against the defendants? He is from a strange land, a man in humble life. He had nothing to gain in giving false testimony. He declined to make a positive identification of Frank. If he was reckless and unreliable would he have stopped at the identification of one.

"Take in his maner of testifying and find if this man swore falsely or told the truth. Concerning the alibi defending Cirofici, an alibi means that a man need not defend himself himself against a crime if he presents evidence that he was not at the scene of the crime, and if it be a complete alibi then it is the most perfect of defenses.

"Alibis should receive very careful consideration. Take the alibi of Frank, he left the others, he says, at Webber's poker room. It must be borne in mind that he came from 145th Street with Rose, Vallon, and Schepps to Webbers. He says he went there to meet the others. They bear him out. The language and the actions of the four defendants must be taken into consideration, and the similarity of their stories when judging their stories.

"According to the testimony of Frank, he said: 'I thought I would go home as I had not seen Jean Gordon for two days. So I went home because I was afraid Jean would think I was boozing.'

"Gyp testified that Frank said: 'Youse say you are going to see those two cops. As a matter of fact you will be boozing all night. I am going home and see Jean.'

"Whitey says Frank said: 'Boys I am going home, I haven't seen Jean for days.'

"Lefty said, Frank said: "I haven't seen Jean for days and she will be worried and I am going home.' That is their testimony.

"If this statement made by Frank to the other defendants is true it is for you to infer. The only witnesses to corroborate his alibi are co-defendants. There is no other witnesses to say that Frank was not present at the shooting.

"Frank said he left the Seventh Avenue house for the express purpose of meeting with the other defendants, officers Steinert and White, who were to convince them of the Zelig frame-up. Was it important to ascertain from the lips of those officers anything of Zelig or the frame-up?

"The other three started from the poker parlors to go around and see those two men, and went around to Forty-third Street after Frank left. Are those statements true or the result of pre-arrangement? You are to judge that alibi and see if these things were interposed by pre-arrangement."

Justice Goff then read the definitions of murder and manslaughter in the first and second degrees, and defined as that of accomplices the status of Rose, Webber, and Vallon.

Justice Goff said a verdict in any one of the four degrees he mentioned might be found, but he called the attention of the jury to the fact that they must exercise their discretion with the greatest care, adding:

"A jury that allows itself to be swayed by emotion or to be swerved from its sworn duty by any other cause is a menace to the laws of our land."

A. LEWISOHN GIVES $100,000 TO ORPHANS

JAMES SPEYER GIVES $15,000

Trustees at Dinner Present Loving Cup to Mr. Lewisohn for Past Work for Children.

Adolph Lewisohn was the guest of his fellow trustees of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, at a dinner at Delmonico's last night. Mr. Lewisohn is President of the society and in the course of his speech announced that he would give $100,000 for the work the society is carrying on.

Some fifty men gathered about a large oval table for the dinner. In the course of introducing the guest of honor, Henry Wollman, the toastmaster, said:

He then read a telegram from the children of the cottage homes at Pleasantville, signed by the Presidents of the Boys and Girls' Republic, extending their congratulations to Mr. Lewisohn.

After the toastmaster's introduction the diners drank a standing toast and sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." Then Mr. Lewisohn, visibly touched, rose to make his address.

"I suppose I ought to say that this is the happiest moment of my life, but I can't say it, because when I said the very same thing only a month ago a friend, who read about it in the newspapers wrote me that he thought the time I got married was the happiest moment of my life. Well, this is one of the happiest moments.

"I feel that we have a very good board—they are all here, so I can't very well say anything else. But our board has not been a very successful money getter. We have only taken care of 500 children, but we ought to have from six to eight cottages more, and will need $300,000 more to get things in shape. We are building now an infirmary and a hospital for contagious diseases.

"As $300,000 is necessary, I think we ought to start right off to do so. I am willing to give $100,000, but with a string to it, namely, that that other $200,000 shall come forth. If they don't, I won't. Every giver of at least $15,000 can name a cottage—till the supply is exhausted. The price may go higher in the near future. I can say that one gentleman has already handed me a check for $15,000."

The donor referred to was James Speyer.

After Mr. Lewisohn's speech, Jacob H. Schiff was introduced, and said:

"This is entirely unexpected. I felt very honored to receive an invitation to this dinner. I knew it would be a dinner of love. When I reflected how a man like Adolph Lewisohn would give so readily, or as the toastmaster well expressed it, how he had so many happy moments, I found the answer. Mr. Lewisohn's goodness comes from the Jewish heart. How could he help it? Mr. Lewisohn's heart is ready to listen to Jew or gentile, European or American. His heart embraces the heart of mankind. I see a great deal of jealousy and envy and backbiting of those who have great wealth, but never any of Mr. Lewisohn. I have never heard anything but praise of the manner in which he gives."

After a talk by Dr. L. B. Bernstein, Superintendent of the society's cottage system, in which he pleaded for a limited number of children, and explained the problems that confronted the society, Joseph L. Buttenwieser presented a silver loving cup to Mr. Lewisohn on behalf of the Board of Trustees.

Oscar S. Straus, who is also a Director of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, added his tribute.

"We may divide benefactions into three different grades," he said. "One is charity, the other humanity; the third is benevolence. Benevolence is helping others to help themselves. The giving of stadiums is real benevolence."

At the end of the speeches a handsome silver centrepiece filled with roses was presented to Mr. Buttenwieser for his successful work as Chairman of the Building Committee.

Other guests present were Henry Morgenthau, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, James Speyer, Arthur Sachs, Jefferson Seligman, Joseph H. Wise, Edward Lauterbach, Herbert H. Lehman, Justice Nathan Bijur, Judge Samuel Greenbaum, Clarence J. Housman, and Benno Neuberger.

MRS. ADRIANCE BREAKS DOWN

Swears Life with Berney Was Torture and Becomes Hysterical.

Demonstrations of grief and anger marked yesterday's hearing before Supreme Court Justice Blanchard of the $50,000 alienation suit brought by James P. Berney, a typewriter machinist, against Benjamin Adriance, the owner of several manufacturing companies in Brooklyn and Utica, N. Y. The day before, Berney, while testifying to his affection for the wife who divorced him in 1903 and married Mr. Adriance in 1908, broke down on the stand. Yesterday Mrs. Adriance, a large, ruddy-faced woman of 45, gave way under the examination of C. R. Bradbury, the attorney for her first husband, and was taken, hysterical, from the courtroom.

"How should I ever have dreamed," sobbed Mrs. Adriance, "that my divorce would ever be questioned after so many years? I thought when I married again that at last God would grant me a little peace, a little happiness, but I was mistaken."

The questions of the lawyer had brought from Mrs. Adriance the story of her life with her first husband. She had characterized her life as a constant torture, and had sworn that even her body had not been spared. When the lawyer carried her along to her second marriage, her nerves gave way, her answers became less and less distinct, more and more interspersed with sobs, until finally she became hysterical.

The case was delayed for nearly an hour while Justice Blanchard heard an account of a fist fight which had taken place between C. R. Bradbury, counsel for the plaintiff, and James P. Berney, the plaintiff's son, the previous afternoon.

Bradbury said that Berney, who has taken his mother's side in the suit, attacked and struck him Monday afternoon as he was crossing Chambers Street. Naturally, he said, he had retaliated. Berney declared that Bradbury had called him insulting names and had thrown a book at him, striking him in the face. As evidence of this he pointed to a bruised eye.

Justice Blanchard seemed to be very angry, and said that such friction would have to cease.

The case will be continued to-day.

Spent $50,000 To Save One Mile.
THE Lackawanna Railroad recently completed a "cut-off" which shortened its line to Buffalo from 411 to 400 miles, at a cost of over a half million dollars. This might sound like extravagance, but is real economy.
The greatest industrial "cut-off" "is Bush Terminal." It cuts insurance, porterage, cartage, light, power, and many other charges, and gives improved manufacturing and distributing facilities all along the line. Nearly 200 successful manufacturers and wholesalers have already moved their plants to the Bush Terminal, and have thereby found themselves on a much more direct line to enlarged business and increased profits.

1.35 for shirts like these is not so much an argument as a club!
¶ Our problem in a sale of this kind is to have you see the merchandise. We are not worrying about selling the shirts. They will sell themselves. What they are immediately in need of is an opportunity to tell their story. They want to break through your indifference to a good thing. They want a five-minute heart-to-heart confabulation with you, in order that they may put their proposition squarely before you.
¶ It is a quality story, punctuated with distinctiveness, variety, and a liberal measure of economy. It is a sale which embraces the newest and most exclusive shirtings for Fall, tailored by a shirt-maker who makes a bid each November for a continuance of our business and of yours, by making a big sacrifice on his wholesale prices, on the theory that the end will justify the means.
¶ The fabrics are domestic and imported cheviots, Madras and percales in plain blues, tans, heliotrope, grays and whites, to say nothing of a host of colored striped effects, with satin stripes mixed in. Plain, pleated and soft bosoms, with starched or turn-back double cuffs. And you ought to see how these shirts are tailored and finished. It will tickle your artistic soul to death to see the practical, workmanlike manner in which this maker handles his products. They are distinctive enough to appeal to the richest taste, and economical enough to accommodate the most reluctant pocket. Neckbands, 14 to 20 inches, the sleeve lengths from 33 to 36.

WILSON INCOGNITO UNDER HEAVY FIRE

MR. WILSON TRIES FLANKING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 19.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson's incognito is evidently in serious danger. He is struggling hard to maintain it against public and official distractions, but circumstances are getting the best of him.

He called to-day upon the Governor of the island, Lieut. Gen. Sir George M. Bullock, in the most informal manner, but it is reported on good authority that Sir George is planning to reciprocate by giving a state dinner in honor of the President-elect, with all the society folk in attendance. If this takes place, Mr. Wilson will have a hard fight to keep from being drawn into the social whirl.

It was probably from fear of just such an outcome that the Governor did not even take his family with him to call on Gen. Bullock, but drove to the official residence with the Secret Service Agent, Richard Taylor, and just dropped in without warning on the General, interrupting a game of tennis. The army officers and their wives abandoned the game and came in to take tea with the Governor General's family and Mr. Wilson.

The President-elect chatted an hour with members of the little party, and then, as if to emphasize the purely casual nature of his call, drove on to visit the widow of Gen. Russell Hastings of Ohio, who was a friend of President McKinley.

Despite the informality of the affair, Gen. Bullock is said to be firmly resolved on giving a fitting social event to mark the President-elect's visit to the island.

In other ways it has been made manifest that Mr. Wilson cannot divest himself entirely of his official status. Although he is an old Winter visitor here and is known to everybody, the residents now regard him with deference as a future ruler, and the old relations are changed. As an example of this, Gov. Wilson has received a letter from the Rev. Dr. Cameron, pastor of the oldest Presbyterian Church on the island, and an old friend, congratulating him on being elected to "the sovereignty of the United States."

Outside of his call upon Gen. Bullock Mr. Wilson did little to-day except rest. He declared that he was actually beginning to forget politics.

SPEYER UNITES LONDON LINES

Long Rumored Consolidation of Railways Is Announced.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Sir Edgar Speyer has completed another stage in the consolidation of interests in the London passenger railway service.

Official announcement was made yesterday confirming the long-rumored amalgamation of the Central London and City and South London Railways with the Underground Electric Railway system and the London United Tramways with the Metropolitan Electric Tramways.

Sir Edgar protests against the suggestion that he is actuated by a desire to monopolize the traffic of London. His policy has two objects in view, he says: First, to improve the traffic facilities and give the public the best and quickest means of communication, and, second, by so developing traffic by giving greater facilities to do the best for the shareholders, who have thus far had very poor returns on their capital.

The total stock issues of the companies, now comprised in the Speyer group, amount to $232,051,665. The number of passengers carried during the past year exceed 825,000,000 and the fares paid totaled more than $25,000,000.

The Daily News regards the "Napoleonic schemes of Speyer" with distrust, declaring:

"London is now, in respect to its traffic, except in one particular, at the mercy of a privately controlled trust whose first duty is not to the public but to the shareholders."

EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO.

Walls of National Palace Cracked—One Death Indirectly Due to It.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—A severe earthquake occurred here at 7:15 this morning. The movement was oscillatory and passed from north to south. It lasted more than three minutes.

The walls of the main hall of the National Palace were cracked. Many brick walls and a few poorly constructed small houses were thrown down. The street pavements buckled and several watermains were broken. The damage to property is slight.

According to the police reports the only death was that of a laborer, who, following the custom prevalent among the lower classes of dropping to their knees in prayer, knelt on the street car track in front of a moving suburban train and was ground to pieces. Several other persons were injured.

Government reports indicate that the earthquake affected a wide district in the east and south of Mexico, chiefly in the State of Guerrero.

MORSE IN ENGLAND TO BUY ENGINES

Denies Report That He Contemplates a New Steamship Combination.

WON'T ENTER PANAMA TRADE

Criticises Newspapers for Space Given to Gunmen's Trials—May Go to Egypt.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Charles W. Morse, who is staying at a West End hotel with his wife, under a slightly altered name, denied to-night that he was here for the purpose of forming a new steamship combination. Attired in faultless evening dress and looking exceedingly fit, he presented a picture of affluence as he chatted with THE NEW YORK TIMES representative in the foyer of the hotel while he was waiting for his wife to join him for dinner.

"No, Sir," he said, "I am not here for any such purpose, but I will be frank with you and tell you exactly what I am doing here. I want to buy some engines for some new steamships which I am building, and have come here to buy them. In my opinion the Diesel is the engine of the future. You see, I am looking forward, and don't want to build ships that will be out of date in a year or two. That's the reason why I am looking into the Diesel engine, for I believe that before long this type will be used universally."

The correspondent asked Mr. Morse for what company he was building steamers.

"Why, the New York and Jacksonville Company," he replied. "We do solely a coastwise business, and there is no intention of extending our operations; but we need some new boats."

When he was told that it was reported that he was going to enter the South American and Panama trade, he said:

"That is not so. We do simply a coastwise business—at all events for the present."

Mr. Morse declined to talk politics, saying that he had been out of it so long, but remarked that Wilson's election seemed to be universally looked upon as satisfactory and gave promise of good business for the country. He deplored the giving of so much space in the newspapers to the trials of Becker and the gunmen, saying that it spread the opinion abroad that the country was in a state of anarchy.

Mr. Morse expects to stay here some days longer, and then may go to a German cure, afterward going to Egypt; or, if business demands it, he may return to New York within a few days. He certainly does not seem to be in need of a cure, for, apart from the fact that his hair is white, he looks better than in the old days before his financial crash.

EULALIA DISCUSSES BEAUTY.

Nothing More Painful Than an Ugly Woman, Says Her New Book.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The Infanta Eulalia, the aunt of King Alfonso, is about to publish, under the pseudonym of Comtesse Davila, a volume entitled "Pour la Femme."

"Beauty," says the author in the first chapter, "is the highest and most familiar symbol. Women should be beautiful, and nothing is more painful and depressing than an ugly woman. A beautiful woman's face inspires joy and stimulates and ennobles human effort. The woman upon whom her tired husband cannot rest his eyes with joy, whose children take no pleasure in looking at her, who, in a word, does not beautify her home, misses the real, essential rôle of woman, that of being the centre of harmony, the mirror of beauty." Many errors, the Princess says, are pardoned in a beautiful woman because she has embellished the world to which she makes a gift and upon which she confers a favor, as Emerson says, by the effect of her presence.

FIVE DIE IN JAIL RIOT.

French Prisoners Revolt and Are Subdued by Soldiers.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—In a riot at the prison of Rochefort, on the west coast of France to-day, five persons were killed and three seriously injured.

The Chief Warden, at 5 o'clock, was distributing food to the prisoners when one seized his pistol and shot him dead. His wife ran to his assistance, and she also was killed. This was the signal for a general revolt, and a pitched battle ensued between the prisoners, armed with knives, razors, and other weapons, and the authorities.

The guards had to summon a strong force of gendarmes and infantry. The prisoners, after fighting savagely, retreated before the rifle fire of the infantry. The leaders barricaded themselves in a cell on the second floor. They were eventually overcome. It was then found that a seaman had been shot through the heart and another prisoner had hanged himself in a cell. The second Warden's body was discovered in another cell with his head severed from his body. Three wounded Wardens were taken to the hospital.

SEES INIQUITY IN OUR JAILS.

Canon Horsley Declares New York Conditions Unbefitting Humanity.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Canon Horsley, writing in The Daily News in reference to its review of a book on Californian prison life, quotes from a report of the prison association of New York to show that the jails in the State of New York are no better regulated. Canon Horsley concludes:

"It is the local Government, allowed to become a local iniquity, that sustains such a system and ignores or tolerates conditions, which seem incompatible with enlightened humanity or even the self-protection of the State.

"I have never found an American to deny or to excuse this state of affairs, of which yet I have read yearly for the last thirty years."

Half of his lectures are to be delivered in French and the other half in English.

Prof. Wilson spoke to-day in French, discussing international law and its relations to the Constitution and Supreme Court of the United States.

NEW PLAY AMUSES LONDON.

"The Younger Generation" Keeps the Audience in Continual Laughter.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—Stanley Loughton, author of "Hindle Wakes," which the Shuberts and Brady are to produce in New York, is responsible for another play, entitled "The Younger Generation," which was given last night at the Haymarket Theatre.

It is a delightful and well-constructed satirical comedy, full of rich humor, which kept the audience laughing throughout.

Cargin Murder Verdict Affirmed.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—The Court of Appeals to-day affirmed the judgment of conviction of murder in the first degree of John Cargin, convicted of killing Frank J. Connelly at Baldwin's Place, Westchester County, on Feb. 14, 1912, during a quarrel.

Why the AUTOTONE?
A Question and Its Answer

THE average person is suspicious of subtleties. He likes a simple answer to a straightforward question.

So it is altogether in the Autotone's favor that there is one reason which any one can understand for its vast superiority over other player-pianos of its own class.

Every one knows that the player-piano is a combination of two parts—a musical instrument and a mechanical playing-device.

Every one can recognize that if the first of these is made in one place and the second in another there must be a lack of co-ordination when they are combined.

It therefore needs no strenuous argument to convince them that the Autotone, made throughout in one Factory and built up under the supervision of Piano Makers of repute, is superior to the player-piano made in piecemeal fashion.

And the Autotone is the only player-piano of established reputation made—piano and player both—in one factory, and guaranteed throughout by its makers.

Terms of payment arranged to suit purchaser's convenience. Liberal allowance made for old pianos taken in exchange. Handsomely Illustrated Catalogue sent on request.

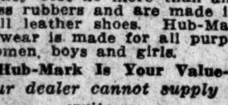
Spending Too Much On Rubbers?

Families seriously interested in cutting down regular running expenses will look to the rubber item. There's no satisfaction in spending money lavishly on rubbers. There's where you can save without denying yourself anything you want.

You can't get out of wearing rubbers, but you can prevent their costing so much if you'll take pains to get properly fitted with Hub-Mark rubbers. Keep them reasonably clean and wear them only over shoes they fit, and when the Winter is over we are sure you'll decide it pays to choose good rubbers and to take care of them.



Illustrations of various styles of Hub-Mark rubbers are appearing in the street cars. They cost no more than any other first-class rubbers and are made in styles to fit all leather shoes. Hub-Mark rubber footwear is made for all purposes for men, women, boys and girls.

'FAGIN'S' WIFE FIRED FIRST SHOT IN BATTLE

While Detectives Were Guarding Vogel She Dropped Fay and Passed Gun to Husband.

LUISI KILLED THEM BOTH

Seventeen Shots Fired and All Hit the Mark—Allen Dead, Fay Dying—Loot in Vogel Trunks.

It was not the thief-training Fagin known as Henry Vogel and by half a dozen other names, but the woman known as Lottie, his wife, who first opened fire on the police in the battle which resulted in the shooting of seven persons and the death of both the thief and his woman companion in their rooms at the Hotel Elsmere in Cortlandt Avenue, the Bronx, on Monday night.

It also came out yesterday that the woman, rather than Vogel, was in actual command of the force of women employed as apartment house thieves. She threatened them whenever they were slow in bringing in loot from places where she obtained for them jobs as servants, and she invariably received in person their reports as to their operations and gave the instructions on which many of the most successful of their robberies were accomplished. The woman went armed whenever she moved out of her apartment. The police found yesterday in her green plush bag, such a bag as women shoppers carry, a .32 calibre revolver. It was fully loaded, was well oiled, and showed signs of much handling.

How deadly was the fire on both sides after Lottie Vogel decided to fight it out instead of permitting her husband to surrender to the police, when they demanded that he accompany them to the police station, was indicated in the post-mortem examination made of the bodies of Vogel and his wife and of Private Detective John Allen at the Fordham Hospital morgue.

The examination was made by Coroner's Physician John Reigelman. Taken in connection with an examination of the wounds received by Central Office Detective Martin F. Fay, Private Detective Gerard Louisi, Louis Mondschein, the proprietor of the Elsmere Hotel, and William Butler, his waiter, who are at the Lebanon Hospital, it was shown that every bullet fired by the detective and every bullet fired by Vogel and his wife found lodgment in a human body.

Every Bullet Found a Mark.

The Vogels fired eleven times, while one detective fired only six shots. The detective's bullets were of soft lead, while those fired by the Vogels were of steel, a fact to which is credited the possibility of the recovery of three of the four men now in the hospital.

The autoposy performed on the bodies of the Vogels disposed of the theory that they had killed themselves after shooting the detectives, who sought their capture. Four bullets in the body of Vogel and two bullets in the body of his wife were found to be of soft lead. These were the six discharged by the detectives.

The police learned that not only was Mrs. Vogel an accomplished revolver shot, but that her husband also had more than usual ability in that line. Private Detective Luisi brought these facts out while telling of the revolver duel to Captain of Detectives Price, who visited him in the Lebanon Hospital.

"I knew I was up against an experienced shooter," Luisi declared, "the minute I saw Vogel open fire. He didn't show up his whole front as any untrained shooter would have done. I believe he must have been trained in the Austrian Army. He turned sidewise to me as I opened fire, and shot at me through the crook of his left elbow held close to the body. Thus I had a minimum of surface to fire at."

The mute testimony of Vogel's body was to the same effect as that of the detective who shot him. Of the four bullet wounds it was found that three were mere flesh wounds by bullets that struck on his left side without piercing any vital organ. Had he exposed the front of his body to Luisi he would have been struck four times in the chest and abdomen. One of the bullets, the fourth fired, passed through Vogel's heart from his left side and caused his death.

At the Lebanon Hospital early this morning it was said that Central Office Detective Fay was rapidly sinking and was not expected to live more than a few hours. Luisi, it was stated, was in a serious, but not necessarily a critical, condition, while Mordschein, proprietor of the Elsmere Hotel, and Butler, his waiter, were apparently out of danger.

The Tragedy Reconstructed.

In telling of the manner in which Mrs. Vogel opened fire in the hotel room, outwitting the detectives who had already "covered" her husband, the detectives involved in the shooting paid a high tribute to her courage, skill and alertness. The same tribute was paid a little later by Assistant District Attorney Embree, who had listened to the story of a woman thief who operated for the pair. This thief had been afraid to confess until assured that Lottie Vogel was really dead.

The tragedy was reconstructed yesterday from facts gathered by the police, which altered the story in some of the minor details. As reconstructed this is the police account of the shooting:

Central Office Detective Fay and Detectives Allen and Luisi of the National Surety Company decided at 9:40 o'clock on Monday night that they would force the room of the Vogels on the third floor of the Elsmere Hotel. They had traced the Vogels to the Elsmere after shadowing them for several days on information furnished by Sophie Brinckerhoff, held in the Tombs on a charge of larceny. When they started on the case they had no suspicion as to the Vogels, but wanted them merely because Sophie Brinckerhoff had insisted that she must see Mrs. Vogel before she would make any confession or would talk of her case in any way.

The fact that there was no serious charge against the Vogels threw the police officials off their guard. They gained entrance to the room occupied by the pair by sending up William Baker, a bulky man, and a combination waiter and barkeeper. Behind Baker were Fay, Allen, and Luisi, and Louis Mondschein, the proprietor, who followed the detectives and his waiter up the stairs, merely to be a spectator of the arrest.

As Detective Fay entered the room he rushed Vogel, following the usual police plan of "covering" a man who may possibly be armed. He found Vogel standing in the centre of the room attired only in his undershirt, trowsers, and shoes. Fay "frisked" Vogel's trowsers for a revolver and found none. He then ordered Vogel to dress, and handed to him his coat, vest, and shirt after making sure that no weapon was concealed in them.

Mrs. Vogel Shot Fay.

Vogel commenced to dress and his careless and affable air still further threw the detectives off their guard. Fay replaced his revolver in his pocket. Allen had come unarmed. Luisi, still watchful, kept his revolver in his hand ready for quick action.

Mrs. Vogel was not so carefully watched, and while the detectives kept their eyes on the man she crossed the room behind him, slipped a hand beneath the mattress of a double bed, withdrew it holding an automatic revolver, and almost instantly thereafter Detective Fay crumpled up and fell to the floor with a bullet through his abdomen. The attack was so sudden and so well timed that he had no opportunity to draw his own revolver.

Private Detective Allen sprang at the woman, who had moved over just behind Vogel. With a quick motion she passed the revolver to Vogel, who fired one shot into Allen's head. This was the only shot Vogel fired which struck above the level of a man's stomach.

As he saw Allen stagger back and fall across the bed, Vogel turned his left side to Luisi, who was shooting at him, and proceeded one by one to pick off every person in the room.

It all happened so quickly no one had a chance to escape. Vogel's aim through the crook in his left arm was so accurate that no bullet missed its mark. As he fired he received three bullets across his chest and stomach, one of which pierced his right wrist as well.

He continued to sweep the room with his eleven-shooting automatic revolver until he saw that all the men except Luisi were down. Then he turned to Luisi, who was shooting at him, and finished the duel as a two-man affair. Luisi was wounded and so was he. And in the final exchange of shots Luisi received a second steel bullet in the groin, while Vogel received a leaden bullet through the heart.

Mrs. Vogel fell because she insisted on crouching behind Vogel while he fired. She was directly in the line of Luisi's fire, and received a bullet in the abdomen, and as she reeled from behind her husband another bullet struck her in the back. She then staggered to a window, in front of which she fell.

She and her husband were dead when the first outsiders entered the room. Allen was still breathing, but it was apparent to all that he could not live. He was alive when he reached the Lebanon Hospital, but died there early yesterday morning without regaining consciousness.

The other wounded men did not remain in the room. Luisi staggered over to Detective Fay and tried to pick him up. Each assisting the other, they finally groped their way downstairs. At the same time Mondschein and Butler helped each other down the staircase.

The police alarm, sounded because of the revolver shots, brought the reserves from the Morrisania Station at exactly 9:50 o'clock. Capt. Walling found Fay and Luisi in a state of collapse on the floor of the barroom downstairs. Mondschein and Butler they found sitting on chairs. As they lifted Detective Fay into an automobile, intending to take him to the Lebanon Hospital, his revolver dropped from his pocket, and one shell exploded on the sidewalk.

As earlier reports stated that Fay had joined in the shooting, Detective Captain Price exhibited Fay's revolver yesterday. Only one chamber was discharged. The other chambers contained loaded shells.

The articles which the police found in the two trunks, the large leather valise, the suitcase, and the black handbag taken from the room occupied by the Vogels was as varied an assortment of thieves' loot as the department has had to handle in many a day. It required eight pages of closely typewritten paper to catalogue the articles found.

There was jewelry to the value of more than $1,000, a large number of pieces of silk, several gowns, suits of clothes, much table linen, and many bits of lingerie. Capt. Price estimated the value of the articles roughly at $8,000. On some of the table linen were the words Forest Hills, a name of very intimate concern to a probation officer attached to the Prison Association, P. E. Kimball by name.

Owed Liberty to Probation Officer.

If it had not been for the direct intervention of Kimball, backed by a clergyman and a member of the Prison Commission, Vogel would have spent the last two years in Sing Sing Prison instead of remaining at liberty as the head of a gang of thieves. All the time he was stealing he was reporting weekly to Probation Officer Kimball, affectionately calling him "father," and bearing witness of his poverty by borrowing money both from him and the kindly clergyman who backed Mr. Kimball in his efforts to reform Vogel. The name "Forest Hills" on the stolen table linen was the name of a hotel where the indulgent Kimball obtained a position as cook for Vogel after his release on probation from the Tombs two years ago.

At that time Vogel had been arrested on complaint of Mrs. Arthur McGifford and had been sentenced by Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions to two years in prison on a charge of grand larceny. Here is the appealing letter that accomplished his release on probation:

> Dear Judge O'Sullivan: This defendant was arrested at the gates of the penitentiary and has been in the Tombs for three months. It is a case of petty larceny, although the indictment is for grand larceny. The man is a cook, and is a chef of excellent references from hotels where he has worked. The proprietor of the Elks Restaurant on Sixth Avenue offers him employment as soon as he can be released.
>
> He is not a criminal at heart, but is so weak that association with bad men can easily influence him. He has tried to butt his brains out against the walls of his cell in the Tombs. The only person who has any influence over him is his devoted wife.
>
> Mr. Henry Solomon of the Prison Commission and the Rev. C. P. Tinker agree with me that confinement would be of no use to the defendant. Very truly,
>
> P. E. KIMBALL.

Immediately after Vogel was released on Kimball's plea he began to cater to the probation officer, visiting his home to tell of his earnest efforts to reform and of the work that he was not doing. Vogel did go to Far Rockaway, where he worked at the Pasadena, Majestic, and Caslin Hotels. He returned to New York and spent a Winter at the Pekin restaurant on Broadway. Last Summer he went to the Forest Hills Hotel at Forest Hills, Penn., and this Summer spent some time in the Catskills.

On the Prison Association records he was carried under the name of Joseph Sdarzalansky. The records show that he reported faithfully each week and had abandoned criminal ways. The naturalization papers found among his effects give his name as Joseph Plazynsky, and state that he came to this country from Austria in 1901. To the police he was known as "The Weeping Thief," as Joseph Stiszank, Sigmund Lehman, and Theristo Razyensky. Under these names he served prison sentences in 1906 and 1909 for grand larceny. At one time he had a woman and four children go to court and weep for him. He said they were his wife and children. They were shown to be "dummies" who staged a scene to impress the court.

To his record as a Fagin the girl in the Tombs, Sophie Brinckerhoff, who turned over to his wife the entire proceeds of eighteen months' work as a thief, added an interesting chapter in a partial confession made to Assistant District Attorney Embree.

Before she confessed the girl had to be convinced that Mrs. Vogel was dead. She then told of the way Mrs. Vogel taught her to steal and took the proceeds of her thievery. She said that she met Mrs. Vogel while she was a maid and Mrs. Vogel was the cook in the home of a man named Swarzschild, who lived near Riverside Drive at an address she could not recall. Mrs. Vogel broached the subject to her, told her just how to go about it, and started her out on a career of crime.

That was eighteen months ago. Every little while Mrs. Vogel would look her up and scold her for not getting larger returns. Mrs. Vogel obtained positions for her by answering advertisements. Sometimes Mrs. Vogel would write out references for her to impress likely victims with.

Mrs. Vogel, she said, also advertised in matrimonial papers, stating that "a young widow wished to get acquainted with an aged widower, object matrimony."

Sophie Brinckerhoff confessed that she had robbed the homes of Ruth Gans at 251 West Ninety-eighth Street, of Blanche A. Rosenblum at 214 West Ninety-second Street, of Mrs. Stella Emenuel at 562 West 113th Street, and of R. L. Steinhardt at 310 West Eightieth Street.

Mr. Steinhardt confirmed her story in part yesterday, when he identified as his property a gold thimble bearing his wife's initials, and two initialed handkerchiefs among the loot taken from the Vogels.

Uptown Flat May Be Thieves' Cache.

Besides the large amount of loot taken at the Hotel Elsmere the police believe that they have unearthed an extensive cache in a luxuriously furnished flat at 529 West 151st Street. In this flat Vogel lived with Mrs. Vogel; and it was here that Sophie Brinckerhoff was taken into custody on the charge of grand larceny which the Grand Jury is now investigating.

Vogel had another apartment at 225 West Twenty-fifth Street. The West Twenty-fifth Street place was poorly furnished, and is believed by the police to have been the receiving station for stolen goods. A careful search of the 151st Street flat will be made to-day, and the luxurious furnishings, including silverware and table linen, will be listed for identification by persons whose homes have been pilfered in the Vogel operations.

Among the loot recovered from the Vogels' trunks and handbags are these items which bear identifying marks:

One silk handkerchief marked F. C.; one woman's silver cigarette case, and one woman's pocketbook, both initialed T. V. P.; one bar pin containing five pearls, initialed L.; one silk umbrella, initialed E. D. P.; a dozen woman's fancy suits; a man's suit, bearing the name of Peter E. Piotte, Syracuse, N. Y.; one green and white silk handkerchief, marked J. F. C.; one blue serge suit, made by Fifth Avenue tailors; one striped suit, gray with blue stripes, marked "Clemons, 91 Sixth Avenue, N. Y."; one lady's silk serge suit, marked "Maison Michel, 375 Fifth Avenue"; one metal cork screw, initialed L. S.; one silver handled knife, initialed I. V. P.; one red leather pocketbook, marked "Ernest Hoffman, Carlsbad"; handkerchiefs in a large assortment, variously initialed; one gold thimble, initialed B. S. S.; one bordered plaque with a design reading "Die Drei Parzen"; table linen, initialed S. P. L., S. P. T., E., and W.; one gold locket, initialed L. J. B.

The collection of jewelry is very large, and contains such articles as might be picked up from a woman's dressing table and the bureau drawers of well-to-do householders. There are many cuff buttons, sets of table silver, shirt studs, strands of beads, bracelets, and gold and silver buckles.

A find of much interest to the police in the Vogel baggage was an automatic revolver similar to the one used by Vogel and Mrs. Vogel with such deadly effect. This, with the revolver found in Mrs. Vogel's bag and a second automatic revolver found between the mattresses in their room at the Elsmere, made four weapons in the pair's armament.

Both of the large trunks and the black satchel in which the loot was discovered were new. The leather suit case and the large leather valise were covered with the remnants of mutilated labels. Several were of foreign steamship lines and railroads, while one was of a storage warehouse in 125th Street.

Five safe deposit box keys were found by the police in searching Vogel's clothing. They will attempt to-day to trace the keys through the manufacturer, whose name they bear, in the hope that still further caches of jewelry will be discovered.

Coroner Jerome Healy called a number of witnesses at a preliminary hearing into the circumstances surrounding the shooting yesterday afternoon. His principal witness was Joseph Golders, a jeweler residing at 124 East 116th Street, who is held by the police as a material witness. Golders attempted to visit the girl confined in the Tombs several days ago, and was seen in company with Vogel by detectives who were shadowing him for two days before his arrest.

He was taken along by Detective Fay to the Elsmere Hotel when he attempted to make the arrest.

Golden testified that he first met the Vogels two years ago, and that on four occasions he had bought jewelry from them. His last purchase was made two days ago, he said, when he bought several uncut diamonds from them. He denied that he ever knew the Vogels to be thieves.

Samuel Freidner of 283 East Eighty-first Street, a private detective employed as an assistant to Gerard Luisi, told of trailing Vogel all day Monday and of furnishing the reports on which Detectives Fay, Allen and Luisi undertook the taxicab journey to the Elsmere. He said he was not taken on the trip and learned of the shooting when he telephoned Mrs. Luisi to learn what had become of his chief, since he did not return at an hour agreed upon.

The other witnesses were patrons and employes of the Elsmere. They were released after stating that they knew little or nothing of the shooting. Ante-mortem statements were taken by the Coroner at the Lebanon Hospital from all of the wounded men except Fay, who was too weak to talk of the shooting.

Both the proprietor of the Elsmere and his waiter denied they knew anything about the Vogels. They said they had never seen them until they engaged their room and had their baggage put into it an hour before the shooting occurred.

A remarkable sale of

Motor Fur Coats for Madame

at wonderful reductions today

¶ Most of the garments in this sale have outstayed their welcome, which accounts for the remarkable liberality of the reductions. They have been in the department longer than they ought, and, of course, you could not accuse them of having come over from Paris on the last boat. But they are those conservative motor garments which are always in good style.

¶ Perhaps we should add that here and there a size is missing in the assortments. Do not imagine, however, that these missing sizes are of great account so far as you are concerned, because it is practically certain that we can fit you at one price or another. That being the case, you do not want to miss an opportunity which has not been equaled in a long time. It is a big event for the woman who motors. Entire Sixth floor

Materials are magnificent—the best that English, Scotch and Irish weavers can produce from softest, warmest wool. Chinchillas, light-but-warm fabrics, West of England Cheviots, Harris Tweeds, shaggy Scotch Cloths and soft Vicunas are among them.

As to colors, there are several shades each of plain blue, gray and brown—also rich red-brown mixtures, heather effects and soft greens—a gathering most remarkable in its diversity.

Seven of the models come from the most famous maker of Men's Overcoats in London, as his labels in these splendid Coats testify. Eight of them of the widely-known "Aquascutum" make, for which GIMBELS in New York are sole distributors. And nine more from three other good tailors.

Just as we are finishing this story, the clothing man comes to us with a splendid bit of news:

Men's English Overcoats $30 That Were Marked $38 to $45

All imported for this season's selling—and they have lived up to their obligations so well that sizes are broken. And rather than wait for new Coats to "fill in" we reduce them in price to hurry them out.

ROOSEVELT ADVISES PARTY TO GO ALONE

Discountenances Any Combination for Legislation with Either of Old Parties.

LEADERS AND WORKERS MEET

The Colonel Again Derides Root and Guthrie for Their Criticism of His Criticism of the Courts.

Some 300 members of the Bull Moose party in the State got together at the Holland House yesterday and discussed for several hours the future of their organization. There were 150 members of the State Committee, about 60 County Chairmen, and 100 or more sympathizers. For a time it looked as if there would be a fight over a declaration for fusion with other parties next Fall to fight Tammany, but at the last moment the conference left the matter entirely with the State Committee to be thrashed out at a meeting next Spring.

Col. Roosevelt, however, in a speech that breathed defiance to the old parties and hope for the Progressives in their next fight, came out flat-footedly against tying up with any other political organization, and he was cheered to the echo. His main contention was that the Progressives showed at the election that they were strong enough to stand alone. Oscar S. Straus, State Senator Frank N. Davenport, and W. Bourke Cockran also talked at length, mostly about the future of the new party. Controller William A. Prendergast, who had predicted ruin for the party if it did not co-operate with other parties in trying to down Tammany, was not there, but Timothy L. Woodruff was, and he went on record against the idea of leaving fusion in New York City entirely with the State Committee, two-thirds of the members of which do not live in the city.

Col. Roosevelt started in by saying that during the past two weeks he had been greatly impressed by the fact that the Progressives who wrote to him all declared that they were in the fight to the finish.

"There have been times," he said, "when it was expressed that we were merely a bolting faction of one of the old parties and would attempt to fuse again with that party. We will not."

Fight on Both Old Parties.

There was loud applause at this, and the Colonel went on to say that former Democrats and former Republicans stand alike in the new organization. The fight this Fall, he said, was against the same cause in two different parties.

"Gentlemen," went on the Colonel, "I now stand in the ranks with my fellow-Progressives, and what I am saying must be taken as a bit of advice from a man in the ranks. But speaking as a man in the ranks, I most earnestly hope that in no Legislature assembled in which the Progressives have a representation will there be any submission to either of the old parties should they desire to combine the men of the Progressive Party with their party organizations. I hope we will make it plain to the people that it is up to the old parties to combine against us and that our representatives in the State Legislatures and in Congress are not going to enter into any deal of any degree for personal advantage with either of the old parties. Let them do that work.

"Let them choose whom they will to send to the Senate or anything else. What arrangements they choose, let them make those arrangements themselves, between themselves, and let us stand aloof, keeping unflinchingly to the principles we put down in the last campaign, and showing by our works the faith that is in us. I further earnestly hope that in this State, in all other States, in Congress, the men elected State Senators, Assemblymen, will, at the earliest possible date, introduce bills embodying all of the principles in our Progressive platform and fight as hard as they know how to have these bills enacted into law.

Here the Colonel congratulated himself and the other Bull Moosers on what had been accomplished at the last election. He said:

"Without any organization, against both the old political organizations, against 98 per cent. or 99 per cent. of the whole political leadership of the country, against at least 99 per cent. of the corporate wealth and the heads of the corporate wealth of the country, against all of the newspapers which might be directly or indirectly controlled by those forces of business or politics, in three months we took second place both in the popular vote and in the Electoral College, and took a position such as no other party in our history, in English history, or, as far as I know, in the history of Continental free government, has ever taken."

The Colonel urged his hearers to work hard for the triumph that is to "come in the end." The Colonel took a fling at Wall Street as holding men whom it would be hard to convert and who are able to mislead a multitude of well-meaning citizens who should be with the Progressives. Getting back to one incident of the campaign, the Colonel said:

"One of the comic features of the campaign was the assault made on me, really upon our judiciary ticket, by four eminent leaders of the New York bar—of the New York Corporation bar, [laughter]—Messrs. Root, Small, Marshall, and Guthrie, in which they denounced me in connection with my criticism of four decisions of the Court of Appeals. They denounced me in the afternoon of the day before election, defending the Court of Appeals for those four decisions, when that morning the Court of Appeals had overruled itself on one of these decisions. [Laughter.]

"I, of curse, presume that they were ignorant, after their public statement in the afternoon, of the fact that the Court of Appeals that morning had overruled itself. I am sure they were ignorant of that overruling of that decision, but, if in serving the great corporations in the past they had ever shown a similar ignorance in as vital a case, they would not have achieved their present position of means, [laughter.]

"If any man's feelings are hurt by the use of the phrase, 'Recall of judicial decisions,' I am perfectly willing to call it something else. If he objects to the people having the ultimate right to construe the onstitution, although I can answer him, I would ask him to look at the Eleventh Amendment to the National Constitution, an amendment in which the people expressly state that the Constitution is to be considered in the possible sense.

"I don't care what you call it, if we get it. I want justice. I want a pledge given to the people, the power given to the people to amend the Constitution ad hoc; that is, to overrule a given, definite decision of the court, so that that decision or law shall be as the Legislature passed it, in case the people so desire."

Straus Has No Regrets.

Oscar S. Straus said he agreed with the Colonel that the Progressives were not a bolting party, but he did think it was the party's duty to provide a safe and aggressive harbor for the bolters from the other parties.

"I have no disappointments coming to me on account of not being elected," said Mr. Straus. "I deem myself fortunate in having won a very great success, and it would have been unfortunate for the Progressives, and, especially for me, to have been sent to Albany and not have you with me, [applause,] for in that instance it could have been pointed out by our enemies that now you have a Progressive Governor and what have you accomplished? People that are seeking office cannot afford to wait, but people like we are, who are seeking to establish a great principle for the Empire State, can wait.

Mr. Straus took full responsibility for the appointment of the members of the Legislative Committee. Controller Prendergast had objected to the appointments because Kings County was not represented, but Mr. Straus said he had selected nine members without taking into consideration Assembly districts or counties, and that the nine have six more members to select.

Senator Davenport got the crowd cheering by declaring that the Bull Moose Party had come to stay and that only broad-minded methods should be used in strengthening the party. He said that it could not be expected that there would be very large accretions from the Democratic Party.

"Some say," said he, "there is danger of our becoming a trading or bargaining party, but there should be no fear of that, because we have the strength and conviction that will prevent that sort of thing."

There was a long discussion regarding methods of organization and publicity. Timothy L. Woodruff brought up the question of fusing by reading a copy of the resolutions adopted by the committee named by the Executive Committee to deal with the subject. This resolution read:

Fusion Question Still Open.

Resolved, That no union, coalition, or co-operation be made by the National Progressive Party of the State of New York, or by any local organization or unit thereof, with any other party, party organization, or unit without the consent or approval by the State Committee or the Executive Committee of the State Committee of the National Progressive Party, and that no action looking toward such coalition, co-operation, or union be taken without like consent.

Mr. Woodruff said that in discussing the matter with other members he found that there was a great deal of objection to leaving fusion, especially in New York City, with the State Committee, and when he proposed that the whole matter be referred to the Executive Committee and that it report at a meeting of the State Committee next Spring, it was unanimously carried.

Mr. Woodruff told about the formation of a Progressive Club. He announced that a clubhouse would be obtained as soon as possible, and said that the initiation fees would be $10 up to a total membership of 2,000. Women would be allowed to join at one-half of the cost to the men. It was announced that about 250 have already applied for membership. Life membership in the club could be obtained for $250.

TAKE SECOND DEGREE PLEA FROM FORSBREY

Jeweler's Slayer and Tombs Breaker Allowed to Escape Electric Chair.

GIRL WHO AIDED HIM FREED

Forsbrey Says Cocaine Dazed Him—May Get Life Sentence—Cassidy Defense Gains.

Reynolds Forsbrey, the confessed cocaine snuffer, who escaped from the Tombs on Sept. 1 last and was recaptured, was arraigned before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday and allowed to plead guilty to murder in the second degree and assault in the first degree, although he was indicted for murder in the first degree and attempted murder.

The murder indictment against him charged him with slaying Morris Schwartzkopf, a jeweler, of 8 Delancey Street, who was shot dead while repairing a watch which his murderer had given him to fix. After shooting Schwartzkopf Forsbrey ran from the store and went to 37 Cooper Square, where he fired three shots at Morris Katz, a clerk in a United Cigars Store. Forsbrey was arrested in a stupor. Katz was shot in the arm and head, but recovered. Both shootings took place on July 26 and occurred within two hours' time.

Forsbrey had known Schwartzkopf for several years, and the day before the shooting had sold him a diamond pin for $65. Forsbrey admitted this when arrested, and also admitted that he had given the jeweler a watch to repair on the day of the murder. He denied, however, that he knew anything about shooting either Katz or the jeweler, and declared that on the day of the crime he had bought some cocaine at Chatham Square and Mott Street, and could not remember the events which followed.

The principal witness against him was Emanuel Goldstein, who testified that on the day of the murder he was passing Schwartzkopf's shop and saw the jeweler's head in the window. He was about to go on when he heard a shot, and the head disappeared, and Forsbrey walked rapidly from the store and entered the Puritan Café near by. Jacob Berner corroborated Goldstein, so far as to say that he saw Forsbrey enter the café and heard Goldstein say, "A man has been shot." Both witnesses told Assistant District Attorney O'Malley that they had entered the café, but could not see Forsbrey.

Forsbrey was represented by Barton S. Weeks, and when he was arraigned before Judge Mulqueen Mr. O'Malley recommended that the Judge accept a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree and assault in the first degree. Mr. O'Malley said that he recommended the plea because he could not show any motive for committing the crime, although it was supposed to be robbery in both cases. After accepting the pleas Judge Mulqueen remanded Forsbrey to the Tombs for sentence next Friday. Forsbrey can get from thirty years to life for his crimes, while there is still an indictment in Brooklyn against him charging him with the murder of Walter Meseritz, a haberdasher, who was shot last Spring.

After his pleas har been accepted, Mr. Weeks asked that Margaret Ryan, the young woman, who smuggled saws to Forsbrey to assist him in escaping when he first tried on Aug. 27, and was discovered, be released from the House of Detention, where she had been held as a material witness against the murderer. Miss Ryan was arrested with Forsbrey in a flat at 1,776 Fox Street, the Bronx, where he had gone after he succeeded in breaking out of the Tombs. Warden Fallon of the Tombs refused to allow the young woman to visit the slayer when she attempted to do so after he had been taken to his cell.

Judge Mulqueen, however, refused to release John Frey, Forsbrey's cell mate, who was also being held as a material witness against Forsbrey. Three weeks ago Frey appeared before Assistant District Attorney Minton and signed an affidavit to the effect that Forsbrey had already laid plans to escape from the Tombs a third time. According to Frey, the following conversation took place:

"When they take me over to court to stand trial," said Forsbrey," I am going to make another attempt to escape even if I have to commit murder to do it."

"Why, you can't get away with it," Frey says he answered.

"Well, they got me right anyway," Forsbrey replied, "and I will get the chair if I don't beat it."

Forsbrey said that he was 27 years old and a plumber. He admitted that he had been convicted of forgery when 15 years old and had served a sentence in the House of Refuge for it. In 1909 he was sent to Sing Sing for two years for burglary, and in 1907 received a sentence in Elmira for attempted burglary. He said he contracted the cocaine habit while at Sing Sing.

The trial of James Cassidy on an indictment charging him, Forsbrey, and Frank Redmond with the murder of Walter Meseritz, a Flatbush haberdasher, in his store in February, dragged yesterday before Justice Aspinall in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, in a legal battle between the prosecution and the defense. Assistant District Attorney Caldwell is trying to strengthen a circumstantial case against the defendant, while James J. Curtin, attorney for the prisoner, lost no opportunity to weaken the State's case, and scored more points for his side than the prosecution gained.

Frequently Justice Aspinall interposed with questions which apparently helped the prosecution. Although Edward Byrne, a clerk in a pawnship on Atlantic Avenue, where some of the stuff stolen from Meseritz's store was pawned, was sure at one time in his testimony that Cassidy was the man who came to the pawnshop on Feb. 24, the day Meseritz was murdered, and pawned a safety razor, Attorney Curtin got him to admit that the prisoner simply looked like the man who pawned the stuff.

Frank Redmond, a friend of Cassidy, and also indicted for the same murder, was brought into the courtroom when Edmund F. Dwyer, a clerk in another pawnship at Bergen and Smith Streets, was on the witness stand. Attorney Curtin fought against any attempt to have the witness say that Redmond pawned a safety razor in his store on that day. Justice Aspinall came to the assistance of the prosecutor, and in reply to questions of the court Dwyer admitted that Redmond came into the store at 4:50 o'clock that Saturday afternoon and pawned a safety razor.

JEWISH FARMERS PROSPER.

Their Credit Unions Led the Way to Co-operative System.

The fifth session of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America, now meeting in this city, was held yesterday at the Educational Alliance, 197 East Broadway. It was Co-operative Credit Union day, most of the discussions centring about the credit unions, which are the children of the federation.

Leonard G. Robinson, General Manager of the Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society, said that the Jewish farmers had great cause for self-congratulation, having been the pathfinders in the work of establishing and maintaining co-operative credit systems among the farmers of the United States.

The eight credit unions of the Jews had put out $25,000 in 342 loans at 6 per cent. interest to farmers in the past ten months. These loans, he said, had made it possible for the poor farmer to get money when he needed it and pay it back when he was able.

Abraham Berger, Auditor of the Co-operative Credit Unions, emphasized the fact that the unions were not for charity, but were strictly business institutions organized to give the poor farmer a chance to help himself and compete equally with his more fortunate brothers. He said that he had examined the books of the credit unions and found them all correct.

W. Waltman of Ellenville, N. Y., reported that he had bought a farm of 105 acres eight years ago for $8,700, and that through the help of the credit union in his district he had been able so to improve his farm that he had received an offer of $19,000 for it recently, which he had refused.

The delegates will visit the American Land Show at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory this afternoon.

At the night session the plan for holding an agricultural fair and bazaar under the auspices of the federation in New York City next year was discussed, and the President was empowered to name a committee to work out the plan.

Marketing problems and the matter of establishing a purchasing bureau for housewives will be discussed to-day.

Orientals

The Largest Specialty
Rug House in America.

The Changing East

The running sands of time have marked, in the past twelvemonth, such changes as history is made of, in the three countries which are the great producers of Oriental rugs.

Turbulence in full measure has been allotted to Turkey, Persia and China.

There is no prospect of a resultant rug famine in the immediate future—there will still be good, handwoven rugs coming out of the East.

But in such times the sheep herds suffer and the fine arts slip back.

The weaving of history will probably, as it has in the past, interfere with the weaving of rugs.

The KIND of rugs will change and specimens which to-day are available at moderate prices in the collection of Wild's Orientals will be vastly more valuable in a very few years.

There are rugs in New York today worth $1,500, $2,000 and $2,500 which fifteen years ago could have been puchased for $200 or $300.

History repeats. Such an increase in values, in all probability, will again take place.

The best rugs—such as Wild's Orientals are composed of—will grow more scarce.

New rugs will come from the Orient. There are rugs coming now from the Near East which ten years ago were unheard of—such as adaptations of designs from the rarest antique on modern carpets, good in their way but not generic.

All of which is to be considered as we approach the Christmas which carries us back to the desert and its caravans nineteen hundred and twelve years ago.

What more appropriate Christmas gift could be selected than a vouched for Wild's Oriental—one of these rugs of older type, which are sure to disappear?

From $12 to $100 there are small rugs in this collection well worth while.

From $100 to $500 there are carpet sizes of unusual merit.

From $500 to $7,500 there are large rugs which in a surprisingly short time you will not be able to duplicate.

Above that price there are rare pieces, sifted from all that the East has to present, which have already reached the station of being absolutely alone—unique in the world of available rugs.

GIBSON WORE SHIRT AFTER WOMAN SANK

Mrs. Emma Benninger of Paterson So Testifies in Second Day of Murder Trial.

UNDERTAKER TWISTED NECK

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Two sensational developments marked the second day in the trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer charged with having killed his client, Mrs. Rosina Menschik Szabo, when out with her in a rowboat on Greenwood Lake on July 16 last.

The first scored for the prosecution. The second was a hit for the defense. Mrs. Emma Benninger of 19 Belmont Avenue, Paterson, N. J., was strolling on the shore when Mrs. Szabo met death. She testified that she saw the lawyer swimming toward the boat. She walked a short distance and got a pair of opera glasses. Through the glasses she made out more plainly the boat, with Gibson clinging to it. She said Gibson wore his bathing shirt, which she described as a covering without sleeves.

That testimony contradicted one of the main contentions of the defense—that Gibson had a struggle with Mrs. Szabo in the water, and that his client pulled his bathing shirt off over his head. He had no shirt on when the motor boat Torpedo reached him. Cross-examination by Robert H. Elder of counsel to the defense failed to shake the Paterson witness.

Mrs. Benninger insisted it was a man she saw in the water. Gibson had on his bathing shirt, she repeated. She noticed that before she got the glasses. They proved the accuracy of her sight, she added.

"When did you notice the man had nothing on the upper part of his body?" Mr. Elder asked.

"I never noticed that," the witness replied quickly.

"When he was lifted out of the water?" Mr. Elder persisted.

"I could not see him then. The boat came between me and the man, and he was lifted out on the other side," she explained.

How Neck Was Twisted.

The second sensation came when Mr. Elder was cross-examining Cornelius Lozier, the undertaker who embalmed Mrs. Szabo's body. Lozier said the woman's head was on one side, and he had to twist the neck to straighten the head. He added, however, that he took hold of the head on each side above the ears. In straightening it he had to use force. After turning it he moved it forward into a natural position.

The prosecution planned to prove that Mrs. Szabo was strangled, and not drowned. Isidor Wasservogel, Assistant District Attorney of New York County, who was conducting the examination, at once realized the importance of the undertaker's testimony. Under redirect examination Lozier said he did not touch the woman's neck. Joseph Maher, a New York detective, was used as a subject while the undertaker demonstrated the way the woman's head was straightened.

Mrs. Gibson sat directly behind her husband, near the lawyers' table. She prompted the cross-examination. So did her husband, who constantly wrote suggestions on a pad. There were many women in the courtroom.

District Attorney Rogers said he would prove that persons heard Gibson when on the lake talking to Mrs. Szabo in a loud and angry voice, and that Gibson was seen with his arm about his companion's neck. He went over the story of the incidents on the lake on July 14, the time of the first boating trip of Mrs. Szabo and Gibson. Mr. Rogers asserted he would show the woman was strangled, and that the act was done for her money.

Most of the morning session was taken up by witnesses who identified maps and photographs and told of the visits of the pair to the lake and their departure in the boat on July 16.

Pair Asked for a Canoe.

Albert McDowell, boat keeper of the Ferncliffe Hotel, testified that on the first visit of Gibson and Mrs. Szabo they wanted a canoe. He gave them a heavy boat. On the second occasion, at Gibson's request, he gave them a lighter boat.

More than one laugh was caused by the testimony of Daniel De Witt, the negro who saw the pair on the lake. He was telling about the boat when Judge Tompkins asked him where it was then.

"In the water," replied De Witt. The Judge rapped for order.

"Is that the boat?" asked Mr. Wasservogel, handing a photograph to the witness.

"No," answered De Witt; "that is made of paper."

The rescue of Gibson was told of by William H. Komp, a Rutgers student, who operated the boat Torpedo. The lawyer, he said, appeared exhausted. Gibson told the persons in the launch there was a woman "there," and asked that she be sought. Komp said Gibson wore no shirt when rescued.

Miss Ethel Toussaint, stenographer, of 263 West 123d Street, New York, went in a boat with Chauncey to meet Gibson the Jay after Mrs. Szabo's death.

"It must have been awful for you to break the news to her relatives," she said to Gibson, her testimony ran.

"She has no near relatives in the country," she said he replied.

Had Cramp, Gibson Said.

"Well, that makes it easier," she commented. Gibson said the upset happened when he and the woman were changing seats. He told Miss Toussaint he had a cramp in his arm, and he was afraid he and his companion wouldn't get back to shore in time to catch his train. He also told the stenographer of the struggle in the water.

"Could she swim?" the girl asked Gibson, referring to Mrs. Szabo.

"Well," he replied, "her confidence was greater than her ability."

Mr. Elder questioned Miss Toussaint as to her curiosity in asking that question. She replied that four questions in twenty minutes were not many for a woman.

William C. De Graw, Deputy Sheriff, who found the body and arrested Gibson, testified to occurrences at the lake on days succeeding the death of Mrs. Szabo. The cross-examination was devoted principally to attempts to break down De Graw's testimony that Gibson told him he, the lawyer, was infatuated with Mrs. Szabo, and might have married her.

Testimony that followed related to the shipment of the body, its arrival in Jersey City, and its burial in New York Bay Cemetery there.

FRUIT BUYERS WIN.

Strike Ends After Compromise on Cartage Rates Is Effected.

The 300 members of the Fruit Buyers' Union who walked out of the auction rooms at Pier 20, North River, Erie Railroad, on Monday morning, protesting against the increased cartage rates imposed on them by the boss carmen, and at the same time leaving 150 carloads of good California fruit, valued at $300,000, in danger of spoiling in the yards of the Erie Railroad in Jersey City, won a victory over the carmen yesterday morning, and then business proceeded as usual.

An agreement on cartage rates was reached at a meeting between the representatives of the Fruit Buyers' Union and the California Fruit Distributors, the latter acting on behalf of the carmen employed by them, at a conference held in the offices of Steinhardt & Kelly, of 101 Park Place. The compromise rate was 3 cents a box for oranges and lemons, and 1½ cents for smaller packages, such as grapes and peaches, as compared with 5 cents and 4 cents, the old cartage rates.

The Fruit Buyers' Union was represented by J. H. Steinhardt, President of the organization, while the boss carmen were represented by Hugh Connolly, of the Connolly Auction Company; G. M. Pope, California Fruit Distributors; D. D. Black, California Fruit Growers' Exchange; Arthur Westfall, Westfall Fruit Company; and H. I. Hall, Stewart Fruit Company.

D. D. Black, of the Exchange, explained in the afternoon that the boss carmen employed by the different distributing agencies had formed themselves into a union and arbitrarily raised the cartage rates. The distributors then interfered when the serious consequences of the advance became apparent and had the rate set back.

BIG FREIGHT YARD MAROONED

With the ripping up of sixteen tracks which crossed Hamilton Avenue in Hollis, the big Holban freight yard at that place, which comprises 200 acres and has between thirty-five and forty miles of track and cost the Long Island Railroad altogether $750,000 to build, was shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning marooned from the main tracks of that railroad, and in consequence confusion in handling of freight prevailed from one end of the road to the other.

Every foot of available space in the freight yards in Long Island City and East New York was called into requisition in order to meet the emergency. The Holban yard was the main distributing point for the entire Long Island system, but as the tracks across Hamilton Avenue had been laid without proper authority they were ordered torn up by the courts at the instance of the Hollis Improvement Association. As the railroad has a few other tracks which enter the Holban yard at other points, the yard is not totally cut off from the railroad system, but its efficiency is impaired to such an extent that for the time being it is practically useless.

CAPT. WARR'S LAST VOYAGE.

Commodore of the Cunard Fleet to Retire After 49 Years at Sea.

When the Cunarder Campania sailed for Liverpool at 1 o'clock this morning Capt. R. C. Warr, Commodore of the Cunard fleet, was on the bridge for the last time as a commander of a transatlantic liner. The reason is that when the Campania arrives at Liverpool next week Commodore Warr will say farewell to the Atlantic and enter upon a well-earned retirement from active duty.

Capt. Warr is now 63 years old. For forty-nine years he has been following the sea. He will make his home in a cottage just outside of Liverpool. The cottage has a generous garden and the veteran skipper expects to spend a great deal of time cultivating his favorite flowers, the geranium and the dahlia.

"When a sailor leaves the sea," said Capt. Warr last night, "he is like a fish out of water, and I don't expect I will last much more than the allotted threescore and ten. I have been in the Cunard service thirty-three years. I regret to leave the line, and I will always remember the thousands of good friends I have made, a great many of them Americans, since I have been a commander in the transatlantic trade."

Among the passengers who sailed with Capt. Warr on his last eastward voyage were J. G. W. Aldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Cable, Staff Surgeon W. N. Horsfall of the Royal Navy and Mrs. Horsfall, and Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Keeler.

AN ORIENTAL RUG EVENT EXTRAORDINARY

R. H. MACY & CO. have secured the entire stock of the recently dissolved firm of McKelvey & Bird, Rug Collectors, Merchants' Exchange Building, Fifth Avenue and 17th Street, whose only trade was with the highest class specialty stores throughout the United States, and whose reputation as technical experts and collectors of rare pieces was of world-wide recognition. They never sold to individuals, or at retail. Macy's prices for these Rugs will be the same as McKelvey & Bird charged the retail stores.

They had on hand a magnificent collection of rare antique Oriental Rugs. These were personally and carefully selected by Mr. Myron J. Bird, who ranks as one of the foremost experts in Oriental Rugs in this country.

Mr. Bird has scoured the markets of Great Britain, Turkey in Europe, Turkey in Asia, the Rug sections of Africa, the Russian Peninsula, and Persia. During his travels, which occupied many months, he rummaged about in the out-of-the-way places and secured many rare pieces which for years had been overlooked by other collectors.

In this collection of antique Oriental Rugs are many sizes which we have never before seen. Many of them have been held as heirlooms by the original owners.

Every Rug in this collection is a veritable antique. They are in the natural state. Their mellowness of color and softness of texture have been acquired by natural wear. They have not been chemically treated in order to artifically mellow the colors, but through age and service their colors have been ripened and their lustre intensified.

You will find the original ticket on each rug. On this original ticket is their wholesale selling mark. The characters which McKelvey & Bird used as a key are as follows. You can read the prices for yourself—

LORD	WITH	US
1234	5678	90

Thus, L W T W S on the original price ticket attached means that $157.50 was the net wholesale price of that Rug to any dealer, anywhere, who bought it. And McKelvey & Bird, though they dickered many days in true Oriental fashion for a single Rug ofttimes, had one price only when they sold.

For your convenience, our own price ticket bears the corresponding figures.

Macy's, as a rule, imports its own Oriental Rugs. We have purchased the McKelvey & Bird stock because we knew of the excellence of the Rugs, and because the prices we paid for these Rugs were less than it would cost us to import them from the Far East.

If we were to sell these Rugs in the regular way of the average Rug dealer, the prices would be from one-half more to twice the prices at which we shall sell them.

MR. BIRD will be here to explain the origin and history of the Rugs he has collected and to assist those who wish his highly valuable services in making selections. He is here as your servant with the desire to see these wonderful Rugs which he has gathered with the patient devotion, the affectionate regard of the connoisseur passed to the possession of appreciative new owners. Each piece has its history, and Mr. Bird knows it as intimately as you know the nooks and corners of your own house.

For instance, just by way of illustration, Mr. Bird will probably tell you that nine of the pieces of this collection are from the Palace of Dvjer Agha, Chief Eunuch to the ex-Sultan, Abdul Hamid. A very important official was Dvjer Agha and a very rich one. In one of his Palaces when the new Government's seals were broken was found a chest of gold amounting to 80,000 pounds Sterling. His choice of Rugs for his Palace might reasonably be believed to be worthy of serious consideration for its expertness. Mr. Bird was one of the first half-dozen persons who entered the Palace after the breaking of the seals.

One Rug is from the Musee Orientale of Constantinople. Mr. Bird's endeavors to secure it covered a period of seven years.

And so on, till one almost sees the minarettes, the mellow skies, and the opaline waters of the Far East—almost hears the tinkling of camel bells and the Mohammedans at sunset prayer.

But fear not the sentiment. It is all in the history of the Rugs. Not in the prices.

At the price tag, sentiment subsides. Here only is cold, hard, business sense. One plainly marked price, and that the actual price that dealers would pay. You would have to pay them from one-half more to twice the price.

The collection consists of about 350 pieces. The sizes, the proportions, the colorings, designs and weaves are so varied that every one who appreciates a truly authentic antique can gratify his fancy while conserving his sense of economy. Such rugs are, literally, an investment. We do not promise that all these Rugs will be here when you come.

A Few Samples, Only, of These Wonderful Rugs

Remember, there are something over 350 pieces from which to select:

Antique Kazak, $100.00
8 ft. 6 in. x 5 ft. 8 in.

An old red ground with single octagonal medallion. Border in rich blue decorations geometrical. A perfect specimen in perfect condition.

Antique Bushire, $65.00
8 ft. 3 in. x 3 ft. 9 in.

Antique Bergama, $65.00
6 ft. 11 in. x 4 ft. 8 in.

A soft pink ground, with quaint geometrical medallion, border of Chinese yellow, very thick and shaggy, quite on the order of the Yurouk, but still a well defined Bergama.

Antique Kazak, $150.00
7 ft. 5 in. x 5 ft. 8 in.

Undoubtedly one of the finest examples of the old Kazak weavery to be seen. A large medallion of clouded green occupies the entire centre. It is surrounded by an ivory band, carrying the signs of Zoroaster. The outer border is most unique. It is unusually fine quality and is in superb condition.

Antique Kazak, $95.00
7 ft. 11 in. x 6 ft.

Antique Hamadan, $35.00
6 ft. 6 in. x 3 ft. 11 in.

A moresque ground in two shades of natural wool, carries a small diamond-shaped medallion. The main border is azure blue, the outer border band in browns.

Bergama, $40.00
6 ft. 2 in. x 4 ft. 5 in.

Antique Bergama, $90.00
5 ft. 10 in. x 5 ft. 7 in.

An old red ground, with principal medallion of sage green, which in its turn bears a small medallion of a soft red, with a centre of salmon color.

Antique Bergama, $35.00
5 ft. 7 in. x 3 ft. 11 in.

Antique Backtier, $300.00
10 ft. 9 in. x 9 ft. 6 in.

Antique Hamadan, $56.00
5 ft. 9 in. x 4 ft.

Antique Mujur, $65.00
5 ft. x 4 ft. 3 in.

Antique Serebend, $95.00
6 ft. 9 in. x 3 ft. 11 in.

The typical so-called palm leaf design, surrounded by a saw tooth design which bears quaint little conventionalized human, animal and bird figures.

Antique Shiraz, $35.00
6 ft. 9 in. x 4 ft. 5 in.

Undoubtedly made by the Kurds of the Shiraz district, as it is much heavier and shaggier than the conventional Shiraz.

Antique Bergama, $35.00
6 ft. 1 in. x 5 ft. 4 in.

A wild, shaggy, heavy rug, which would make a most interesting addition to any collection of rare pieces.

Antique Anatolian, $75.00
7 ft. 3 in. x 5 ft.

A splendid specimen in perfect preservation.

Antique Bergama, $70.00
7 ft. x 5 ft. 4 in.

Azure blue corner pieces and medallions on a field of old red. Border of old red, with decorations in blue, ivory and yellow. An excellent type.

Antique Herez, $475.00
13 ft. 8 in. x 11 ft. 5 in.

A soft red ground bears a large ivory colored medallion, which in its turn bears a smaller medallion of clouded indigo blue. The corners embracing the red ground are most beautiful clouded azure blue, decorated with a most excellent example of the old fish pattern. On each of the four corners is shown a dancing Dervish. The inner border on indigo blue band bears flowing vine decoration, interrupted with palmettes. This splendid old example was in the possession of the Musee Orientale for nine years. The collector believes it to be the best example of veritable antique Herez for sale in America.

Antique Meles, $30.00
5 ft. 5 in x 4 ft. 1 in.

Fine quality soft dull colors. 8 stripes of a design usually well employed as a border constitute the entire centre. The rug is unusually preserved. Most unique.

Antique Bergama, $40.00
4 ft. 11 in. x 3 ft. 7 in.

Antique Cabistan, $65.00
12 ft. 4 in. x 3 ft. 2 in.

The Abbeside design in perfection. Very narrow ivory border decorated with conventionalized flowers.

Antique Yhordies, $350.00
6 ft. 3 in. x 4 ft. 3 in.

Prayer design, sage green Mihrab, with pendant in rich ivory and brown. Border bands perfect examples of the lily and carnation design. Main border decorated with rose of Sharon. Unusually fine and well preserved.

Antique Shiraz—$585.00
23 ft. 5 in. x 10 ft. 7 in.

A magnificent old carpet. No doubt woven to order for the same Palace from which the above carpet came. It is quite similar in color, but differs entirely in design. An indigo blue field is primarily entirely covered by the Herati design. In addition there are three rows of bold medallions, the centre one being geometrical, and the outer rows oval. Like the preceding carpet, it is in perfect condition.

Antique Rhodian, $75.00
9 ft. 10 in. x 2 ft. 11 in.

A clouded chocolate ground, bears a succession of five azure blue medallions which are cut off from the brown by swatches of soft red. On each side and across each end just inside the border band are rows of the old carnation design in perfection. The border, an azure blue matching that of the medallions. An absolutely perfect specimen and most unusual.

Antique Anatolian, $50.00
10 ft. 4 in. x 3 ft. 7 in.

This splendid old example bears on its yellow border the Rhodian lily design in perfection. Medallions in sparkling colors, typical of the Anatolian.

Antique Bergama, $78.00
6 ft. 5 in. x 4 ft. 9 in.

From the collection of James & Geo. P. Baker, of London. A very unusual salmon colored ground, with decorations in soft red, green, ivory and brown. This piece was held by the Messrs. Baker for 20 years at a prohibitive price, during which time many collectors made offers for it, but were unable to obtain it.

Antique Cabistan, $75.00
11 ft. 6 in. x 3 ft. 4 in.

HOE SALE TOTAL TAKES BIG JUMP

$15,200 FOR A MANUSCRIPT

It was one of the record days yesterday in the sale of the library of Robert Hoe by the Anderson Auction Company. For last night's session alone the total brought by 133 items was more than $65,000. The $1,800,000 mark was early passed, and when the last item of the day was sold the grand total was within $39,000 of $1,900,000. The forty-seven manuscripts dispersed during the evening made possible this great sum. One of them, the "Officia," a magnificent manuscript on vellum of the early part of the sixteenth century, brought $15,200, which is the eighth highest price of the entire sale. The only items in the four parts which have sold for larger amounts are the Gutenberg Bible on vellum, $50,000; Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte D'Arthur," printed by William Caxton, $42.800; the Pembroke Hours, $33,000; the Gutenberg Bible on paper, $27,500; the Hours of Anne de Beaujen, $24,000; Helyas' "Knight of the Swanne," printed on vellum by Wynkyn de Worde, $21,000 and the Missale Romanum, a fourteenth century manuscript executed for Charles VI. of France, $18,900.

The total for the day's two sessions was $72,362.50, of which $6,968 was for the afternoon and $65,394.50 for the evening. The total for Part IV., now isl $191,820.50, and the grand total to date, $1,861,005.50.

Keen Fight for "Officia."

George D. Smith and F. S. Ferguson, Bernard Quaritch's agent, were the chief competitors for the "Officia." There were others, Dr. Leo Berg of Frankfort-on-Main among them, who were anxious to obtain the valuable work, but when the bidding passed the $14,000 mark they were all out of the contest, except Smith and Ferguson. The latter kept on until $15,000 was reached and then stopped. Mr. Smith's additional bid of $200 won the prize for him.

Messrs. Smith and Quaritch had another battle royal for a manuscript, "Hours of the Virgin Mary," manuscript on vellum, of the beginning of the sixteenth century, written in Roman characters, black, gold, and blue with calendar, a work executed in the Northeast of France. Mr. Smith won the bidding by a bid of $4,000.

Bernard Quaritch, however, defeated Mr. Smith by bidding $6,500 for another "Hours" manuscript on vellum of the first half of the fifteenth century, written in Gothic characters, red and black, and with the calendar in gold, blue, and red.

The other manuscripts sold as follows:

"Hours," on vellum, fifteenth century, written in Gothic characters, executed in the north of France, probably Rouen or Chartres, 217 octavo leaves, fourteen large and five small and beautiful miniatures, all the pages of the calendar surrounded by borders, $3,750. (Dr. Leo Berg. Messrs. Smith and Quaritch, the under bidders.)

"Hours," on vellum, fifteenth century, in Gothic characters, probably executed at Rouen or in the neighborhood, 127 octavo leaves thirteen large and fifty-two small miniatures, calendar with elegant borders, in brown levant morocco binding by David, from the Bordes collection, $2,300. (Smith.)

"Hours," on vellum, early part of the fifteenth century, written in Gothic characters, executed in the east of France, possibly Besancon, 115 quarto leaves, fifteen large miniatures, all the other pages with lateral borders, $2,300. (Smith.)

"The Montboissier Hours."

"Hours," on vellum, fifteenth century, in gothic characters, probably executed in the North of France for a member of the family of the Counts of Montboissier in Auvergne, 189 octavo leaves, twelve large miniatures, in old French red morocco binding. The arms of Jean de Bouchet, "conseiller et maitre d'hotel" of the King, in the centre of each cover, $2,600, (Quarich, James F. Drake underbidder.)

"Hours," in vellum of the fifteenth centurn, in gothic characters, executed in France, 210 octavo leaves, twenty-three full-page miniatures, in brown levant morocco binding by Riviere, $1,900, (Quaritch.)

"Hours," in vellum, fifteenth century, in gothic characters, probably executed at Rouen or in the neighborhood, 120 octavo leaves, eleven large and sixteen small miniatures, in sixteenth century Lyonnese binding in calf, with the name Marie Chariot on each side, $1,500, (Ernest Dressel North.)

"Hours," in vellum, fifteenth century, written in letters batrades, executed in the Northeast of France, 118 octavo leaves, twelve large and twenty-nine small miniatures, $3,200, (Smith.)

"Hours," on vellum, in gothic characters, probably executed in England in the first half of the fifteenth century, 168 small quarto leaves, twenty-seven fine miniatures, in binding by Chambolle-Durer.

Petrarcha "Irionfe" Fetches $3,750.

"Trionfe" of Francesca Petrarcha, on vellum, written in humanistic characters, executed at Florence, about the end of the fifteenth century, forty-three narrow quarto leaves, six fine architectural and ornamental borders in the best manner of the Italian Renaissance, binding by Trauntz-Bauzonnet, probably written and illuminated for Lorenzo de Medici or some member of his family, bearing the arms of the Medici, $3,750, (Quaritch.)

"L'Etiquette des temps," by Alexandre Sauvaige, French manuscript, on vellum, of the sixteenth century, three large miniatures, 127 large initials, executed for Francois de Roche Chonart, to whom it is dedicated and whose arms are emblazoned in several places, $1,950, (Dr. Baer. This same item was sold in Part I for $2,000, but was bought by mistake.)

"Hours," on vellum, fifteenth century, executed in north of France, 182 leaves, twelve full large minatures, $560. (Smith.)

"Office of the Virgin Mary," on vellum, fifteenth century, 159 leaves, fifteen full-page miniatures, $625, (Smith.)

A copy of the first English edition of Sir Thomas More's "Utopia," octavo, black letter, "Imprinted at London by Abraham Vele, dwelling in Pauls churchyarde at the signe of the Lambe, Anno 1551," was knocked down, at the afternoon session, to Mr. Smith for $465.

George S. Hellman paid $470 for "Oeuvres de Molière," six volumes, 8vo, printed in Paris in 1773 by "La Compagnie des Librairies Associés."

There will be two more sessions to-day, the seventy-fourth and seventy-fifth of the entire sale.

Richard King Portolan Map Brings $14,600 at Anderson's.

Eight portolan charts from the collection of the late Dr. Theodore Jules Ernest Hamy of Paris, the eminent geographer and ethnographer, sold for $18,100 at the Anderson Auction Company's rooms last evening. The most important of the lot, known as the Richard King portolan chart, brought the large amount of $14,600.

Dr. Leo Baer of Frankfort-on-Main and an American private collector whose name the auction company would not reveal were the chief competitors. It was finally knocked down to Dr. Baer.

This chart was executed about 1501, only nine years after the discovery of America by Columbus, and probably soon after the return of Cabral in the Summer of 1501. It is believed to be the second known chart or map showing the American continent and the first to mark Cape Race and the discoveries of the Portuguese on the east coast of Africa.

The other seven charts sold as follows; Italian manuscript, on vellum of the fifteenth century, $975, (Dr. Baer;) manuscript on vellum, drawn for Francesco de Lauria, Duque de Terra Scala (Calabria,) by Gabriel di Vallsecha of Majorca, signed and dated 1447, $650, (bought on order;) manuscript on vellum, drawn by Giacomo Russo of Messina, signed and dated 1557, $250, (bought on order;) manuscript on vellum, drawn by Dominicus Vigliarodus of Palermo, signed and dated 1577, $550, order;) Dutch manuscript on vellum of the sixteenth century, representing the Atlantic Ocean with part of Newfoundland and Sable Island, $850, (order;) French manuscript atlas, of the seventeenth century, $150, (order;) and atlas executed by Claude Arnaud of Marseilles, 1660, $75, (order.)

Grand Jury Refuses to Indict Dencker

The Grand Jury yesterday refused to indict Otto Dencker, a realty broker of 3 West 104th Street, who was arrested on a charge of slashing Frederick S. Judson of Chicago, Ill. Dencker found Judson in his apartments visiting his wife and, seizing a knife, drove the young man from the house. The Grand Jury decided that no crime had been committed by Dencker. Judson appeared before the Grand Jury.

Sulzer Names Schermerhorn.

Gov.-elect William Sulzer announced yesterday the appointment of Capt. E. Gibert Schermerhorn as military secretary. Capt. Schermerhorn is a member of the Seventh Regiment Veteran Association, Thirteenth Regiment Veteran Association and the 112th Regiment Veteran Association. He belongs to the Military Society and Veteran Corps of Artillery, 1812; Sons of the Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, St. Nicholas Society and the Holland Society.

SHANTON BACK AFTER QUIETING PORTO RICO

Chief of the Insular Police There Since He Stilled Panama and Drove Out Revolutionists.

COWBOY AND A ROUGH RIDER

Col. George R. Shanton, Chief of the Insular Police of Porto Rico, arrived at the Imperial yesterday, accompanied by Peter Nelson, General Field Manager of the Porto Rico Mines Company. This is Col. Shanton's first visit home in almost ten years, for he originally came from New York, though he did leave early and go West.

Something like twenty-eight years Shanton spent as cow puncher and plainsman in Wyoming and Montana, and then, when the Rough Riders were being formed, he got together eighty-four cowboys and took them to Washington, and later went to Cuba as Captain of Troop C, in the Second Regiment of United States Volunteer Cavalry. He remained in Cuba four years, assisting after the war in organizing the Cuban Rurales. Then Roosevelt sent him to Panama in 1904 to be Chief of Police in the Canal Zone. After five years of successful work in "cleaning up" the Zone, he was sent to Porto Rico to take charge of the work of preserving law and order there.

"Our police force consists practically of a constabulary of 1,000 men," said Col. Shanton yesterday. The island is divided into sixty-six districts, with the same number of captains or chiefs at their head. All police matters are handled directly from the headquarters in San Juan and we control the cities and the inland country. We have 'confrontas,' or patrols, and we have 180 mounted men. I have introduced into Porto Rico the traffic policeman on horseback, who is stationed in the suburbs, and he is a great success.

"All of the police are Porto Ricans, with one exception. There used to be a great many Americans on the force, but now the only one is the Chief of Detectives.

"As an illustration of the efficiency of the corps, I may mention that the elections in Porto Rico were pulled off without a disturbance, which anybody who has been in a Latin-American country at such a time might consider exceptional. As for the report that an American flag was pulled down at Arroya and trampled upon, that, I think, was a misrepresentation. It is true that the Unionists won all the seats in the Legislature except one, but they are devoted to the flag.

"I believe that if Porto Ricans had all voted in the last election for President, Roosevelt would have got 1,200,000 out of the 1,300,000 population. Of course, everybody there expects a fine administration from Wilson.

"After I had things cleared up a bit down there I decided to go after professional criminals, who had been escaping unpunished, and to that end I sent a circular letter to all the Captains to write out for me the circumstances of every old arrest they could remember. In this way I obtained data that have enabled me to get many professional criminals.

"One of the most notorious of these cases was that of Pedro Ferrer Pomales, a famous outlaw, who had escaped from the penitentiary sixteen times in the last twenty years. He had murdered some eight or nine peons and 'queridas,' or sweethearts, of his. The records before 1893 were in such confusion that it was impossible to tell what he had done before that, but on April 23 of that year the body of Thomas McDonald of Boston, a mining prospector, was found in a shack near Guayama, terribly mutilated. There were twenty-eight machete wounds on it, and the motive had undoubtedly been robbery, because McDonald had been working a very rich mine and was known to have taken out large quantities of ore.

"Suspicion fell on Pomales, his brother Jose, and Jose Ayala. The Guardia Civil, in an investigation, found that the three had recently been released from prison, and had been seen in the neighborhood the evening before McDonald's body was found. From that time until 1904 Pomales played hide and seek, first with the Guardia Civil and then with the Insular police. He committed many revolting crimes.

"Well, last March he was reported as being particularly active in the mining district where Peter Nelson lives, and the rumor was that he was 'laying' for Nelson. It seemed time to go after him and get him right. So I detailed Dario Suarez, a detective, and Haddock and Vasquez, two very efficient policemen, to go into the mountains and bring him back dead or alive. The neighborhood where he was working was right near Jagome Alto, where the Governor has his Summer home, and as Gov. Colton stays there a great deal alone at night. I felt things were not safe for him.

"The three men reached, at daylight, an intersection of roads where Pomales had the habit of passing. Nelson had informed us that the outlaw was living with his 'querida,' near a fort in the Carmen mountains, the 'querida' tending a little banana patch around the place. It was Pomales's custom every morning to walk over to a fork of the mountains from which he could see all the country about, and then plan his day's programme.

A New and Needed Idea IN MEN'S CLOTHING

This new idea in Men's Clothing embodies the character of custom tailoring with the convenience of finding it ready to wear. The economy effected is another factor that commends it.

The clothing we feature is made under expert tailor supervision. The workmanship is faultless, the fashions authentic and dignified; the fabrics stylish and exclusive.

We do not aim to do the largest clothing business. Our appeal is confined to particular men.

Men, careful about dress, will appreciate how entirely different these clothes are from garments found in "clothing stores." They save the delay and added cost of having apparel made to measure. And this without sacrificing individuality.

MOUNTED POLICE IN HORSE SHOW DRILL

NESTOR WINS CUP FOR U. S. A.

Mounted Service School Charger Captures International Honors—Disagreement Among Judges.

The presence of Mayor William J. Gaynor as an honored guest, another noteworthy triumph by the United States Army officers, a "break" among the judges in which one of the foreign officials refused to sign an award, the overthrow of some former show champions and a general class of performances superior to those that have gone before, made the third day of the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden stand out decidedly above the two previous days. Society was again out in force, although not in such large numbers as on Monday evening, and the success of the exhibition from a social standpoint, which seemed a bit doubtful at first, is practically assured.

Mayor Gaynor and Police Commissioner Waldo attended the show last night to view the exhibition of the mounted police, inaugurated last year and now regarded as one of the distinct features of the national shows. Last night's drill was far ahead of the 1911 exhibition, and the foreign officers who are here as competitors took occasion to congratulate Capt. Thomas Meyers for the high-class exhibition which was given under his charge.

Thirty-one mounted policemen made up the squad which gave the exhibition drill, and their work proved the most interesting of any event yet staged at the show. There were twenty-nine in the detail which rode into the ring, the officer in charge and his bugler making up the squad. For almost a half-hour they went through the various evolutions in response to the bugle signals or the orders from the Captain, and their work was greeted with a succession of cheers. The "charge," when the entire squad swept down the arena at full speed from the Fourth Avenue end, bringing up to a full stop at the Madison Avenue end of the building, was the spectacular feature of the exhibition. At the conclusion of the drill Patrolman John J. Russell was the choice of the judges for the first prize, the other three going to Sergt. J. W. O'Keefe, Patrolman Edward Gray, and Sergt. John A. Park, in the order named.

United States Army officers figured in another noteworthy triumph over foreign officers in the afternoon, when the second international contest was put on. It was the class for chargers of the light and middleweight divisions up to carrying from 160 to 180 pounds, and as in the heavyweight division for the same type on Monday, the United States carried off three of the four ribbons. The victory was more sweeping yesterday, however, as they missed the red ribbon in the opening contest, and in this one they got all except the white. It was by the narrowest of margins, too, that the United States did not get all four ribbons.

Poppy, the bay gelding ridden by Capt. Ben Lear, which was the only American horse to get a ribbon in the international jumping competition on Monday night, finishing a close second to Spes, the big brown gelding of Lieut. C. H. Labouchere of the Royal Holland Hussars, barely missed getting fourth place yesterday. One of Poppy's hind hoofs struck one of the jumps and spoiled an otherwise perfect performance. This slight mistake paved the way for Lieut. Labouchere to get a ribbon, this time with his bay gelding Dreadnought.

Sixteen chargers answered the bugle call in this contest, which was open to all nations and to all branches of the service. Of this number ten were United States Army officers, Belgium, Holland, Canada, and England furnishing the other contestants. From the start the work of the home delegation stood out brilliantly, despite some high-class riding by the foreign competitors. Nestor, a chestnut gelding from the United States Mounted Service School, was the judges' as well as the popular choice for the blue, Capt. Guy V. Henry, who rode Chiswell to victory in the heavyweight division, riding Bazan in second place. A mighty cheer sounded through the Garden when "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played in recognition of the victory of the United States officers.

The first big sale of the show was reported yesterday, when Edward Beale McLean of Washington, son of John R. McLean, paid $10,000 for Albin Wildfire, the five-year-old chestnut hackney stallion, brought over for this year's show by Robert Briggs, an English breeder. Albin Wildfire won the blue Monday morning in the class for hackney stallions, four years old or over. He has style enough for heavy harness, but is intended for the stud. Mr. McLean has a country home near the Chevy Chase Club, in the suburbs of Washington, and he has been getting a choice collection of hackney breeding stock and harness horses. They have chiefly exhibited at the Washington Horse Show. This is one of the largest sums paid for a hackney horse, although the record price is just double the sum paid by Mr. McLean yesterday. W. Seward Webb paid $20,000 in 1892 for the imported chestnut horse Matchless of Londesborough.

The individual race for blue ribbons shaped up yesterday as likely to be an easy victory for Judge William H. Moore, who had won two blues on each of the previous days of the show. Yesterday he added three more to his collection, while Miss H. D. Atterbury, who was on even terms with him at the close of the judging on Monday night, was at the same figure which she held then—four blues. Miss Atterbury did not compete in any of the classes yesterday, while Mr. Moore got first honors in each of the three classes in which his horses were shown.

The rivalry between the Harriman and Moore entries in the harness horse division was continued yesterday, and besides bringing out a decidedly strong protest from the spectators on one decision it caused a break among the judges themselves and harsh words by people most affected by the decision. It was in Class 49 for harness horses in pairs that the trouble broke. Mr. Moore behind his brown mares Menella and Phyllis was awarded the white ribbon over Harriman's brown team, driven by Jack Donnelly. One of the competitors declared after the event that William Foster, the English judge, had refused to sign his name to the card declaring Moore's entry the winner. This is a most unusual situation, as the judges are usually a unit in this respect. Mr. Foster could not see how Lady Dilham and Elegant Dilham, driven by Donnelly, could lose the blue, and he took a most positive stand in the matter. The spectators did not know what was transpiring at the judges' stand, but they had opinions of their own about the decision, and they made no efforts to hide their feelings. Mr. Moore drove his winning team around the track, but there was hardly a sound—in decided contrast to conditions greeting all other winners of the day. When Donnelly started his team around the arena the crowd broke out in the heartiest cheer that has been accorded any rider or driver since the show commenced. Three times the Harriman horses were driven around the show ring, the noise increasing in volume all the time until the team had been driven through the gate. It was one of the most remarkable demonstrations ever given at a Garden show.

The battle between the United States and the foreign army officers for international honors was completely reversed in the evening contest for jumpers, in which officers and Government horses only could compete. Sixty-seven jumpers were entered in this class for the Canadian Challenge Cup, and the United States delegation could get no better than the white ribbon. The blue went to England, when Capt. Mervyn Crawshay of the Fifth Dragoon Guards brought his brown mare Princess Charlotte over the barriers in almost faultless fashion. Two Belgian horses, both ridden by Lieut. Delvoie of the Third Lancers, Belgium, won the red and yellow ribbons.

MANY NEW SOCIETY PATRONS.

Mrs. Payne Whitney Among Those Making First Visit to Exhibition

The third day of the Horse Show brought out a large and fashionable patronage, and many new faces were noticed in the boxes and among the promenaders.

Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt had with her in Box 13 at the night session Mrs. Sydney J. Colford, Jr., and Mrs. J. McCarty Little. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Gary occupied Box 37. Sir Edward Clouston and Lady Clouston were in Box 34.

Mrs. Payne Whitney and her little son and daughter were in the Harry Payne Whitney box, No. 29, at the afternoon session, this being Mrs. Whitney's first visit to the exhibition. She wore a coat of black velvet with brown fox and black velvet turban.

Mrs. Sydney S. Breese was with Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt during the afternoon, and others who came in for the first time included Mrs. Richard Stevens, Mrs. Nelson H. Henry, Miss Amy R. Sloan, Mrs. Burke Roche, Miss Anna Sands, Countess Festetics, Miss Dorothy Wilde, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Palmer Knapp, John D. Crimmins, Mrs. John D. Crimmins, Jr., Miss Crimmins, and Elisha Dyer.

IN RING WITH JUDGES.

P. A. Clark Thrown from His Hunter, but Escapes with a Shake-Up.

Four stallion classes, two classes for hunters, and one for Shetland brood mares made up the judges' work in the morning session. One of the stallion classes was for thoroughbreds, the only class for this type of horse in the show. John E. Madden, the noted Kentucky breeder, was the judge, the only class in the show presided over by one judge. Mr. Madden showed his usual quickness and accuracy, and only eleven minutes were required in reaching the decisions for ribbon winners. The blue went to Uncas Chief, the big bay by Ben Strome-Passion Flower and owned by Mrs. T. L. Watt of Hartsdale, N. Y. Opposed to the winner were such noted oldtimers as Chilton, Water Color, and Alan-a-Dale. The ribbons were awarded in the order named, Mr Madden deciding that Uncas Chief was more suitable for improving the breed of horses for general use. The winner does not rank with the others from a racing standpoint, but this was not considered in the judging.

Horace Junior, a bay pony stallion, got the blue in the class for pony stallions other than Shetlands. Allan Pinkerton's Booger Red, noted at local hunt meetings, was a competitor in this class, but reached the gates too late to enter. Booger Red would undoubtedly have been outclassed in type. Aaron, a chestnut stallion from the Willisden Farm, New Centreville, Penn., got the blue among the three-year-old hackney stallions, and William du Pont's imported Chief Inspector won the blue among the two-year-olds. Mr. du Pont had three homebreds in this class.

Charles E. Bunn of Peoria continued his successes with the Shetland classes by getting first and second in the class for Shetland brood mares with Kancetto and Ovilta. Five of the seven Shetlands competing were black, unusual in this breed of pony.

Hunters had the ring for the closing classes of the morning and they furnished all sorts of thrills, with one mishap. P. A. Clark of Newport, who was the ultimate winner of the blue on Flying Machine in the class for novice hunters, was thrown while riding Nicholas, and the hoof of Heno II. struck the fallen rider on the head, but luckily it was only a glancing blow. The rider was up in a second, but one of the horse's legs was held by the fence bars and a bar had to be sawed before the animal was released.

Harness horse classes were quite numerous in the afternoon session, five of the eleven judged being of this type. As was expected, Judge William H. Moore was the principal winner, but in one instance the decision of the judges was decidedly unpopular.

In the class for pairs between 14.2 and 15.3 hands six teams were entered, but the contest revolved simply around the Harriman entry, Lady Dilham and Elegant Dilham, driven by Jack Donnelly, and Mr. Moore's team, Menella and Phyllis, with the owner handling the reins. The judges deliberated a long time before making an award and finally sent the two teams around the track again. The style of the Harriman entry had taken the crowd's fancy from the start, and when the blue was finally awarded to Mr. Moore there was only faint applause as he drove the winners around the track. When Donnelly followed behind the Harriman pair he was greeted with the most enthusiastic reception accorded any rider or driver during the show.

Women owners or drivers made a clean sweep in the class for ponies in harness, a little girl holding the reins for Judge Moore's Princess Cardiff, which got another blue for the New Yorker. His bay pair, Lord and Lady Seaton, won as handily in the class for the Brewster Cup. As in the other class in which this pair showed, there was really no contest, as the other competitors ranked far behind this wonderful pair.

The class for trotters at the afternoon session brought out five horses with records of 2:30 or better, and the blue went to William M. V. Hoffman's Teneriffe, a former winner which has been prominent in the show rings for the past three years. Brother Spier, E. T. Stotesbury's bay gelding, which won in this class last year, managed to get the red, although showing far below his usual form. Gail Constantine was the most stylish horse in the competition, but broke repeatedly and had to be content with third place.

The action of the judges in Class 37, for roadster pairs, recalled one of the most unpleasant incidents of recent years at the Garden when a well-known veterinary left the show after long service. E. T. Stotesbury had entered his bay mares, Ruby and Norcata, winners in the past two shows, but they were quickly gated when the judges discovered two bog spavins and a bad tendon. There was much fault found with the decisions of previous shows, the other competitors contending that the horses were lame. The blue finally went to Horatio N. Bain's team, Frances Bain and Quartermaster Robbins. The awards:

FOIL BURGLARS FIVE TIMES.

The O'Connors Will Repel Next Attack with Stones from Roof.

Five times in the last month burglars have tried to jimmy their way into the apartment on the ground floor of 180 East Fifth Street, in the Parkville section of Brooklyn, occupied by William Edward O'Connor, assistant treasurer of the Majestic Theatre in Brooklyn. Five times they have been frightened away before they could steal anything.

The fifth attempt was made in the early hours of yesterday morning, and later in the day the thoroughly aroused household made plans for future protection. The younger O'Connors made several trips to a vacant lot and brought back heavy stones. These were put on the roof, whither, the next time the burglar is heard in the offing, the O'Connors will repair and hurl the stones down on the unguarded felon below.

Shoved beneath the door yesterday morning, Mr. O'onnor found a scarcely legible note in pencil, part of which said: "Beware, we'll get you yet."

Randall Parrish's New Novel
GORDON CRAIG
Soldier of Fortune

TAKE a young fellow of spirit, just discharged from the army and up against it financially, offer him ten thousand dollars for a risky piece of work, and he'll take it on just as Gordon Craig did.

His job was to impersonate the missing heir to a valuable estate to save it from dispersal, and to do it he had to find a girl to act the part of his wife.

Then things began to happen thick and fast. Craig and the girl got out of one situation only to fall into a worse one, and it was only their nerve and resourcefulness that carried them through. Like all Mr. Parrish's stories, it's full of action and a sure enough thriller. This one fairly hums.

A New Kind of Western Story
Pancho McClish
By HERBERT COOLIDGE

A BORN philosopher is Pancho, and although only fifteen years old can ride and break a horse with any "buster" in the country. His father is an itinerant horse trader, and their wanderings take them all over Texas, Arizona and California.

Pancho is really the head of the outfit—never at a loss and always with an eye to the main opportunity. The ingenious ways in which he makes money even in the most unpromising circumstances are highly amusing.

The story stamps Mr. Coolidge as a humorous and sympathetic observer of life, with a thorough knowledge of the real West.

New York, October 17, 1912.

"I was troubled with acne (or pimples) for three years. My face was broken out with pimples, and would at times get like raw meat. I tried all sorts of salves and soaps. I received samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and they helped me very much. After using them I bought the regular size of each, and my face is now perfectly clear and smooth. My friends are asking me what I used, and I shall be glad to recommend Resinol."

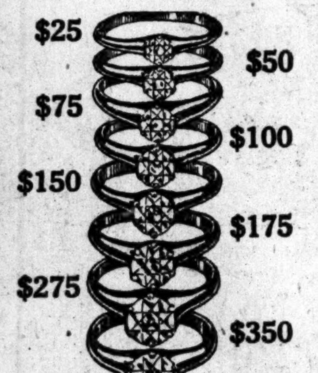
Diamond Prices Without Middlemen's Profits

There is much talk these days about saving on prices by sidetracking the middleman. WE DID IT YEARS AGO when we began buying diamonds of the cutters in Europe, paying spot cash for large quantities, importing the diamonds direct and making the mountings and setting in our own factory, which is run as economically as first-class work will allow.



That is why we can sell fine color superbly cut SOLITAIRE DIAMOND ENGAGEMENT RINGS like those here illustrated at the low prices quoted. They are importer's prices, and you will realize when you compare them with prices at other stores what Lambert economy means to you. Mountings are solid 14-karat or 18-karat gold or platinum. WE GUARANTEE ALL DIAMONDS.

GRAND JURY HAS EVIDENCE

Special to The New York Times.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Nov. 19.—J. Frank Hickey is locked up in the village jail here on suspicion of having killed Joseph Josephs, 6 years old, in Lackawanna, N. Y., on Oct. 12, 1911, and if he is proved to be guilty of that crime the police think it will be possible to show that he also killed Michael Ricac Kruck, newsboy, in New York in December, 1902, and that the mysterious murders of many other boys all over the country may be traced to him. The reason for that belief is the similarity in the deaths of several of the children. The Kruck boy was strangled, and physicians say the death of the Josephs boy also was caused by strangulation, although his body was so badly mutilated as to make a post morten almost impossible.

Hickey first was suspected of having killed the Josephs boy when John Hoskyn, chief millwright of the American Chemical Agricultural Works in Buffalo, compared a letter he had received from Hickey with the writing on several of the postal cards received by the Buffalo police from the alleged murderer. It was said the same hand had written both the letter and the cards. The messages on the cards gave so many particulars of the killing of the boys that the police were sure the murderer had written them.

The letter to Hoskyn was sent from Whiting, about seven miles from this place. Particulars were sent to Sheriff Tilton. He went to Whiting to-day, and from there journeyed to the Keswick, colony near that village. The colony is a philanthropic institution for the accommodation of habitual drinkers.

The Sheriff inquired for Hickey, who was working in a field. Hickey, when told he was under arrest, showed no alarm. He coolly inquired:

"Murder," said the Sheriff. Hickey

"What is the charge?"

smiled and said:

"That is a serious charge."

The Sheriff told Hickey he would have to go to Toms River. The prisoner readily consented. With the Sheriff and his assistant close at his heels, Hickey went to his room and washed and dressed himself. Then he packed his clothes neatly in a suitcase and said cheerfully:

"Now I'm all ready."

Mrs. Dora Raws, matron of the institution, was greatly grieved by the arrest. She expressed confidence that Hickey was innocent of the charge. She credited him with gentleness, docility, and industry. Then it came out that Hickey had been an inmate of the institution from Dec. 4, 1910, to April 2, 1911. Mrs. Raws said he returned to the institution last Wednesday, and was very much the worse for drink.

When Hickey walked to the railroad station between county officers he spoke in low tones. In bearing and speech he appeared to be educated.

Sheriff Tilton gave the Warden of the little brick jail here strict orders that nobody was to see Hickey, and that the prisoner should not be permitted to talk. Hickey's arrest was telegraphed to the Buffalo police, and a reply was received saying that detectives were on their way to get the prisoner. Hickey said to the Sheriff:

"I am innocent of any murder. I have committed no crime. I am willing to go to Buffalo, and shall make no trouble for the New York State authorities."

He afterward said he wished to see a lawyer. William H. Jeffreys called on him. The two had a long talk. When it was over, Mr. Jeffreys said Hickey repeated the assertion that he was innocent of any crime. The attorney added that no difficulty would be placed in the way of the policemen coming from Buffalo. He also said the law would have to be obeyed, and that no prisoner had the power to waive his rights. A writ must be obtained before Hickey could be taken away, he pointed out, and he said that might take a week or ten days.

Mr. Jeffreys was asked if Hickey had accounted for his whereabouts on the days when Josephs and Kruck were murdered. He seemed to be sure his client could prove an alibi for each day, but he admitted that Hickey made a statement to him that in substance was as follows:

> I was in Buffalo at the time of the disappearance of the Josephs boy, and I was in New York when the body of the Kruck boy was found, but I had nothing whatever to do with the killing of those boys.

Mr. Jeffreys asked Hickey to account for his movements in the last few weeks, and the prisoner said:

> I was in Boston for some time, and I came to New York a week ago Monday and stopped at Smith & McNell's Hotel. A job was offered to be in New York and I was anxious to go to work, but I had been drinking heavily and I was not fit for work, so I made up my mind to go to the colony and sober up before applying for the job.

Hickey added that he worked for the Cement Construction Company in Buffalo, and for Roberts, Brown & Co., steel manufacturers in Lackawanna. He said he always worked hard, and that he never had been in any criminal trouble. The prisoner told his lawyer he was divorced, and that he had a son 21 years old. Asked where his son was, he replied:

"I don't want anybody to know that. What is the use of having him worried?"

Mr. Jeffreys was told about the many postal cards in the same handwriting which the Buffalo authorities had received and which indicated that the writer had committed many vicious crimes. His attention also was called to the fact that two of those cards were postmarked Boston, the city Hickey had left when he arrived in New York a week ago last Monday. He appeared to think those were only interesting coincidences and of no special value in proving a man guilty of murder.

One of the cards from the alleged murderer said, "my son is married and happy." Mr. Jeffreys did not know whether Hickey's son was married.

J. F. Hickey Once in Lawrence Jail.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 19.—A man who gave his name as John F. Hickey was arrested here Aug. 5 last on charges of drunkenness and an attack on a boy. The drunkenness charge was continued, but on the other accusation he was fined $5. As he could not pay the fine, he was committed to jail for a short term. He first gave the name Thomas Hickey.

On the day of his arrest the police were called by telephone from a box factory near the Boston & Maine Railroad track. The bluecoats found Hickey in the clutches of two brakemen. Near by was a small boy. The brakemen said the man was beating the boy when they found him. Hickey told the police he met the boy in Essex Street, and beat him because the lad tried to rob him. He said he had given the youngster a watch and 40 cents to hold, and that the boy refused to give them back. Hickey had lived here only a few weeks. After his discharge he left the city.

Inquiry at places frequented by Hickey here brought out that when sober he was refined and intelligent, dressing neatly and using good language. He was known to companions as Frank. Hickey was employed in a woolen mill here, and at other times was engaged in concrete work or other jobs for the engineer's office. Acquaintances said they understood Hickey went to school in Buffalo, where he gained a friend in a man who became an official of a Lawrence mill.

Many Witnesses Are Called.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—Wesley C. Dudley, District Attorney, to-day announced that he considered the evidence against J. Frank Hickey of sufficient importance to warrant its presentation to the Grand Jury. He immediately began swearing witnesses and had them tell their stories to the Grand Jurors, who already were in session. Among those called were Talmadge Blass, Superintendent of coke ovens of the Lackawanna Steel Company; Peter Smith, Police Commissioner; William Koster, assistant cashier of the German American Bank; Detective Thomas Daly of Lackawanna; J. L. Brisbane, furnace superintendent of the Lackawanna Steel Company; Robert Wilson, general timekeeper of the Rogers-Brown Steel Company, and George Josephs, father of the murdered Lackawanna boy. Wilson said he would testify that Hickey had been drinking hard and was absent from work on the day Joseph Josephs was murdered.

Immediately after the Grand Jury hearing Ray R. Gilson, Chief of Police of Lackawanna, and District Attorney Dudley started for Toms River, N. J., to take charge of Hickey.

Hickey first appeared in Lackawanna in January, 1903. He worked as foreman in a coke-oven department until June, 1903, when he was transferred to the construction department. In June, 1904, he went to Lowell, Mass., but returned and worked in various plants. Following the disappearance of the Josephs boy Hickey worked intermittently for two weeks, his name last appearing on the books of the Rogers-Brown Company Oct. 25, 1911.

EIGHT DEAD IN WRECK.

Trainmen Only Victims of Head-On Collision of Florida-Cuba Specials.

NORLINA, N. C., Nov. 19.—Six men were killed and six others badly injured in a head-on collision between the north-bound and south-bound Florida-Cuba specials on the Seaboard Air Line Railway, one mile south of the Virgina-North Carolina State line, shortly after 4 o'clock this morning. All those killed or injured, so far as reports now show, were members of the crews of the trains, and an express messenger.

FAISON, WILL A., engineer, Raleigh.
BECKHAM, CHARLES A., engineer, Raleigh.
GRAY, DICK, colored, fireman, Raleigh.
RUFFIN, JIM, colored, fireman, Raleigh.
BOGAN, TOM, colored, porter, Richmond, Va.
ROUNTREE, J. R., express messenger, Jacksonville, Fla.
KING, HENRY, "deadheading."

The injured: Baggagemaster Bryant, burned about the body and face; Express Messenger Brown, Express Messenger Coates, leg and arm broken, and Willis Pope, colored porter, scalded about the head and neck.

The cause of the accident has not been determined. The north-bound train was due at this place, eight miles south to the wreck, at 2:40 A. M., but did not pass until nearly 4 o'clock. The south-bound train was due here at 4 o'clock. The two trains met just outside the yards of Granite, a small station near the State line.

Relief trains were hurried to the scene from Norfolk and Raleigh, carrying surgeons, nurses, and officers of the railroad company. The badly injured were taken back to Raleigh for treatment. The cause of the wreck has not been determined, but information received here indicates that Engineer Beckham, on the south-bound train, confused his orders for the meeting of the north-bound train.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Inspectors of the Inter-State Commerce Commission were ordered to the scene of the Seaboard Air Line wreck as soon as news of the disaster reached the commission.

STEEL INQUIRY HALTED.

Corporation Attorneys Object to Bureau of Corporations Tables.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Disagreement over the admissibility of testimony by Dr. Francis Walker, Deputy Commissioner of Corporations, as to his opinion regarding the fluctuation of iron and steel product prices to-day caused a sudden interruption of the taking of testimony before Examiner Henry P. Brown in the United States Steel Corporation dissolution suit. Attorneys for the Government and the corporation hastened to Philadelphia to lay the question before the three Judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, at Philadelphia, who will sit to-morrow for the purposes of this case as the District Court of New Jersey.

Dr. Walker offered in evidence tables of prices compiled from market prices printed in trade papers and not from the books of the corporation. He contended that fluctuations in prices from 1895 to 1901 showed the absence of an arbitrary control of prices, but periods of lack of fluctuation, after the formation of the steel corporation, from 1901 to 1911, were due to the absence of non-competitive conditions. The corporation lawyers objected to the tables on several grounds.

HACKETT-CARHART CREDITORS' SETTLEMENT SALE

Two Generations of Gentlemen Attest This Sale's ½ Saving

For many reasons, this sale is greater than any New York has ever known.

Greatest in Values, because of the recent Hackett-Carhart receivership. The settlement with creditors at 50 cents on the dollar is reflected in the sale prices. These represent an average one-half saving to you.

Then, again, the varieties here are greater, the assortments wider, the styles more advanced, the fabrics newer, than any other New York store can offer.

And this, by reason of the constant replenishment of stocks with garments fresh from the tailors' hands. Garments that were in preparation since before the receivership.

But a reason for greatness, until now unvoiced, is the judgment of two generations of gentlemen that these sale stocks have successfully undergone.

Even today's suits and overcoats are passing daily, rigid inspection from those who have known what Hackett-Carhart standards have been for more than 56 years.

It would not be possible to deceive these men. They are too long familiar with the fineness of tailoring and fabric and fit that have always been part of Hackett-Carhart clothes.

And the claim that these clothes are selling today at one-half saving to you has not been held in question by a single one of these many men-who-know.

The greatest tribute to the integrity of this sale is that its warmest appeal has been felt, and responded to, by an army of old Hackett-Carhart customers.

The overcoats are a style show in themselves. They embrace over 750 fabric designs, in 60 different models. Overcoats for dress, business, motor, travel and storm service.

While the suits take equal rank in all particulars. There are more than 10,000 of them—many of matchless fabric and design. The models embrace the popular Continental, English, Fifth Avenue, and College styles, as well as many that are exclusive with Hackett, Carhart & Co., Inc., Retail.

All awaiting your inspection today, and yours to choose among at an average

WOODROW WILSON'S PENSION REQUEST

DUE TEACHING PROFESSION

He Says, That the Mandatory Rule Broken After the Application Be Carefully Explained.

Prof. Dickinson S. Miller of Columbia University has addressed to THE NEW YORK TIMES the following letter:

New York, Nov. 19, 1912.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An explanation is due from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching of its strangely irregular action in the case of Woodrow Wilson's application for a pension. The time has come for the annual meeting, on Nov. 20, of its distinguished Board of Trustees, who can speak with highest authority. It is to be remembered that the case has never come before the board at all. The present letter has been delayed by purely accidental causes.

Not a word is now required for the sake of the person originally affected. The absolute regularity and good taste of Mr. Wilson's course were at length vindicated by the simple process of publishing the facts, (see my statements in THE TIMES, June 17 and 25 last.) The explanation is due to the teaching profession. The powers which the Foundation has assumed (wisely I think) and which give it superb opportunities, give that profession every reason to watch it hopefully and every right to watch it closely and to understand the principles upon which it acts. Not least in an incident likely to have its effect on the whole morale—the spirit of loyalty or of cynicism—of our university system. I have avoided any return to the subject since Gov. Wilson's nomination for the Presidency. But the heat of the political contest has now passed; and it is not proper that facts so serious, affecting our respect for the institution and our faith in the execution of its founder's purpose, should be ignored by those responsible. Needless to say, I write as before, solely of my own motion and without any communication, direct or indirect, with Gov. Wilson.

It may be objected that the matter, like all similar cases before the committee, is confidential, and that the officers of the Foundation cannot speak. This surely depends somewhat on the question whether it was an officer of the Foundation who once for all destroyed the confidential character of this case by giving it to a daily newspaper.

The present evidence is to the following effect: Mr. Wilson, having made an informal application about the beginning of November, 1910, was asked, without a warning, by his friend, the President of the Foundation, to make a formal application, when the latter could not favor it and believed the committee would not favor it. Under the rules there was no alternative but to approve it. Nevertheless it was laid on the table until at the second annual meeting of the Trustees after it came in the rule in question was altered.

It would be interesting to know whether the committee ever were informed of the date when the application was received. Gov. Wilson was then informed by the President that the Trustees' action gave "practical refusal." Very shortly afterward there was an interview between the President of the Foundation and a "representative of The Sun." The President denies that he gave the information to the newspaper, but in any case he did not exert the full influence of the Foundation to suppress the matter. And there is formidable evidence, the strongest part of it unpublished, that the information could have issued only from the highest source in the Foundation office.

The facts as I have outlined them in THE TIMES are as follows: At the annual meeting of the Trustees in November, 1909, pensions for "long and meritorious service," which had been the first class mentioned in the incorporation, had been restricted, for reasons given at length, to cases of physical disability. At the same meeting, however, the following resolution was adopted. Its wording is given in an explanatory statement by President David Starr Jordan, Vice Chairman of the board, published in The Nation of Feb. 24, 1910, (that is, before President Wilson's application):

> It was also, on motion duly made and seconded, resolved that, first, the Executive Committee be instructed to safeguard the interests of the following classes of cases:
>
> (a) Those who have research work in view and have shown themselves unmistakably fit to pursue it; (b) those whose twenty-five years of service includes service as a college President; and (c) those in whose mind a definite expectation has been created by official action that they will be accorded the benefits of the Foundation within the year 1910; and that, secondly, the Executive Committee be authorized to formulate regulations in accordance with these instructions.

According to this, the Executive Committee was under strict obligation to award the pension. Its refusal was a breach of faith.

In the published formulation of the new rules, Fourth Annual Report of the President and Treasurer, 1909, Page 189, the wording is, "The Trustees MAY (the emphasis is my own) also grant a retiring allowance after the years of service set forth in Rule 1 to an executive head of an institution who has displayed distinguished ability as a teacher and administrator."

But the resolution had authorized the committee to formulate regulations only "in accordance with these instructions." The report here states that the award of a pension to a college President after twenty-five years of service is within the discretion of the Executive Committee. The committee may award such a pension, but it is not bound to do so. According to the original resolution adopted by the Trustees, as given verbatim by President Jordan, Vice Chairman of the Trustees, the committee had no discretion; it had to approve such an application automatically.

Either the President of the Leland Stanford University, Dr. Jordan, gave to the press a resolution which he declared to be authentic, but which is actually not so, or the Foundation has in its publications altered without authority the regulations of its own Board of Trustees and inserted a discretionary power in regard to a certain class of pensions where no discretionary power was given.

As the Foundation, although emphatically demanding publicity on the part of colleges and universities, does not publish the proceedings of its own Board of Trustees, we cannot ascertain whether the President of a great university has deceived the public, or this great educational trust has garbled its own rules.

But suppose that it had been only a discretionary power. The committee would still have been at perfect liberty to bestow the pension on this distinguished college President.

It was not until the annual report, dated October, 1911, but embodying the action of the board at its annual meeting in November of the same year, (a peculiar practice with these reports,) that it was announced that the rules were again modified and the resolution about college Presidents rescinded. The committee could have voted President Wilson's pension, and then, if the rules appeared unsatisfactory, have recommended a change for the future. They preferred apparently to postpone action until there was a change in the rules. The change appears to have been a purely ex post facto proceeding. DICKINSON S. MILLER.

Statistics of the street, subway, and elevated railway companies of the city for the twelve months which ended June 30, 1912, made up by the Public Service Commission, show 1,680,914,065 passengers paid cash fares, an increase of 77,012,667 over the preceding year. The Hudson Tube's traffic increased by 5,177,792 passengers to 57,934,226. This meant an increase in the net corporate income of $83,777, and a balance on the right side of $30,447, instead of a deficit.

The number of passengers carried by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies was 464,499,812, an increase of 24,241,647 over 1911. The increase in their net corporate income was $608,597.45, to $2,667,841.47. The New York Railways Company's record in the first six months of 1912, combined with the operations of the old Metropolitan receivers in the last half of 1911, show that 283,986,864 passengers were carried, an increase of 3,703,911 over the preceding year. Its net corporate income was $1,365,227, an increase of $283,116 over the year before. The Central Park Company, which has just been purchased by Edward Cornell at a foreclosure sale, carried in the twelve months 12,738,716 passengers, an increase of 150,748, but though its net corporate income increased by $1,557, it ended the year with a deficit of $2,891.

The Dry Dock, Forty-second Street and Third Avenue companies, which make up the Third Avenue Railway system in Manhattan, carried during the year 98,021,630 passengers, but did not do well financially. The Dry Dock Company, which is still in the receiver's hands, showed on the year a loss of $70,036, and its actual net corporate income fell off by $61,811. The Forty-second Street, Manhattanville & St. Nicholas Company made a profit on the year of $269,905, but its actual net corporate income was $82,531 below the figures for the year before. Only the Third Avenue Railway Company itself increased its net corporate income last year. It was $1,322,433, an increase of $164,681.

OCEAN LINES DENY POOL.

Atlantic and Far East Companies File Answer to Federal Suit.

A number of the steamship lines and individuals who have been made defendants in the suit filed in March by the Government under the Sherman law against an alleged combination of lines operating between the Atlantic and Far Eastern ports filed answers yesterday in the Federal District Court. The Government is seeking to enjoin them from offering or paying bonuses, rebates, or any form of reductions on freight rates in consideration of shippers forwarding all their merchandise by the vessels of the defendant companies. It is also demanding that agreements or conspiracies in restraint of trade made by the defendants be forbidden.

The answers of the companies and steamship men consisted in the main of a general denial of the allegations of the Government. The Isthmian line in addition denied that it operated a line as alleged between New York, the Philippines, China, and Japan or that John W. Ryan was its agent. It declared that it never took part in the "eastward," "westward," and "pooling" arrangements or the various conferences mentioned in the Government's complaint and it denied that it ever distributed its profits among the other lines mentioned in the complaint or that it took any part in the system of deferred rebates to shippers.

The other steamship companies make similar replies denying large portions of the Government's allegations.

GAVE SHORT WEIGHT IN COAL.

Ernst Sent 3,310 Pounds, Charged for 4,000, and Is Convicted.

Ehler J. Ernst of Ernst & Brothers, coal dealers at 109th Street and East River, pleaded guilty in Special Sessions yesterday to having given short weight, and was remanded until to-morrow for sentence.

John F. Carroll, a Bureau of Weights and Measures Inspector, saw one of Ernst's coal wagons in front of the home of Abraham Cohen o 417 East 109th Stree on Oct. 28. Cohen received a bill for 4,000 pounds of coal, but Tamio Valomimo, the driver of the wagon, showed a bill of lading for 3,310 pounds. Valomimo said it was customary for Ernst to give two bills, one for Inspectors for the actual weight in the wagon, and one for the buyer for the amount he ordered.

TALKED OF BLOWING UP A CATHEDRAL

Ironworkers' Agent Says Clancy and McNamara Considered Such a "Job."

HOCKIN MADE THREATS

Told Open-Shop Contractor of "Something Doing" If He Did Not Put on Union Men.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 19.—Labor conditions in Kansas City, in which W. Bert Brown, business agent of a local Ironworkers' Union, is alleged to have conspired with James B. McNamara to have a bridge across the Missouri River blown up and to induce a barber to do the dynamiting at Los Angeles, were described at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial to-day.

Charles Brown, who had been referred to by the Government as a "citizen with important evidence," testified that he became acquainted with McNamara in a barber's shop, and that later, having met the dynamiter on the Pacific Coast, McNamara loaned him $50 with which to return to Kansas City.

"McNamara told me he could fix it so I might earn lots of money," said the witness. "He said a lot of non-union jobs were to be blown up, and there would be work in Kansas City. He introduced me to Bert Brown, and said he would pay me $200 to blow up the bridge. Brown said it was an open-shop job and they wanted to make the contractor put on union men. I asked Brown why he didn't do it, and he replied that they wanted to get some one outside the union, because union men would be suspected.

The witness said the last conversation occurred in August, 1910, shortly before Ortie E. McManigal, according to his confession, blew up the bridge.

That Eugene A. Clancy and John J. McNamara talked about blowing up a cathedral in course of construction in Indianapolis, was testified to by Patrick J. Dugan, a former ironworkers' business agent. Dugan said he accompanied McNamara and Clancy when they went out to look at the cathedral, and after McNamara had pointed out a place to put the explosive, Clancy measured off with his feet to learn whether a wall would fall on a near-by residence, but the explosion did not occur.

Edward Smythe and James E. Ray of Peoria, Ill., among the forty-five defendants, were taken to jail to-night because their bondsmen had surrendered them. It was said that the men would procure new bonds to-morrow.

Testimony was given to-day concerning explosions at Peoria. Richard H. Johnson, representative of a company which constructed a bridge at Peoria, said that in 1910 Smythe, Ray, and Herbert S. Hockin solicited him to put union men on the job, and Hockin added: "There will be something doing if you don't."

Non-union men were put to work, said the witness, and the first explosion occurred on June 4 that year. Three months later the plant of the constructor was blown up. It was this job that McManigal said he blew up with Smythe's aid. One cap of nitro-glycerine left by McManigal failed to explode. Through this clue Johnson traced the purchase of the explosive to Portland, Ind., and thus put detectives on the trail of the dynamiters in September, 1910, a month before the loss of life at Los Angeles and six months before any arrests were made.

The Government read from the ironworkers' union magazine a letter from Smythe, alleged to refer to the Peoria explosion of June 4, 1910, as follows:

"I thought it about time to let the members at large know that Local 112 is still on top of the earth. Hallet's comet passed through here on time."

After the constructor agreed to use union men, Jesse Smith testified that Hockin said: "You may take your guards off the job. There will be no further explosions."

A New Novel

The Net

By REX BEACH

Tender love, scintillating humor, and the violence of unbridled passion, course neck and neck through every turbulent page.

Yet, when the tumult and the shouting die, one remembers only the story of a love so strong and pure and tender that it warms the very cockles of the heart.

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

PRINCE ALBERT

For an honest-to-goodness smoke—any kind of weather, any time, anywhere—you get a jimmy pipe and some Prince Albert and make fire with a match!

No matter what gait you're traveling or what's on your mind, for the long pull and the cool pull and the joy pull, why, you get right down to the original idea—a jimmy pipe—and just jam it full of P. A. and there you are, all right side up with the world! Do that!

Prince Albert's got tobacco substance and gives tobacco satisfaction. It isn't a lot of chaff! On the train, in your auto, anywhere, it's your pipe smoke, because it's fresh, and sweet, and delicious, and can't burn your tongue or parch your throat! Bite's taken out by the famous patented process that has made pipe smokers and men who couldn't smoke a pipe before sit up and make some mental notes!

Anchor alongside this: When it comes to a cigarette smoke, P. A. is king of 'em all. You get wise to a package of P. A. and makin' papers and go to it while the going's good. It's a sure-thing bet you'll get the spirit of P. A.'s freshness, fragrance and sweetness.

Take it straight, P. A. is a revelation. Give it a crack—you'll forget that broiled tongue and the fire-brands and the dust-brands.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE CRY IS 'BORE THE MEN!'

'NO PANTALOONS OR POLITICS'

State Association Agrees That This Motto Shall Be Constant Cry Wherever Men and Women Meet.

Let the men of the country get together and declare for or against woman suffrage, and let them do it quickly. There is to be no more peace for them until one thing or the other has been decided. They have been tried with the suffragists, and now the suffragists, too, are to be a silent sisterhood no longer. The anti-suffragists came to that decision at the annual luncheon of the State association opposed to woman suffrage at Sherry's yesterday.

"Let us bore the men," was the call from the platform, and the anti-suffragists gathered before the platform clapped their approval.

This does not mean that the antis will use suffragette methods or practice masculine manners. They will make themselves felt, but in a womanly way. Martha McCullouch Williams related the things the antis would not do.

"We do not wish men's pantaloons or politics," she said. "Let us go no further than the hobble skirt." The women applauded that sentiment, too.

It was Mrs. William A. Putnam, the State President, who called on the anti-suffragists to take the war path in their own particular way, but with none the less determined effort.

"The situation in New York State is critical," said Mrs. Putnam, "and the danger is the silent woman. It is high time there should be no silent women, though that sounds bad for an anti-suffragist. If the indifferent women and those who are opposed will make up their minds what they are going to do about it woman suffrage will not come in New York State.

"We do not go out in carts or speak from street corners, but we must do something, and if you will put the names of people who will help us on the slips that have been distributed that will help us organize. And we need money in sums of $1,000, $500, $100, and in small sums. Women of New York State must make up their minds if they are going to make a good hard fight. The men must know that the feeling of the women reflects their views.

"Let every man you meet know that you are an anti-suffragist. Never sit at dinner beside a man without letting him know that you are an anti-suffragist. I have been interested in this subject so long that I have been afraid of boring people, but the men must be bored. Tell every carpenter and every man who works for you. If you do that don't you believe the men will discover that there are a good many anti-suffragists?"

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, President of the National Society Opposed to Woman Suffrage, said the anti-suffragists were disappointed that four States had gone for suffrage but not discouraged, and she told the New York women to concentrate their efforts in the Empire State.

"Draw a line around New York," she said, "and work. We have two years, and I hope at the end of that time the ballot box will show what the women truly think about the vote."

She gave the reasons for the anti-suffragists "losing" the different States that went for suffrage.

"We lost Michigan, if we have lost it, because we were not organized. Oregon was lost by the Socialist vote. In Washington and California the women had suffrage, which they did not wish, put upon them because the States wished to increase their electorate. Kansas had been trying many experiments for many years and it had to try this. Wisconsin and Ohio both had anti-suffrage organizations and both were defeated by 90,000."

Mrs. Dodge said the National organization, which had come in since the last State luncheon with seven States, had since then added Connecticut, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Ohio, Wisconsin, Vermont, and Washington, D. C., with committees in two others.

"They have all taken the motto that 'Suffrage is Wrong,'" said Mrs. Dodge. "It is either right or wrong. I wish you would put it beside your religion."

Mrs. A. J. George of Cambridge told the women that one think they must do was to settle back and say: "It is bound to come."

"We cannot tell," said Mrs. George, "what wave of opinion may change the present radical tendency in legislation against what Queen Victoria called the 'Mad, wicked folly of woman suffrage.' The whole movement is a matter of public opinion. You have it in your own hands."

"It is a woman's duty to be delightful, ornamental, and useful, and she could not be more so with the vote," said Mrs. Williams. "If she had it she would not know what to do with it. Where the ballot is placed in the hands of those unfit to use it there follows ruin, rapine, and terror. Let us not repeat previous disasters. Woman is no more fit for the ballot than to be a trapeze performer or bareback rider."

Then she told the women to go no further than the hobble skirt.

Mrs. Barclay Hazard told of having received from suffragists to whom she wrote asking for help in philanthropic or sociological work neatly printed little slips saying they would not work for anything but suffrage until the vote was won.

"I wrote to the wife of a prominent physician," said Mrs. Hazard, "asking her to take part in some work for deficient and delinquent children. She answered that when the women had suffrage there would be no more delinquent or deficient children. She said when I asked her about it later that women would arrange for better marriages if they were enfranchised. Perhaps she did not know that the two States where they had laws in regard to eugenics were not suffrage States."

JUBILEE FOR MRS. CATT.

Suffragists Crowd Carnegie Hall to Welcome Her Home.

There was a jubilee meeting of welcome at Carnegie Hall last evening for Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President and founder of the International Woman Suffrage Association, upon her return after a year and eight months of suffrage proselyting around the world. Practically every seat was taken, and it was a meeting which helped the cause, for more than $4,000 was promised for suffrage work, largely in $100 pledges.

It was a picturesque meeting. It opened with a suffrage chorus, followed by a greeting to Mrs. Catt by representatives of fourteen different countries. Each country presented Mrs. Catt with a flag after an appropriate verse, even the little black Filipino, impersonated by Master Ernest Bryan, and Hawaii, Miss Alberta Hill. Mrs. Frank Stratton, as England, declared:

> They have tried in vain to beat us,
> Still our banners bravely float,
> We have sworn that we will conquer,
> Smash and starve, but have the vote.

The ten suffrage States, represented by women dressed in white robes and carrying shields and banners, sang a campaign song composed by Mrs. J. Mitchell Clark, with Mrs. Clark accompanying. Then the different suffrage organizations greeted Mrs. Catt—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw for the National, Miss Harriet May Mills for the State, Mrs. Charles Tiffany for the College Women, Mrs. Nathan for the Equal Franchise, a representative for Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who was in a box, for the Political Equality; Mrs. Blatch for the Political Union, and Mrs. Jean Nelson Penfield and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw for the party. George Foster Peabody was warmly applauded as he rose to speak for the Men's Equal Suffrage League.

"We present you with five planks in as many State platforms," said Miss Mills. "We are sorry we can't present the New York State Legislature to you, but we will do that a little later. We hope our international President will be the first to cast a vote for the next President in New York."

"If suffrage does cause dissension in the family," said Mr. Peabody, "it will be a good thing, for a husband and wife taking different views will think, and I would rather have a wrong vote occasionally than the many thoughtless votes that are cast now."

"We went where no path led," said Mrs. Catt, speaking of her journey, "and left behind us a little trail of our righteous rebellion. The world's woman's movement has begun in all civilized lands and in many that the world barely calls civilized.

"Kipling says: 'The West is the West and the East is the East, and never the twain shall meet.' That may be so in men's affairs, but not in women's. There is no East, no West and no nationality for us.

"Possibly in the onward march the Western hare may lie down to rest and the Eastern tortoise may outstrip the other in the race. In the East, where there is no lack of time, there is no brain fag, no nervous prostration, and no nervous indigestion."

ACT ON GIRL'S EVIDENCE.

Miss Kronage Will Be Important Witness in Get-Rich-Quick Cases.

BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—A Federal Grand Jury investigation into the workings of the alleged "get-rich-quick" swindle, in which seven arrests in various cities were made yesterday, was inaugurated here to-day by Donald Bain and William Palmer, Assistant United States Attorneys, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Twenty-five witnesses have been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury, among whom is Miss Clara Kronage, formerly employed as a stenographer by the firm of Minyard, Kessler & Malcom of Cincinnati. Miss Kronage, it is said, furnished much of the evidence upon which the original indictments were returned.

CRIES WAR, RED WAR, AT PEACE MEETING

Servian Prince, Asked to Talk in Place of Dr. Eliot, Upsets the Whole Programme.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, CHAIRMAN

Speaker Attacks His Theories on Constantinople and Then the Society Applauds Some War Pictures.

The New York Peace Society had all arrangements completed yesterday for a lecture at the Hotel Astor by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, on "The Promotion of Peace in the Orient." Andrew Carnegie was in the chair, and a large audience greeted him. Then Mr. Carnegie announced that Dr. Eliot had been unable to come to New York on account of illness. It was a great disappointment, he said, to miss the lecture of the man who had been delegated to go to the Far East in the interest of the Peace Society. He added, however, that he took great pleasure in presenting another interesting traveler, who had been found at the last minute to take Dr. Eliot's place. He introduced Prince Lazarovich Hrebelianovich of Servia, the man whom King Peter of Servia regards as the pretender to the throne of the Karageorgevich, and who is an exile for that reason.

It may or may not have been known among that audience of peace lovers that Prince Lazarovich is an authority on Balkan history; that he did probably more for Servian independence, both in the army and in politics, than any other living man, and that he conceived the great engineering projects designed to complete the great European waterway system and shorten the water route from the Baltic and North Seas to the Eastern Mediterranean by 1,500 miles.

These things, if they were known, were soon forgotten, and whatever reputation Prince Lazarovich ever had as a peace advocate was also forgotten when the Prince delivered such a war lecture as would have made any peace-loving individual quake.

Carnegie was all attention. Even when the Prince belittled Carnegie's plan to internationalize Constantinople, the Laird of Skibo sat quietly crouched in his chair and admired the enthusiastic young fighter.

"What shall become of Constantinople?" shouted Prince Lazarovich. "Not even the great men seem to recognize the fact that we, the Balkan allies, have something to say about that question. We are there already. Constantinople is merely a part of our own home. Has a burglar a right to enter our home and take it away from us?"

Obviously, this was not a peace meeting, and no one seemed to care whether it was or not so long as the Prince kept up his enthusiasm.

"We will take care of Turkey ourselves," said the Prince. "We know the Turk, and we know how to handle him. We want to be let alone. We alone can insure that peace which Europe says she wants.

"How about the great powers? How about Russia? If Russia should take Constantinople she would have control of the Dardanelles. She would then want Salonika as a naval base, and next she would demand the Servian plateau, the very point which Turkey has held and which has given her the control of the gateway to Europe. Instead of fighting Turkey we would then be fighting Russia for more centuries to come.

"And how about Austria? I want to say here that if Austria is given a hand in our affairs the world will not see peace, but another war.

"Now about internationalizing Constantinople," he continued. "I never saw anything internationalized that some nation did not pull the long straw. Russia would pull the long straw in this instance. You would never get peace in that way. It would be like putting rotten props under a platform. We, the Balkan States, must be allowed to deal with the Turks."

Then the Prince sat down, amid great applause.

"The Balkan question," said Mr. Carnegie mildly, "had to be settled. There was no escape from it. Let us hope that with the settlement of the war a lasting peace may be established."

Hamilton Holt, the editor of The Independent, showed lantern slides covering his recent trip through Japan, Korea, and Manchuria. Mr. Holt dwelt long upon the valiancy of the Japanese soldiers at Port Arthur, showing cannon and fortifications by the score. But nobody shuddered and nobody left the room.

Mr. Carnegie finally espied in the audience ex-Ambassador Andrew D. White, and called him to the platform, introducing him as "the greatest disciple of peace." Dr. White spoke in favor of Mr. Carnegie's plan for the internationalization of Constantinople. Then everybody went away to talk about the Prince's war talk and Holt's war pictures.

NEITHER PLAY NOR PAY.

Therefore Clara Lipman Sues Werba & Luescher for $10,000.

Clara Lipman, the actress, who in private life is Mrs. Louis Mann, brought suit yesterday in the Supreme Court against the theatrical firm of Werba & Luescher for $10,000.

Miss Lipman declares she signed an agreement with the defendants to appear in their productions for annual seasons of at least thirty weeks from 1911 to 1914, inclusive. When in New York she was to receive $300 a week and on the road $350. In addition, 10 per cent. of the gross weekly receipts over $5,000 was to be paid to her.

Her complaint is that, although she is ready to continue under the agreement, Werba & Luescher have not furnished her with productions and have neglected to pay her.

DAILY MISSION SERVICES.

Instruction for Young People This Evening in St. Boniface's, Brooklyn.

The Rev. Godfrey Schlechter and the Rev. Vergilius Krull, missionaries of the Community of the Most Precious Blood, have been holding a daily mission at St. Boniface's Church, Duffield Street, Brooklyn, since Nov. 10. Three mission services are held daily—low mass at 5:45 A. M., high mas at 8 A. M., and a mission sermon at 7:45 P. M. This evening, at the close of the mission sermon and the benediction of the blessed sacrament, the young people will receive instruction on the dangers and duties of single life. The mission will close Tuesday evening, Nov. 26. All the services have been well attended.

LOST MAN IN HOSPITAL.

Albert Kreuder Unconscious Since Thrown from Motor Cycle.

Albert Kreuder, of 545 West Forty-ninth Street, an ice and coal merchant at 617 West Forty-ninth Street, who has been missing since Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when he left on a motor cycle trip, was found yesterday at the Englewood Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull. Kreuder was thrown from his machine when the wheel struck an obstacle on the Knickerbocker Road near Englewood, as he was on his way from the residence of his sister, Mrs. E. Leimbach at Bergenfields, to the Fort Lee Ferry.

He carried no papers to indentify him and lay unrecognized till inquiries were made at the hospital yesterday by his brothers, Jacob and Henry Kreuder of this city. The injured man has not recovered consciousness since the accident and there is only a slight hope of his recovery.

1913 Locomobile

Six "48" Touring Car

The Six "48" with 82 Horsepower

Motor car comfort is something more than mere depth of upholstery. If a stripped chassis is not easy riding, upholstering will not make it so.

The chassis of a Locomobile is in itself a perfectly balanced vehicle. The addition of Locomobile Ten-Inch Upholstery merely refines a degree of comfort which other cars cannot hope to approach.

This is the only high-grade Six with a Four Speed Transmission, Disc Clutch and Seven Bearing Crankshaft.

It is the only high-grade Six with Ten-Inch Upholstery, Smooth Side Bodies, One-piece cast Aluminum Cowl and Clear Running Boards.

Top of Angora Silk Mohair, Waterproofed with finest up-river Para.

Costliest, most Efficient Electric Lighting System.

All hinges concealed and door handles inside the car.

Important chassis features include: Long Stroke Motor, Bronze Motor Transmission Bases, air compressor for inflating tires.

GRUELING PACE SET IN YALE'S FOOTBALL

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19.—Believing that only the fiercest kind of driving play can round the Yale eleven into shape for the Harvard game on Saturday, the coaches to-day sent it through twenty minutes of the fastest football of the season. The slowness of the clash at Princeton was smoked out to-day and play was fast throughout.

Holding to the statement made yesterday by Head Coach Arthur Howe no changes in the lineup were made. Bomeisler did not report to-day in togs, but was on the side line. He will probably get into the scrimmaging to-morrow. Trainer Mack said to-night that "Bo" has no sprain or wrench and could be used at any time.

Gallaucr again substituted for him but retired with a slight bruise, Sheldon playing end for the final ten minutes.

Two touchdowns were scored in the steady march from centre to goal line, which the scrubs were unable to check. There was no kick-off, play being begun by scrimmage. Seven and eight yard gains were repeatedly scored, and Flynn, at whom the coaches aimed most of their exhortations for aggressiveness, went over for the first score. No attempt was made to kick goal. Pumpelly, who displaced Flynn, took the ball over for the second touchdown and the kick-out for goal failed. The scrubs were unable to gain first down.

Wheeler ran the eleven the first ten minutes, Tommy Cornell displacing him, and Sam Dyer being used in the final few minutes of practice. Cornell's plays were faster and more dashing than those of Wheeler and some of the coaches favor using Cornell in the Harvard game. Frank Loftus was detained by recitations and did not report. Castles of the second eleven retired with a bump after doing most of the scrubs' line driving.

Two sets of 'Varsity backs were used and the second trio found ground-gaining easier than the first. Dick Baker, Don Markle, and Harold Pumpelly, who succeeded the first set, forced their way to touchdowns twice as fast as the regulars, Flynn, Spalding, and Philbin. Baker has rounded into the lightning form he displayed two seasons ago, and is now the fastest runner of the Yale squad. Pumpelly, who weighs 195 pounds, is not only a timely drop kicker, but to-day hit the line much harder than Flynn and some of the coaches favor using him ahead of Flynn next Saturday.

Pendleton is still lame from his severe muscle bruise of last Saturday and it is doubtful whether he will be fast enough to start the play against Harvard. He did not practice to-day. "Dutch" Arnold played right guard most of the practice and is now regarded the first string selection for the position. Norman Read played the final five minutes and is the fastest guard on the squad on the attack but is inexperienced in the defensive play. Marting, who supplanted Ketcham, was in excellent fettle and some of the coaching cabinet favor resting Ketcham part of one half and using Marting as snap back.

Both Dave Dunn and Tom St.Germaine were on the scrubs to-day and gave the regulars a rough tussle. A long drill in punt handling, and in goal and place kicking closed the practice.

The coaches included Walter Camp, Foster Sanford, Clarence Alcott, Tom Shevlin, Bob Loree, De Witt Cochrane, "Buster" Brown, and "Pop" Corey.

Head Coach Howe said to-night that there would be another stiff programme of scrimmage work scheduled for to-morrow, but after that the handling of the eleven was uncertain until the game on Saturday.

To take the squad from the noise of the campus the players have been ordered to the college infirmary nightly, beginning with to-morrow, until after the Harvard match.

Head Coach Howe said to-night that it was impossible for the Yale attack to be reorganized in the week between the Princeton and the Harvard game, but that a strong attempt was being made to perfect some of the strong plays that did not work well against Princeton.

Invitations have been received by the resident coaching squad to go to Annapolis next week and assist Henry Wheaton, the old Yale backfield coach, in developing the Navy. Elmer McDevitt, the Yale line coach, has accepted and will leave here on Sunday for Annapolis.

During this afternoon's scrimmage John W. Castles, Jr., of Morristown, N. J., was injured so severely that he will be out of the game for the season. He was playing half back on the scrubs, and slipped and fell. He was picked up unconscious and removed in an auto to the college infirmary, where he was revived in two hours. It was stated by the attending physicians this evening that no serious results will follow the accident, which was simply a severe bump. Castles's head was cut, and it is believed that a fellow-player stepped on him after he had fallen. He was one of the best reserve half backs in college, and played the same position on the freshman eleven last year.

BRICKLEY KICKS 3 GOALS.

Harvard's Wonderful Punter Shows Fine Form in Hard Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 19.—To-day was full of action inside the Harvard stadium, where the 'Varsity team and the scrubs worked hard against each other all afternoon. The coaches warned the players not to tackle too roughly, but otherwise the play was hard enough. The 'Varsity did a lot of work on its own plays and but them on with a will, while the best men that the scrubs could muster put on the plays the scouts have seen at New Haven.

Reggie Brown, who always follows the Yale games throughout the season, was on the field and directed the second team's attack. The 'Varsity was not scored against, nor was it able to cross the scrubs' goal line by rushing. The regulars, however, had the satisfaction of seeing Charley Brickley kick three pretty field goals. Brickley made four shots at goal, one of which he missed. His kicking was done in scrimmage, and he scored once from the 40-yard line and twice from the 35-yard line, although not at difficult angles. The substitutes had a lot of work to-day, also, lining up against another of the second elevens.

Gardner and Hardwick were not in the line-up to-day, but Trumbull returned, and went through the practice in his old place at right guard. Gardner is still lame, after his experiences in the Dartmouth game, while Hardwick has a bad cold. Both were on the field doing light work in the open. Trumbull feels better, and did his share this afternoon.

It is a question, however, whether Coach Haughton will put him in the first line-up at Yale Field, for Driscoll is in top form now, and his work against Dartmouth was the best that has been done in Harvard's middle line this Fall. Trumbull, though, is more than welcomed back to the squad, and the trainer says that he can play Saturday if the occasion demands.

Freedley, who ran the 'Varsity from quarter back until he sprained an ankle, was very active to-day. Coolidge will also be allowed to play Saturday as second substitute end, so that Harvard has every man in readiness to play.

A few of the men are trained rather fine, but, on the whole, the eleven should be at the top of its physical condition by the end of the week.

In the backfield to-day with Wendell and Brickley was Bradlee, who has been regarded as first substitute for each of the three regular backs. He is better than any of the first-string men would be unless they were in prime condition for the game, so that, all in all, Harvard is wonderfully well equipped for backfield work in the Yale game.

To-morrow's scrimmage will be short, but the time will be taken to send the 'Varsity through its entire repertory of plays, and also to put the finishing touches on the defense. Thursday there will be work for the middle linemen, while the ends and kickers are getting accustomed to Yale Field. For Friday arrangements have been made to hold out-of-door secret signal drill at New London, where the entire football squad will assemble Friday noon.

Harvard still is confident that it can beat Yale, but is not offering any great odds. In Cambridge even money is about the limit, and there is little betting at that.

CORNELL 'VARSITY RESTS.

Coach Sharpe Will Start Driving Practice To-day for Pennsy Contest.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 19.—In order to give the 'Varsity players a thorough rest before the final practice for the game with Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving Day, Coach Sharpe gave the 'Varsity an additional rest this afternoon, and none of the regulars except Capt. Butler reported for the practice. Sharpe, however, announced that beginning to-morrow the hardest practice of the year would be held on Alumni Field, and that he would keep on driving the men until they left here for Philadelphia.

The freshmen eleven has been put through a special series of plays to be used against the 'Varsity, and to-morrow these will be tried out against the regulars. As the freshmen are to play the Pennsylvania freshmen on Saturday Coach Sharpe intends to "kill two birds with one stone" and get both teams in shape for their final contests.

In spite of the sloppy condition of the gridiron to-day Coach Sharpe sent the "subs" and scrubs through a very strenuous scrimmage, in which the defense of both teams was severely tested. He used a number of 'Varsity men in the line-up, players who are quite likely to get into the game with Pennsylvania. The most brilliant bit of work was Schuler's run of ninety yards for a touchdown after intercepting a forward pass. Good interference helped him along. McCutcheon, who played centre on the 'Varsity early in the year and then was hurt, was back in the game and put up a very aggressive exhibition. Others who showed well were Williamson, Lohr and Rees.

There is a good chance that Underhill, last year's full back, will get into the game this week, and may play against Pennsylvania. If he regains form he will probably play the full back position against Pennsylvania, because Coach Sharpe wants a strong defensive back field, and defense is Underhill's main forte. He has been out of the game all Fall with injuries.

SIX FORDHAM MEN BARRED.

Deficiencies in Studies Cause an Upheaval in Football Team.

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky came the announcement yesterday to the Fordham football squad that six of its members would be barred from further representing the college in intercollegiate contests. Father Johnson, S. J. Vice President of the university and Prefect of Studies, gave the decision of the Faculty, which he said was rendered because the men specified were deficient in their studies. The loss to the squad is a severe one, as it includes four 'Varsity players and two second-string men.

Right tackle McCarthy, centre Mulvey, and left half back McNally are the regulars upon whom the Faculty's ban has been put, and Dooling and Hay are the second string men. Leo Hinchliffe, the other 'Varsity man specified, may be allowed to play.

There remain two hard games on the football schedule, the last one with Villanova on Thanksgiving Day being the principal event of the season. The coaches, however, received the announcement in silent mood and immediately set about to reorganize the team and prepare an eleven to play Rensselaer at Troy this Saturday.

Coach Tom Thorpe said that he has men in reserve as good as those disqualified. He put Glacken at centre, O'Toole at tackle, Riley and Taylor at the half-back positions. Later in the scrimmage with the High School of Commerce eleven, Fordham played far better football than it has shown in any of its many previous practice games with the same eleven. The men played with more vim and energy and drove the schoolboys back to the goal line for the entire length of the field seven times, and Schaffmeister kicked two field goals.

MIDDIES' SECRET DRILL.

Coaches Find Team in Much Improved Physical Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 19.—Secret practice began at the Naval Academy this afternoon, guards being used to keep the general public at a distance. The beginning of the secret work was delayed far beyond the usual period owing to the backward condition of the team and the necessity of continued drill in the elements of straight football. With the improvement of the squad, which has been quite marked within the last week, the coaches think that it is time to begin to take hold of the special plays that will be employed against the army eleven.

There is general gratification over the improvement of the physical condition of the team. The increase in weight of some of the players has been notable, Brown and Howe, the guards, now weigh 206½ pounds each, while Hall, who did so well at tackle Saturday, weighs 196. Most of the players of the first team are now rather well settled, but Walker and Perry are having a hard fight for the centre position.

It is also likely that Nicholls or Miles will be in the quarterback position for a portion of the army game, as Captain Rodes is not in rugged physical condition, and is suffering with a badly twisted ankle. Every other member of the squad could get in the game now if necessary.

Spank Indians for Football Mistakes.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 19.—The Carlisle Indians plunged into the work of preparing for the season's closing games with spirit to-night and under the influence of a new ruling of Coach Warner's, which he says he will institute hereafter at the beginning of a season, the Indians got much fun and beneficial training from the day's drill. Warner knows that carelessness was a strong contributing factor in the Pennsylvania game on Saturday, and in seeking a remedy against mistakes in signals decided to turn the punishment for derelictions in signal work over to the Indian youths themselves. Any redskin who falls down on a signal through commission or omission is compelled to bend the upper part of his body forward and stand for one severe spank from every man on the team. Left end Wallette was the first aborigine chastised. His punishment from his team mates was so edifying that the only other mistake of the evening was made by centre rush Bergie, who submitted to the punishment of his team mates with the best grace possible. Fundamentals and a short scrimmage filled the rest of the Indian practice period. The bruises on Arcasa and Welch were noticeably improved to-day.

Lehigh Practices New Plays.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 19.—Long after dusk had settled on the field, Lehigh practiced on the gridiron with a football painted white the new plays that are to be sprung on Lafayette on Saturday. The men then went to the cage, where the new signals were rehearsed. Behind closed gates the practice was held to-day. The defective tackling and interference that marred the team's work in the Muhlenberg game received the special attention of Resident Coach Keady to-day. All the men save Hoban, Flick and Bailey are in good physical condition, but what is worrying the coaches most is the downcast feeling that pervades the camp. To restore confidence various methods are being adopted. A long scrimmage will take place to-morrow and it may be the last before the Lafayette game.

Soldier Kerns Substituted for Wuerst.

Charles Wuerst of Cincinnati will have to postpone his debut at the Fairmont Athletic Club. He was scheduled to box Gunboat Smith ten rounds, but has injured his hand and Soldier Kerns has been substituted by Manager Gibson. Kerns is a hard proposition and should furnish a good bout for Smith. Battling Reddy and Charley Ledoux, the French batamweight, will box ten rounds and the winner has been promised a bout with Johnny Coulon, the titleholder. The bill will be completed with a good list of preliminaries.

New York Boy Wesleyan Captain.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 19.—Richard Eustis, '14, of New York City, right end on the Wesleyan football team for the last two seasons, was to-night elected captain of next year's eleven.

Morgan to Box Kilbane for Title.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 19.—An agreement between the managers of Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland, featherweight champion, and Eddie Morgan, an English boxer, was reached to-day, whereby the two will soon box in a twenty-round bout for the championship. Terms and a date have not yet been agreed upon, but it is said the match will take place on the Pacific Coast within a couple of months. Morgan has been in this country about ten weeks, and has secured decisions over several boxers from whom Kilbane had a hard time to win.

STORMY SEASON IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Lack of Success and Harmony Causing Upheavals in Several Clubs.

The National League, where baseball politics and dissension are never at rest, faces one of its most troublesome periods during the season of 1913. Six of the eight clubs in the circuit have decided upon a thorough housecleaning, and when the league meets here for its annual session on Tuesday, Dec. 10, there promises to be one of the liveliest sessions in the history of the elder major organization.

The executive end of the National League has never run smoothly. In the early days of the organization, when the different managers were at loggerheads most of the time, there was a tendency on the part of the various club owners to outgeneral each other at every opportunity. The policies which were resorted to in the younger days of the game have happily been abandoned, and would not be tolerated, of course, in baseball to-day. The game has become primarily a business proposition, although the spirit of controversy among the club owners seems to still have a place in the league's proceedings. There have always been trouble makers in the National League; the spirit of disagreement has come down from one club owner to another as a kind of legacy which the league has been unable to shake off.

The executive policy of the National League is much different from that of the American league. The younger league started off on a purely business basis, with a recognized head and leader, and there have been few instances of trouble among American League club owners. President Ban Johnson was made executive head of the younger organization by unanimous consent of all the club owners, and the fact that he was elected a few years ago for a period of twenty years shows that the business men of the American League are perfectly willing to have him run the affairs of the league. It has been said that Johnson rules as a Czar and with an iron hand. Perhaps he does, but the wonderful strides that the younger league has made in baseball shows that the policy has borne fruit.

When President Horace Fogel of the Philadelphia Club made his alleged charges against the President and the umpires of the National League, baseball men frowned and asked each other, "Can you imagine any American League club owner making charges like that and still keep his place at the head of a club?" Such a situation as this would be difficult to contemplate in the American League.

These alleged Fogel charges that the league race was fixed to favor the New York Club are so serious that the league will have to first get them out of the way before the regular league meeting. It is the only time in modern baseball that a club owner has come out openly, as Fogel is said to have done, and questioned the integrity and honesty of the National game. The case has made a wide breach in the league, and the other club owners have realized that they must unite and prove the alleged statements false in order to maintain their integrity with the baseball public.

The six clubs in which trouble has been brewing include St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, and Boston. All of these teams are in an unsettled state, and radical changes are looked for in nearly every city mentioned before another season comes around. The lack of harmony among National League club owners is in a way responsible for the unsettled condition in the National League to-day. In the American League there has nearly always been a spirit of co-operation among the club owners and a willingness to assist those needing help. In the National League the situation seems to be almost opposite.

It seems to have invariably been the case in baseball that when the club owner begins to take a part in the management of the team and interferes with the leader in charge trouble and dissension follow. There are two club owners in the National League who leave the management of their teams to the managers themselves and never seriously interfere with that end of the business. These are John T. Brush of the Giants and Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburghs. Managers McGraw of New York and Fred Clarke of the Pirates have been given absolute authority in running the playing end of the game, and the success of these clubs has shown the wisdom of the policy. The Chicago Cubs were successful as long as Frank Chance had authority, but it was a different story when President Charles W. Murphy intruded in the manager's province.

As the result of this, the Chicago Club now finds itself in a shattered and decayed condition. Manager Chance has been deposed by Murphy and Johnny Evers, a player with many eccentricities, has been made manager. There are at least two members of the old Chicago team who will not play ball under Evers. These are Joe Tinker and Jimmy Sheckard.

The result is that the Chicago Club has lost all the discipline that prevailed under Chance and the team is now in an unsettled state. Tinker wants to go to Cincinnati to manage the unfortunate Reds in place of Hank O'Day.

Cincinnati is forever changing managers, and, with all his experimenting, Garry Herrmann has not been able to find a suitable leader for his club.

There is serious trouble in St. Louis, where Roger Bresnahan has been unconditionally released because he was getting too large a salary. Miller Huggins will be manager. The situation is becoming more complicated every day. Wheels within wheels are working, all running the wrong way; club politics is playing a part, and the whole thing will not be smoothed out until there has been a lot of unnecessary wrangling.

The situation in Philadelphia is also critical. President Fogel and Manager Dooin never exhibited much harmony in their dealings, and the Phillies' President has now got himself in trouble with the other club owners, and it is a question if he will have a place in the league next season. Boston has been in a state of unrest for the past few seasons, and now the new owner, James F. Gaffney, has signed George Stallings, the former Yankee manager, to take the club and do his best with it. Mr. Gaffney has wisely promised to keep his hands off and allow Stallings to run the club as he thinks best.

The enormous financial growth of the World's series has started a feeling of dissatisfaction among the club owners who do not share in the pie. There is sure to be a movement of some kind on the part of the club owners at the next meeting of the league to institute a new system of dividing the world's series spoils. The clubs which find it hard to make both ends meet during the season do not approve of the National Commission and the pennant-winning clubs getting all the benefit of the post-series games, which amounts to nearly $500,000.

The attempt of the ball players during the last series to add the receipts of a tie game to the rake-off of the first four games did not tend to please the league owners, and the echo of this is sure to be heard at the next league meeting.

As the situation stands to-day, the path of the club owners of the National League is not as smooth as it might be, and the annual conclave next month is sure to occupy a week or two of endless oratory, with lots of charges and counter-charges, before the situation is unraveled to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Yankees Cancel Cincinnati Dates.

Frank Farrell, President of the New York American League Club, announced last night that he had canceled the dates arranged for his team in Cincinnati with the National League Club of that city on March 29, 30, and 31 next. When the Yankees played in Cincinnati last Spring they secured an option on these dates, but owing to the fact that a Western trip in the early Spring has been deemed inadvisable for the local club President Herrmann of Cincinnati has been notified of Mr. Farrell's decision in the matter.

Troy Gets Disputed Ball Players.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 19.—The National Baseball Commission to-day decided that the transfer last February of Player A. H. Salada by the Philadelphia National League Club to Atlantic City of the Tri-State League was not regular and that Troy of the New York State League is entitled to the services of the player.

HOCKEY SEASON SCHEDULE.

Four Teams Contest for Amateur Championship of America.

With only four clubs in the competitive schedule of the race for the Amateur Hockey League championship, which is slated to start Jan. 7, 1913, it is promised that despite the seeming lack of the forces for the titular honors the series will be productive of as stubborn a schedule as ever contested for the ice honors.

The Governing Committee, made up of William C. Russell, M. W. Houck, and Sterling C. Martin, which met last night at the league quarters in St Nicholas Rink, decided to table the applications for reinstatement desired by George Harmon, Charles Kinsella, Charles Mitchell, Ernie Garon, and Jimmy Bulger on the general proposition that justice would be subserved if the men were kept out of competition for a period which embraced the beginning of the 1912-13 season, in view of the fact that the intention of the finding against the men was that they should be kept out of the competition for a season.

While it is not known just who will consutute the make-up of the Irish-American Athletic Club team, the newcomer in the ranks of hockeyists, it has been intimated that the members will be without cavil by any one interested in the series, which is as follows:

First Round.—Jan. 7—Hockey Club vs. St. Nicholas; 10—Crescent A. C. vs. Irish-American A. C.; 13—Hockey Club vs. Irish-American A. C.; 15—St. Nicholas vs. Crescent A. C.; 21—St. Nicholas vs. Irish-American A. C.; 24—Crescent A. C. vs. Hockey Club.

Second Round.—Jan. 28—Hockey Club vs. St. Nicholas; 31—Crescent A. C. vs. Irish-American A. C.; Feb. 3—Hockey Club vs. Irish-American A. C.; 5—Crescent A. C. vs. St. Nicholas; 11—St. Nicholas vs. Irish-American A. C.; 14—Crescent A. C. vs. Hockey Club.

Third Round.—Feb. 18—Hockey Club vs. St. Nicholas; 21—Crescent A. C. vs. Irish-American A. C.; 24—Hockey Club vs. Irish-American A. C.; 26—St. Nicholas vs. Crescent A. C.; March 4—St. Nicholas vs. Irish-American A. C.; 7—Crescent A. C. vs. Hockey Club.

WHALEN NOT FORCED OUT.

Secretary of Giants Issues Statement Concerning Former Treasurer.

R. H. McCutcheon, the new Secretary of the Giants, yesterday issued the following statement concerning the retirement of John Whalen as Treasurer of the local National League baseball club:

Some persons appear to have received the impression that the retirement of Mr. John Whalen from the office of Treasurer of the National Exhibition Company, owners of the New York Baseball Club, was owing to friction and lack of harmony. Mr. John T. Brush, President, does not wish this impression to continue. When the late Mr. Fred N. Knowles, the former Treasurer and Secretary, was taken ill, Mr. Whalen, at some inconvenience to himself and as a favor to Mr. Brush, assumed the duties of Treasurer. During the past year he has repeatedly requested Mr. Brush to relieve him of the details connected with the office of Treasurer, which was finally accomplished when Mr. McCutcheon agreed to accept the position of Treasurer and Secretary. The change was made with Mr. Whalen's entire approval and consent, after he had finally insisted that he could no longer spare any further time from his extensive banking interests and large law practice.

"Matty" Guest of Honor at Banquet.

BRIAR CLIFF MANOR, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The annual banquet of the Westchester County Athletic Association and the County Y. M. C. A. was held at the Briar Cliff Lodge to-night, three hundred members of these two organizations interested in clean athletic sports being in attendance. Christy Mathewson, who recently returned from his hunting trip in North Carolina, was the guest of honor. William Sloane, Chaplain of the County Y. M. C. A., presided. The principal speakers were Dr. George J. Fisher, International Secretary of the Physical Department of the Y. M. C. A., and Dave Fultz, President of the newly organized baseball fraternity. The Briar Cliff Manor baseball team again won the pennant in the Hudson-Putnam League, and the cup was presented by Dr. Albert A. Twiggar, President of the Village of Ossining. Mount Kisko won the pennant in the Harlem League, and the cup was presented in a short speech by Mortimer Van Cott of New York. Eleven medals were also presented to individual players of the organizations.

Hans Wager to Marry.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 19.—Hans Wagner is to be married. The bride is to be Miss Bessie Smith of West Pittsburgh, who said to-day the reporters "would have to see Mr. Wagner about it." It is significant that the story of the engagement should become generally known just when Wagner is in the wilds of Arkansas on a hunting trip. Wagner's extreme modesty probably accounts for the fact that the news should be made public while he is away.

Mrs. Smith, mother of Miss Bessie, said: "They've been going together for four years."

Word came to the office of the Pittsburgh ball club to-day that "Chief" Wilson is to be married this winter.

Dreyfuss Wouldn't Vote for O'Brien.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 19.—If Joseph D. O'Brien, former Secretary of the New York Giants, is a candidate for President of the National League Barney Dreyfuss does not know of it. The owner of the Pirates said to-day he had not seen O'Brien since the last time McGraw's team played at Forbes Field.

"The report that O'Brien was in Pittsburgh and was pledged my support is untrue," said the Pirate owner. "I have not promised my support to anyone and I would not favor O'Brien if he were a candidate." Dreyfuss says he thinks O'Brien is Charley Murphy's choice for head of the Philadelphia team.

Redsox Win at Basket Ball.

The basketball team of the Union Branch, Y. M. C. A., the Bronx, was defeated yesterday on its own court by the Y. P. S. Redsox, 32 to 12, in a spirited contest. At the ending of the first half the score was 4 to 3 in favor of the visitors, who scored two well played field goals. In the concluding chapter the visitors completely ran away from the home five and with a succession of goals from the field piled up the one-sided score. Steinle and Wennestroem, the guards for the Redsox, played a remarkably strong game, defending their basket from many well directed plays, which along with the seven goals of Hofer at centre was responsible for the victory. The lineup:

Y. P. S. Redsox.		U. B., Y.M.C.A.
Dorn	Right forward	Rice
Hofer	Centre	Kelly
Steinle	Right guard	Sale

Women's Intercollegiate Chess.

Definite steps were taken yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Woman's Chess Club of New York, held in the parlors of the Hotel Martha Washington, to interest the students at the leading women's colleges in an intercollegiate tournament, for which the directors of the club have authorized the use of the clubrooms in the Spring. Most likely, the congress will take place in the course of the Easter holidays. At the annual business meeting yesterday the following directors of the Woman's Chess Club were elected: Miss Eliza Campbell Foot, Mrs. William Gordon Verplanck, Miss May E. Drake, Miss Paulsenn, Madame C. West van Heiden, Mrs. C. E. Nixdorff, Mrs. George P. Slade, Miss E. Somers Haines and Miss Isabel H. Hardy. The following officers were then elected: Miss Eliza Campbell Foot, President; Mrs. George Slade, Vice President; Miss E. Somers Haines, Secretary; Mrs. William Gordon Verplanck, Treasurer.

Columbia Ready for Relay.

Columbia, Fordham, and New Jersey University are expected to be the principal contenders in the one mile Intercollegiate Relay race at the games of the Brooklyn Post Office Clerks and Forty-seventh Regiment A. A., in the latter's armory Saturday night. Columbia, with two wins to her credit, appears to have the handsome Wanamaker trophy within her grasp, and Bernie Wefers says that the Blue and White lads will put the finishing touches to the race on that night and make the beautiful bronze their permanent property. Jim Thorp, who is coaching Fordham, states that his team will surely show their heels to all other competitors, and will be first at the finish with a safe margin. The entire programme is made up of events of unusual interest and no expense is being spared to make this series one of the greatest ever held in the metropolitan district.

Cubs Trade Downey for McDonald.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The Chicago National League baseball club to-day traded Tom Downey, utility infielder, formerly with Cincinnati and Philadelphia, to the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League for Edward McDonald, who went to Sacramento from the Boston National League club last [illegible].

SLOSSON SECOND IN BILLIARD TOURNEY

	W.	L.	High Average.	High Run.
Hoppe	5	1	29 7-17	122
Slosson	5	2	26 6-19	166
Morningstar	4	2	21 7-23	167
Yamada	4	3	25	138
Demarest	3	4	23 17-21	132
Cline	3	4	16 20-30	85
Sutton	2	5	20 20-24	140
Taylor	1	6	16 1-31	117

The veteran George Slosson by defeating Harry Cline in the 18.2 championship billiard tournament at the Hotel Astor last night took second place to Hoppe and became a strong factor in the competition for the title. Hoppe plays Morningstar in the final game to-night, and if Morningstar should win the result would be a triple tie between Hoppe, Slosson, and Morningstar. If Hoppe wins, Slosson will get second place and Morningstar will be tied for third honors with Yamada, the Japanese.

Yamada gave a high-class exhibition of the balk-line game last night in his game with Al Taylor and won by a score of 500 to 273. The Oriental has won four games and lost three.

Slosson was slow getting started last night, but he finished brilliantly with two runs of 71 and 73. Cline, his opponent, was plainly nervous, and after Slosson passed him in the sixteenth inning, Cline was unable to regain the honors. The Student had a high run of 111 in the twenty-third inning, which boosted his total to 304. Slosson's play fell off for a few innings after the long run, but he began to pick up again in the twenty-eighth, and ran out with four strings of 23, 23, 71, and 73.

The Student in his final frame found the three balls frozen on his thirty-fifth carrom, but did some dainty nursing along the balk lines at the upper table to acquire his victory. The Student now has five victories and two defeats to his credit. Cline's game was erratic, and he made many of his misses on long table shots. The score:

Slosson—0 10 10 6 17 0 1 1 0 0 1 4 27 2 4 87 0 56 1 0 8 8 111 1 3 2 0 23 23 71 73. Total—500.
Cline—25 5 10 11 6 1 0 0 5 5 1 12 0 0 0 34 6 15 49 1 15 4 14 2 0 23 7 11 22 3 19. Total—306.
Referee—A. G. Cutler.

Yamada averaged 25 in his game with Taylor last night and ran out in twenty innings. He showed a steady improvement in his billiards, and much of his best work was done on long table shots. His driving for position was done with excellent judgment, and he solved many line-ups with cleverly played massé shots.

Billiard sharps see in Yamada the making of a high-class billiardist. He has a fine conception of angles, and his control of the ivories improves with each game. What Yamada lacks most is experience, but he is fast picking up billiard knowledge through his playing with the experts in this tournament.

His daring is a valuable asset to his game. He chooses his shots quickly and invariably picks the logical one. Yamada does not hesitate over the difficulty of the situation. He learns with remarkable rapidity and does not forget a shot once he has mastered it. The balk line nursing is new to him, but several times in his game last night he kept the balls in a small area and drove them in and out of balk like an old hand at the game.

The Jap's best run came in the fifteenth inning, when he ran 83 points, and after getting one carrom in his next inning he missed a long draw shot and went confidently into the seventeenth inning and added a cluster of 72 to his total. Taylor was slow getting started, but was playing well when the match ended. The score:

Yamada—0 27 53 46 5 0 9 18 0 8 22 42 83 88 83 1 72 30 5 18. Total—500.
Average, 25; high runs, 83, 72, 53.
Taylor—7 4 29 0 0 0 0 4 0 54 10 0 21 82 2 12 29 42 27. Total—273.
Referee—T. J. Gallagher.

Calvin Demarest showed streaks of his best playing form in the afternoon game in defeating George Sutton by a score of 500 to 160. Young Demarest began a skillful nursing game in the sixth inning, when clever, close billiard play netted him a group of 61 points.

From that time he always had the balls at his command and increased his lead steadily, while his veteran opponent had difficulty with unpromising "leaves."

Sutton was no match for the younger cueist, who played cleverly once he had the balls rolling. At the twentieth inning Demarest had totaled 380 points with a run of 40.

The twenty-first inning was his best endeavor. Keeping the balls under masterly control he clicked off carrom after carrom until he won the game, after a splendid run of 120. The score:

Demarest—7 1 3 6 42 61 26 6 45 1 24 20 1 54 0 35 1 1 6 40 120. Total, 500.
Sutton—1 2 1 10 1 8 0 6 2 0 7 47 11 11 0 1 1 0 49, 2. Total, 160.
Referee—T. J. Gallagher.

Lauderbach Wins for Brooklyn.

Dave Lauderbach of Brooklyn defeated Dr. A. J. Harris, the Chicago representative, in the second game of the three-game series of the National Three-Cushion Carrom Tournament, at Keeney's Billiard Academy in Brooklyn last night, by the score of 50 to 42. This is the first victory credited to Brooklyn since the opening of the league season. The Chicago player "got the jump" on his opponent in the early innings and maintained a decided advantage in the score until the eightieth inning. At this stage the score stood 36 to 34 in favor of Harris. In the ten ensuing frames Lauderbach abandoned his safety work and manipulated the balls skilfully and at the ninetieth inning he had the lead with the score of 40 to 39. He increased his advantage as the game progressed and won handily. Both contestants made a high run of three. The final game of the series will be decided this evening when Lauderbach, playing for Brooklyn, will oppose James Shea of Chicago, who defeated Charles Otis in the opening contest Monday night.

Morningside Billiard Victors.

I. Shair and E. Dumahaut were the victorious players in the two games decided last night in the amateur Class C 18.2 balk line billiard tournament at the Morningside Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue. The former defeated J. Friedman in the opening contest by the score of 50 to 40 in thirty-five innings, averaging 1 15-35. The winner's highest run was 10 points. In the second game Dumahaut defeated B. Blank by the score of 50 to 35. The winner completed his string of fifty points in twenty-three innings, which netted him an average of 2 4-23, the highest mark reached in the tournament thus far. Dumahaut's best tallies were two runs of 10 points each.

MIDDLESEX HOUNDS RUN.

Long Islanders Follow Mr. Higginson's English Pack in Fox Chase.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—By invitation members of the Middlesex Hunt Club are guests this week of the Meadow Brook Club and to-day hunted their English pack over Long Island ground with H. H. Higginson the master handling the hounds.

The ground was too frosty to hold the scent well, but a large field of hunters assembled at Tredwel's Corner at 9:30 o'clock this morning and found the first fox in Guinea woods. It crossed the railroad track of the Oyster Bay branch and headed for Mineola, then swung in a large circle and returned to the location where it was first sighted and went to ground. Whether the same fox or another member of its family decided to take a constitutional run on a different circuit the huntsmen could not determine, but soon after losing their first prey a flash of brown came into view and glided off at a lope with the excited pack tearing after it. Over Robert Bacon's estate to Tredwel's farm and Old Westbury the chase led, and again the fox eluded its pursuers.

Among the riders following the hounds were Mrs. Ladenburg, Mrs. Burden, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Miss Bird, Miss Hadden, Miss Hollins, Mrs. H. L. Pratt, Miss Tunker, B. Cocks, Miss Ladew, H. Ladew, H. Page, D. Jay, Mr. and Mrs. T. Hitchcock and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas, J. Coogan, W. Hays, T. Willetts, Miss Canfield, G. Griswold, H. Godfrey, C. Parks, Mr. Sloss, J. E. Davis, H. Campbell, C. Schwartz, H. H. Higginson, [illegible]

BRITONS KEEN FOR GAMES.

Oxford and Cambridge Athletes Await Sanction to Compete Here.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The prospects of an international university athletic meeting during the coming Summer in America have become brighter. The athletes of Oxford and Cambridge Universities are largely in favor of such a contest.

Nothing definite will be done in the matter until the proposal comes formally before the Cambridge University Athletic Club and the Oxford University Athletic Club. The keenness of the athletes at the English universities, however, is such that it is believed the authorities will bring the scheme of another contest with the athletes of Harvard and Yale to maturity.

In the event of Oxord declining to participate it is likely that Cambridge will send a team to oppose the winners of the Harvard and Yale competitions.

NOVEL AIRCRAFT AT PARIS AERO SHOW

Many Interesting Features of the Latest Flying Machines—Progress of Industry.

Many notable examples of aircraft skill were exhibited at the Paris Aero Show, and a marked advance in construction was noticeable over last year's display. Many of the flying machines were effectively staged and the collection included a number of novelties which command attention, as showing the progress of the industry during the past year. One of the features was the exhibition of easily transportable military machines, while the hydro-aeroplanes occupied a prominent position in the show.

The collection of flying machines included Henry Farman's hydroplane, which was staged on floats resting in water. The machine was mounted with a quick-firing gun in the prow. Among this group was the Maurice Farman military biplane, with large wing service, which has achieved the world's duration record of an uninterrupted flight of 13 hours 17 minutes. Another notable machine was the 140 horse power Deperdussin monoplane, with which Jules Vedrines won the world's aviation championship in Chicago with a speed of over 100 miles an hour.

The Breguet exhibit took the form of a tractor four-bladed biplane with four wheels, of somewhat smaller proportions than former examples of these successful military machines. The chief novelty by the French Breguet Company was a mono-hydroaeroplane for the French Navy. Shown by the British Breguet Company was a type of a similar machine, the feature of which is a safety dual control system of cams, enabling the pilot in charge instantly to deprive the observer or pupil of control, thereby obviating the possibility of mishap through a misunderstanding. Another point of interest is that the ordinary metal sheeting folded over the entering edges of the planes is dispensed with in favor of a German process whereby raw untanned hide is dipped in a chemical solution, is then placed in position along the entering edge of the wing, and is again treated with solution, whereupon it becomes molded absolutely in shape, is almost transparent, and of a hardness akin to horn.

There was nothing obviously new in the scheme of construction of the Neiuport type of monoplane. The Clement-Bayard and the Astra biplanes were not particularly original in design, but the Astra tractor three-seated hydro-aeroplane, with its long, flat, simply curved floats, is an interesting machine. Louis Blériot's chief novelty took the form of a monoplane, with a torpedo or cylindrically shaped body. Considerable progress has been made with the design of the body and undercarriage of the Robert Esnault-Pelterie monoplane, with boat-shaped body, somewhat like the below-water hull portion of a racing yacht, and with splayed and spring landing gear. The fact is in connection with float construction nothing seems to be definitely known yet. Some are made long and shallow, somewhat like skis. Others short and deep, while quite a number of constructors are going in for stepped under-portions of the true hydro-aeroplane principle.

The Tubavion is a monoplane somewhat reminiscent of the British Valkyrie, but instead of being fashioned in wood it has a steel tubular frame and the under-wing sheeting is of metal, while the design gets over some of the British unconventionalities. The Savory tractor-biplane has the drive taken by two chains from the rear of the motor to propellers set on either side of the machine, and employs the ingenious form of elastic shock-absorbing device in connection with the landing prong on the front skid. There was nothing strikingly new in the Hanriot monoplane, Zodiac biplane, Sanchez Besa four-wheeled biplane, Vinet tractor-monoplane, Goupy hydro-aeroplane, Coudron hydro-biplane, or R. E. P. machine.

The torpedo-bodied new type of Borel monoplane has a hemispherical form of engine cowl, reinforced by a cruciform style of metal pressing, while the hydro-aeroplane that won the Merit Cup last September is also staged. The Roger Sommer biplane employs tubular steel for fashioning the skids and elevator carriers. The D'Artois "aeromarin" is in body form more like a monoplane, and is driven by a four-bladed propeller set behind and only a little below the top main plane, between which and the lower one there is relatively a great gap, though the chord is short, this construction being necessary in order to enable the propeller to clear the single-step hydroaeroplane body that is below the two main planes, and which carries at the upward-curved rearward extremity a hinged horizontal balancing plane as well as a vertical rudder.

The land type of the D'Artois aeroplane suggested a monoplane save for its wings, and is quite out of the ordinary in that it is driven by a long propeller shaft to a screw set at the rearmost extremity behind the vertical rudder and the rear elevator plane.

A new type of machine aiming at obtaining automatic stability was the Drzowiecki, which is a sort of double monoplane, that is to say, there is a big wing in front and another behind, while at the back are short vertical planes at either extremity of the wing, as well as a central rudder set on top of the plane. The system of employing short vertical panels to give greater surety of direction and to obtain a certain amount of lateral stability would appear to be on the increase, to judge from the exhibits staged on the various stands.

MAULING BOUT AT BROWN'S.

Madden and McKinnon Box a Poor Exhibition in Gymnasium.

Referee Bill Brown worked harder than either of the light-heavyweights, Bartley Madden of New Jersey and Bill McKinnon, in the main event of ten rounds last night at Brown's Gymnasium A. A. Referee Brown was kept busy separating the pair. The bout was carded as the star attraction, but was nothing more than a mauling match from beginning to end, with the semi-final of the same distance being a much better exhibition.

McKinnon, who comes from Boston, scaled 174 pounds and appeared well developed, while his New Jersey opponent tipped the beam at 171 pounds and looked to be flabby. What little honor there was to be distributed was in favor of the Jerseyite, but neither man did enough work to warrant a verdict. They mauled almost from beginning to end of each round and did little damage, the only mark of punishment shown being a badly cut left eye which Madden received after the sixth round.

The latter landed the greatest number of blows, but they were of such a light nature that they failed to make any impression on the Bostonian. There were no knockdowns nor any real damaging blows landed during the contest.

In the semi-final of ten rounds between two lightning-fast bantams, Joe Mooney of the west side earned the verdict over Young Rector of Jersey City in a whirlwind affair, which was replete with action from start to finish.

Yonkers Marathon on Thanksgiving

The annual running of the Yonkers Marathon race will be one of the big features in the world of sport next week. The Yonkers race will be contested on Thanksgiving Day and has the entries of about fifty of the best long distance runners in the East. An interesting feature will be the presence in the race of a number of Canadians. Five entries from across the border have been received and several more are expected to send in entries before the list closes. The Canadians who have signed to start are: Milton Fenn, Charles Wilkinson, Percy Wyer and Jim Birks of Toronto and James Dellow of St. Mary's, Ontario. The Mercury A. C. will manage the race as in the past, and the finish will be at the Empire City racetrack. The runners will start from Getty Square.

Riders for Six-Day Race.

Victor Breyer, European representative of the Garden Athletic Club, cabled yesterday that Maurice Brocco of Italy, Oscar Egg of France and Marcel Berthet, one of the best of the French middle distance riders, have been signed to compete in the six-day race in Madison Square Garden the week beginning Dec. 9. Andre Pertchicot, the national short distance champion of France, who has been in this country since August, affixed his signature to a contract to take part in the long race. Egg, who recently broke the one-hour unpaced record and is considered the best man in his class in Europe, will team with Pertchicot, and Brocco and Berthet will double up. The latter are experienced six-day riders.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 20, 1912.

THE ROSENTHAL MURDER CASE.

The jury in the case of the four young men indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal concluded its work quickly yesterday, after listening to a coherent and wholly impartial charge by Justice Goff. The verdict of guilty was rendered after only an hour of deliberation. The prisoners were very ably defended, and for one of them the semblance of an alibi was presented. They all protested their innocence, and insisted that Rosenthal had been murdered by gamblers whose traffic had been threatened by the murdered man's confessions to the District Attorney. The men they named were the chief witnesses against them, and also against Becker, the policeman, who was their accomplice. Obviously, the jury took little account of these counter-charges of the prisoners. If the testimony offered in defense of the prisoners had been thought weighty enough for discussion the deliberations of the jury would have been much longer. The jury in this case, as in the case of Becker, had to decide whether the evidence given by Rose and others, who were accomplices in the murder, was sufficiently corroborated by other witnesses for the prosecution. There is no doubt that their decision will be regarded as just by the people. That Becker planned the murder of Rosenthal and the four outlaws convicted yesterday killed the man for hire the people of this city have been convinced.

The celerity of the two trials and the gravity and decorum of their conduct have been most gratifying. Harsh comments on the administration of the criminal law in New York have been silenced for a time, at least. The District Attorney has gained great popularity by his management of this case. Assuredly he deserves praise for the quickness and thoroughness of his work. What he has done, however, is no more than his duty. He is the people's prosecutor of criminals, and the office he fills is honorable. Presumably the routine of the prosecutor's office has been carried on as usual during the Rosenthal murder trials, and no other cases have been neglected for the sake of these.

If the inevitable appeals in the cases of Becker and his four convicted accomplices can be acted upon without needless delay justice will, indeed, be vindicated in New York. The absolute fairness and forbearance of Justice Goff during both trials justifies the hope that there will be no miscarriage of justice.

THE BATH TUB MONOPOLY.

The Bath Tub Trust, usually so called, was not charged with being a trust, but with conspiring to monopolize the trade. When the charge was made criminally the jury disagreed, this not being the first case in which it has been impossible to send men to prison for doing that which the courts condemned as unlawful. The usual decree of dissolution will now issue, with the apparent effect that the use of the patent will be confined to its owners instead of to the fifty conspirators. It would be odd if the decree of dissolution should have the same effect as in other dissolutions, that is, should be followed by enhanced prices. For it should be remarked again that the crime alleged is conspiracy, not extortion. The conspirators engrossed the trade, taking to themselves more than four-fifths of it by methods unlawful under the statute, although a jury failed to condemn it. The decree of dissolution is virtually a mandate that the manufacture hereafter shall be in the hands of the single concern which holds the patent. That will be a monopoly by virtue of the patent, not by conspiracy. No one defends monopoly by conspiracy, and hardly anybody condemns monopoly by patents used in the public interest. It is the prostitution of the patent law which is condemned, not its operation.

The distinction between this case and others in which the Supreme Court has upheld the use of patents in fixing and regulating prices is clear. The patented article is not one of general use, and was not offered for sale or for use on any conditions relating to the purpose for which it was designed. The price which was fixed was not the price of the article in question, but of other articles made by its use. The monopoly which is condemned is not the monopoly created by operation of law, but the monopoly created by the unlawful conspiracy. It was not properly a question of patents at all, but merely a method of marketing and controlling the trade. This is a wrong against the public, not against the buyers of bath tubs. It is for this reason that the Government is the complainant, and that the suit is not brought by anybody who has lost trade or paid too dear for tubs. Yet it may be supposed that, as in the case of the Oil and Tobacco Trusts, suits for the private wrong may follow the declaration by the highest authority that wrong has been done. A suit for an accounting and repayment of triple damages would prove again that the Sherman law has teeth enough for those who know how to make them work.

Even more important than the decision in this specific case is the proof that neither the patent nor the anti-trust laws need tinkering. All that they need is enforcement, and that becomes constantly easier with each clarifying judgment. It has now been decided that the trust and holding companies devices are unlawful, and that when they are not used unfair competition is also unlawful, whether by or against capital. The law has been greatly strengthened by the decision that it must be construed in the light of reason. Decisions against trusts and conspirators have been easier and more numerous since that decision, and yet without the general fright which followed prosecutions before that decision. During the twenty years that the Supreme Court refused to use the light of reason its decisions were followed by fear that no business combinations could be justified. It remains true that only bad combines have been smashed, and it is proved that good combines cannot be dissolved. No rest for the wicked and repose for good business is just what big business needs. The politicians proposed, the Supreme Court has disposed, and now Congress would do well to take a rest, and give the country a rest. The tariff and monetary legislation are big enough problems to take all the time and ability lawmakers have to spare. The country will think Congress has done enough if it disposes of those difficulties in the way of prosperity, and would leave the patent and trust laws alone until the needs of action are clearer.

THE WOMEN OF CALIFORNIA.

With the letter to The Times from Gertrude Atherton, which appears in another column, she inclosed a clipping of her recent communication to The San Francisco Examiner, as follows:

> I should like to suggest that every Court House or City Hall in the State [of California] provide a large ledger in which the women that voted for Woodrow Wilson may inscribe their names. It will always be something not only for themselves, but for their descendants, to be proud of, that they showed themselves possessed of the fine ideality, the keen vision, and the sound common sense to cast their first Presidential vote for one of the few completely equipped statesmen ever called to the highest office in the United States. And it would also be a long roll of honor, which men could point to as their justification for giving women the ballot.

The situation in California is to-day in doubt, as it was when Mrs. Atherton indited her letter to The Times. "Morally," she says, "we have carried "the State for Wilson, no matter what "may be the seesawing of doubtful "counts." The dispute between the Wilson and the Roosevelt partisans must be settled by the courts. But there is no doubt on which side the women voters of California stood. They were not fooled by Mr. Roosevelt's eleventh-hour conversion to suffragism; they knew fairly well his political motives. And "you may bet your life," Mrs. Atherton says with a Rooseveltian force and directness, "what they didn't know I told them."

The Socialists have sometimes expressed the fear that women voters might, in an accession of feminine conservatism, come out against them. The women's vote in California, as Mrs. Atherton analyzes it, was not one of hidebound conservatives. They saw that Mr. Roosevelt's trumpery issues were chiefly State and not National, and that his ukases from the Presidential chair would not be heeded. They therefore signified their assent to the programme of reasonable progress outlined by Mr. Wilson.

BEGINNING TO BARGAIN.

The Bulgarian Government, after consultation with the Allies, has announced to Turkey the appointment of plenipotentiaries to negotiate the armistice asked for by the latter as a preliminary to a treaty of peace. The first point to be settled will be the terms on which fighting shall be suspended. This may take some time, and much will depend on the course of operations in the meanwhile. If either party gain an advantage during the period of discussion, it will affect the final outcome. But as the armistice was asked for by Turkey, and as the general situation, especially since the fall of Monastir and the march of the Servians to reinforce the Bulgarians in front of the Tchatalja lines, is so strongly favorable to the Allies, it is likely that the armistice will promptly be reached. Time enough may be consumed to allow of the junction of the two armies of the Allies, but hardly much more.

When negotiations as to the terms of final peace are begun they will in form be between the Allies and Turkey, but the European Powers will undoubtedly exert their influence to secure a peace that shall be reasonably lasting, and that will safeguard their own interests in the Peninsula. Neither the adjustment of the claims of the Allies between themselves nor the harmonizing of the claims of the European Powers will prove an easy task. The military union imposed on the Allies in order to make any headway at all against their common foe may have done much to teach them the value of unity, but when the division of the spoils comes up it will be found that elements of deep seated discord still exist. The animosities of race and of religion that, for generations, have set Greeks and Servians and Bulgarians against each other and have bred feuds in each nationality between Christian and Moslem, have not been wholly allayed by a month of fighting the Turks. The Allies started out to get reforms and decent government by the sword; they will now have to provide for them by an organized system of orderly government, in which the disposition of the police power will in itself be an object of jealousy.

In some degree this situation among the Allies will give the Powers their opportunity. In any case, the Powers cannot and will not leave the entire disposition of the conquered territory to the Allies. Their own interests there are too important and imperative. At the present moment it does not seem that there can be any question of Turkey giving up Constantinople or releasing all hold on European territory. The erection of Albania into an autonomous State, under the suzerainty of Turkey with a Christian Governor, after the plan that has worked admirably in Lebanon, would be one means of utilizing Turkish influence, and preventing the confusion that would otherwise arise. It is reasonable to expect that the Powers will finally reach an agreement in which none of them will have special advantage, for the simple reason that the advantages that could be won are not remotely worth, for any of them, the enormous cost of war, which is the only alternative. And it may be hoped that harmony can be attained between Russia and Austria on the basis of commercial benefits for each that would be profitable to both and to the world. If Russia were to receive the incalculable advantage of a free passage for the products of Southern Russia through the Dardanelles, and Austria were to secure free course for her trade to the Adriatic and the Aegean, the gain to both nations would be enormous, lasting, and progressive. It would not interfere with but would promote friendly relations between the two countries and between them and their neighbors in the Peninsula. Particularly it would make possible a good understanding between Servia and Austria, which in view of the great Slavic population of Austria would be most helpful. These are some of the fundamental considerations that make for peace. There is good reason to believe that they will be controlling.

PROGRESSIVE ALOOFNESS.

The Progressives wish to remain incommunicado. They would have no fusion with either of the old parties, no relations with them save those of war, bloodshed, and destruction. Three hundred of them meeting in this city yesterday cheered this sentiment. Mr. Roosevelt himself spoke against fusion. "It is up to the old parties to combine against us," he said, and he exhorted Progressives in the State Legislature and in Congress to go it alone.

The practical application of this advice, so far as it concerns Roosevelt Progressives in the State Legislature or in Congress, is not a matter of much importance. They are too few. It is quite conceivable, however, that in the Mayoralty election in this city next Fall the Progressives, playing the old, old game of factions or parties that stand out against fusion, may secure the election of a Tammany Mayor. Chairman Hotchkiss has recently appointed an Executive Committee to have charge of Progressive interests in this State. The appointment of the committee would have passed almost unnoticed but for the loud outcries of Mr. Prendergast; he was incensed and much stirred up because the unfeeling Hotchkiss had quite ignored Kings County in the make-up of his committee. When anybody denies full political recognition to Kings County, he is bound to be asked the reason why. With two such eminent Progressives as Timothy L. Woodruff and Controller Prendergast in that political division of the State, there could be no good reason why. Mr. Prendergast, with a becoming belligerency of tone, insisted that if Kings did not get its share there would be trouble. There was, for he did not attend the conference yesterday. Being a man of peace, Mr. Woodruff points out that there are six appointments to this committee yet to be made, and so Kings may get recognition.

Mr. Prendergast is a practical man, therefore he is for fusion, and so is out of harmony with the Colonel and the three hundred. The Controller believes that in the next Mayoralty election it may be necessary for the Progressives to make a fusion compact with some party or parties opposed to Tammany. As a matter of practical politics, that would be the obviously wise course. There will be difficulties in the way, however. If they continue in their present spirit, the Progressives will want to dominate the coalition. They will want to write the platform and name most of the candidates. Upon that rock many promising fusion movements have been wrecked. There will be no end of trouble with the platform. We can imagine no party in this city that would consent to fusion upon a Progressive platform, unless it was a party made up of the inmates of Bloomingdale. They would be enthusiastic for some of the cherished Progressive principles. A good many votes were cast for Mr. Roosevelt in the city. If the Progressives should refuse to unite with other opponents of Tammany, and these voters should support a candidate of their own, they would not elect a Mayor, but they might easily cause the election of a Tammany Mayor. The Republicans have done that many times. The Progressives took that course in Maine, when they did their utmost to secure the defeat of Senator Gardner, who, though a Democrat, is a progressive in a sane way, and whose defeat would have caused the election to the Senate of a fine old Republican reactionary.

It is a bit early to lay plans for the Mayoralty campaign, but the Progressives have shown their hand. It appears that, with the exception of Mr. Prendergast, they would prefer a Tammany Mayor to the election with their help of a Mayor who is neither a Tammany man nor a Roosevelt Progressive.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Ferocity Lacks Explanation. When the Parisian "Apaches" fought regular battles with the police and died rather than submit to capture there was nothing to excite surprise in their course. They belonged to the savage type of criminals, their deeds had been of the sort that requires a certain kind of courage, and they knew that arrest meant inevitable death at the hands of the law. There is no such easy explanation of the wild fury with which the man calling himself Vogel attacked the detectives who knocked at his door with a summons to surrender.

Vogel's trade was the particularly despicable and cowardly one of training servants girls to rob their employers—a trade than which only that of the "white slavers" could be described as baser. The suggestion that such a wretch as he would fight till he died rather than submit to a term of imprisonment—and he had nothing more to fear—would have been regarded as absurd. No motive for his desperate resistance is apparent, and it seems wholly out of keeping with his character as indicated by the kind of crime to which he resorted.

No fear of disgrace could have been upon him, except possibly that of appearing a weakling in the eyes of his woman companion, and though he may have had some hope of escaping immediate capture by breaking through the little group of detectives in the narrow hall outside his door, he could hardly have failed to appreciate that the chance of doing this was minute, and that even though he did reach the street it would only be to encounter a very army of enemies and assailants. The purpose of "selling life dearly"—of doing a lot of killing before he was himself killed—cannot be plausibly ascribed to Vogel, for he was in no danger of death, and he might even have escaped jail, since the evidence against him would have come from witnesses most of whom were of the poorest quality.

It might be said that Vogel fought as does a cornered rat, and there would be some plausibility in that if one accepted the conventional view of one of the most intelligent and courageous of animals. The cornered rat, however, has the best of reasons for fighting as he does, while Vogel, so far as is yet known, had almost none at all. The explanation of homicidal mania also fails, and the dreadful affair remains a dark mystery.

More Perilous Than Cannon Balls. One or two vague reports are to the effect that cholera has appeared in the Bulgarian Army as well as in that of Turkey, but this is not very likely, as yet, for the disease is not known to have been carried further than the Tchatalja forts by the troops from Asia Minor, and apparently the Bulgars have not been in direct contact with these men or occupied any positions abandoned by them. Even though confined till now to the Turkish forces, it cannot long continue to be so, however, and the danger which the outbreak of this ancient scourge creates is of such gravity that were it not for the fixing of so much attention on the possibility of war among the great Powers it would be exciting deep apprehension all over the world.

Cholera, while one of the worst of the enteric fevers as regards high death rate and the absence of any known cure for those once attacked by it, has now been robbed of some of its terrors for countries where the knowledge and practice of modern sanitation is a characteristic of a large majority of the inhabitants. We feel quite sure, for instance, that it could not in the United States cause epidemics like those which New York itself repeatedly suffered not so many years ago. But though now numbered among the diseases called preventable, and though nobody who will—and can—observe certain simple precautions as to food and drink need be infected, even where hundreds are dying all around him, cholera is still one of the great perils and still able to cause serious trouble almost anywhere.

The elaborate measures taken to keep it out are, therefore, far from unnecessary, even in the best regulated ports. That description applies to few of the Mediterranean ports, and to none in Turkish possession. To every one of them the Sultan's scattering soldiers will be carried, carrying the infection with them, either as convalescents or as victims not yet too ill to travel, and from these new centres it may pass to the ships of any nation trading in that much-frequented sea. Our chief danger is from South European immigrants. Winter will be our best guardian while it lasts, but all next Summer we shall have to be on the watch in every harbor.

Scientists in the Far North. Belief in the existence of a Crocker Land to the northwest of Grant Land is based on evidence analogous to that which led to the discovery of the remotest planet in our system. Nobody has seen it yet, to anything like a certainty, but there are what may be called "perturbations" in the arctic tides for the explanation of which a big island in about the position ascribed to the supposititious Crocker Land is necessary. There may be some other explanation for the observed set of the currents, but that one is the simplest and therefore the most likely.

The expedition to be sent north by the American Museum of Natural History and the American Geographical Society under the leadership of Donald B. MacMillan, a man experienced in arctic travel and of known competency, can with some confidence be expected to settle the question. To determine whether Crocker Land should or should not be added to the maps will be, however, only one of the expedition's many objects.

Of these enterprises there are two kinds—one, the "dash" for a given destination, with arrival there and return a sufficient claim to glory and reward for effort; the other, a careful advance into the unknown, not for the purpose of establishing a remote outpost, but to make a definite and co-ordinated extension of knowledge. There is little sense in praising one form of endeavor at the expense of the other. Both have their uses and they are too widely different to be fairly comparable.

As a matter of fact, no expedition, at least in recent years, has been purely of one or the other kind. Peary and Amundsen had the attainment of a pole for chief object, but both were also scientific observers, and both brought back data of great value as well as the "blue ribbon" of exploration. Not least of the services rendered by them, perhaps, was that of making any further sacrifices of life to reach the poles themselves unnecessary.

MEET ON INAUGURATION DAY.

Legislators Assemble at Albany on Jan. 1—Wagner Majority Leader.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—As New Year's Day falls on Wednesday this year, the Legislature will meet on the day of the inauguration of Gov.-elect William Sulzer. The Constitution provides that the Legislature shall meet on the first Wednesday in January, and the new Governor will probably send in his first message soon after his induction into office.

Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn will preside over the Senate, and Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York undoubtedly will be re-elected as President pro tem. and majority leader of that body.

Senator-elect Elon R. Brown of Watertown, who represented the Thirty-fifth District from 1898 to 1905, is a candidate for minority leader of the Senate, as is Senator J. Henry Walters of Syracuse, who has been a member of the Legislature for the past five years. Mr. Walters has served one term as Senator.

Alfred E. Smith, Democratic leader of the Assembly, is regarded as the most probable selection of the majority for Speaker, although the name of former Speaker Robert P. Bush of Chemung has been mentioned. Should Mr. Smith be made Speaker, Aaron J. Levy of New York may be a candidate for the leadership.

Harold J. Hinman of Albany, Cyrus W. Phillips of Monroe, John Leo Sullivan of Chautauqua, and Charles J. Vert of Clinton have been suggested to fill the post of Republican leader of the Assembly.

FAVORS COLLEGE "FRATS."

Natural Development of Student Life, Says Prof. Hughes of Miami.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—That college fraternities have a right to exist in the State universities because they are natural social organizations was urged by Prof. R. M. Hughes, Acting President of Miami University, at the second day's session of the National Association of State Universities.

"The fraternities are a natural development among the students," said Prof. Hughes, "and have not been fostered by any external force."

Dr. Robert J. Aley, President of the University of Maine, urged that the responsibility of university management be placed upon the students. He said underclassmen lack in experience, and should not be consulted, but student councils made up of older classmen, acting in conjunction with a committee from the Faculty, had rendered excellent service in the management of student affairs at the University of Maine.

WANTS ONLY ONE HEAD.

Attorney General Favors Single Commissioner for Highway Department.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—That there should be a radical change in the present system of management of the State Highway Department, especially in view of the probable adoption of the proposition for the expenditure of an additional $50,000,000, was the opinion expressed to-day by Attorney General Carmody.

The Attorney General believes the State Engineer and the Superintendent of Public Works, now members of the State Highway Commission, have too many duties to perform in their respective departments even to assist in an advisory capacity as members of the commission. He is personally in favor of a single-headed commission, with responsible executive heads for the various divisions of the State.

With such a plan in effect the Attorney General says much of the detail work now performed in Albany could be intrusted to the heads of these divisions.

INSURANCE BROKER WINS.

Law Restricting His Outside Enterprises Is Adjudged Unconstitutional.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—The law providing for the licensing of insurance brokers and prohibiting such brokers from engaging in any business except real estate was declared unconstitutional to-day by the Court of Appeals. The legislation was enacted on the recommendation of William H. Hotchkiss when he was State Superintendent of Insurance.

The decision was given in the case of William Hauser, lawyer, who also carried on the business of an insurance broker. He applied for a license, but it was refused by the Insurance Department because he was an attorney.

The court, in an opinion written by Judge Gray, holds that an insurance broker has the right to engage in any other lawful business, and that it is not conceivable what public interest would be served to prohibit him from doing so.

AS TO THE MAXWELL GIFT.

Denial That Any Teacher Contributed or Was Asked to Do So.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article in your issue of to-day's date I find that two women teachers are reported to have said that they had been told that twenty women teachers were contributors toward the purchase of a silver service recently presented to Dr. William H. Maxwell at Carnegie Hall in recognition of the completion of his twenty-fifth year of service as City Superintendent of Schools of Brooklyn and New York.

If any such statement was made to the two women it was absolutely and unqualifiedly false.

No teacher in the public schools, either man or woman, was asked to contribute a cent toward the cost of the service or the expenses of the exercises at which it was presented.

As Chairman of the Executive Committee of citizens who made the presentation referred to, I feel it necessary to signify the fabrication alluded to by a definite and emphatic denial.

FRANK L. BABBOTT.

Masculine Reflections.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why are women more mercenary than men? Is it that men have for generations been giving them everything they needed and nearly everything they wanted, and thus have made them instinctively avaricious? Or is it their maternal instinct, which prompts them to secure all that is possible for their young, even though they have no young, the maternal instinct not necessarily being accompanied by young, although it is always in waiting, as one might say?

HOMO.

MAJORITY IN THE HOUSE.

The Democrats Now Have "the Chance of Their Lives."

Under the new apportionment the House of Representatives at Washington will have a membership of 435 after the 4th of next March; necessary for a majority, 218. The Democratic membership of the present House is 230, or 12 more than the necessary majority in the next House. The present Republican membership is 160, or 58 less than the necessary majority in the next House. In the present Senate there are 96 members—Democrats, 44; Republicans, 51, and one vacancy. Among the Senators there are 49 lawyers, 4 farmers, 2 manufacturers, 2 editors, 16 public officials, and the rest are divided among the other gainful occupations, whether predatory or not will be decided according to the muckraking disposition of the present-day mind. Among the Republicans there are a number of the Progressive, or Bull Moose, sort, whose aim appears to have been the rejection of the political party with which they were identified when they were elected, and for whom it is responsible. In the present House there are 230 Democrats, 160 Republicans, 1 Progressive Republican, 1 Socialist and 2 vacancies. Among the Representatives there are 220 lawyers, 58 public officials, 17 bankers, 3 editors, 17 farmers, 10 manufacturers, 9 journalists, 1 lecturer, 3 authors, 1 undertaker, and the rest. All of these men had some visible means of support when they were elected, except, possibly, the single teacher in their midst who probably got very little pay for a great deal of work. There are also "quite some" of the present members who have delighted to call themselves progressive, but nearly all of them were sent to Congress by one or the other of the great political parties, all, indeed, excepting Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee, the lone Socialist, who has been defeated for re-election.

⁂

It is not an altogether new thing for the Democrats to have a majority in the House. In nine Congresses in the last thirty-seven years the Democrats have held the majority in the House. In the Forty-fourth Congress—1875-77—the party division was: Democrats, 168; Republicans, 107. In the Forty-fifth Congress—1877-79: Democrats, 151; Republicans, 142. In the Forty-sixth Congress—1879-81: Democrats, 148; Republicans, 129. In the Forty-eighth Congress—1883-85: Democrats, 198; Republicans, 124. In the Forty-ninth Congress—1885-87: Democrats, 204; Republicans, 120. In the Fiftieth Congress—1887-89: Democrats, 168; Republicans, 153. In the Fifty-second Congress—1891-93: Democrats, 236; Republicans, 88. In the Fifty-third Congress—1893-95: Democrats, 220; Republicans, 126. In the Sixty-second Congress—1911-13: Democrats, 228; Republicans, 162.

⁂

There were practically complete Progressive tickets for Congressmen in fourteen States at the recent election, and sporadic cases in other States—250 Progressive candidates altogether. In Arizona, Delaware, Idaho, Maryland, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico and Wyoming there was one Progressive candidate each. In Alabama, Minnesota, Oregon, Tennessee, Texas and Utah there were two Progressive candidates each. In Montana and Rhode Island there were three Progressive candidates each. In Colorado and Florida there were four Progressive candidates each; in Connecticut and Washington there were five Progressive candidates each, and in West Virginia there were six Progressive candidates. In Ohio there were 13 Progressive candidates out of 22; in Indiana, 13—a full ticket; in Kentucky, 10 out of 11; in Michigan, 13—a full ticket; in Missouri, 10 out of 16; in New Jersey, 13 out of 12, there being two Progressive candidates in one of the districts; in New York, 43—a full ticket; in Pennsylvania, 31 out of 32, and four Progressive candidates for Congressmen at Large, who were the same as the Republican candidates. In Illinois there were 27 Progressive candidates—a full ticket. In Iowa there were 7 Progressive candidates out of 11. In California the candidates were nominated at a primary election, and in some districts Progressives were nominated, but both Progressives and Republicans ran under the Republican emblem. In Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Wisconsin there were no Progressive candidates for Congress. In Kansas the Progressives were placed on the regular Republican ticket. In Nebraska the Progressives indorsed the Republican candidates in five districts and went it alone in the sixth. In North Carolina the Progressives and Republicans agreed on one ticket, but the Progressives nominated candidates in two districts. In West Virginia the Progressives indorsed the Republican nominees. Counting the candidates indorsed by the Progressives in California (11), in Kansas (8), in Nebraska (5), in North Carolina (10), in Pennsylvania (4), and in West Virginia (6)—there were 294 Progressive candidates in the field. If they had all been elected the Progressives would have been able to claim a majority of 76 in the next House; but as matter of fact there will not be more than 137 Republicans, counting both registered stock and half-breeds, or new strains, in the next House, and the Democrats will have a clear majority over all of 138. This majority may be increased somewhat by the later official returns, which have been very slow coming in from remote districts.

⁂

There will be many changes in the next House. With the exception of James R. Mann of Illinois, the floor leader of the Republicans in the present House, nearly every Republican of National reputation was defeated for re-election at the late election. "Old Joe" Cannon, one of the most picturesque figures in the House for twenty Congresses, barring one, and Speaker of the House for four consecutive terms, will no longer vex the souls of the righteous among his own party associates who depended upon him to do their work when they were afraid to do it themselves lest it make them unpopular in their districts. McKinley is also among the slain, and Rodenberg and Crumpacker and Ebenezer Hill and "Nick" Longworth have passed out with the tide. What the Democratic majority will do remains to be seen; it is really larger than is necessary for good and effective work; but there is no question how the candidates stood when they were running for office on the main question of tariff revision, and there is every reason to believe that they will vote right when the test comes. There will be differences of opinion, of course, local interests to consider; but the Democratic leaders in both Houses are confident that the members will carry out the pledges of the party, and by their intelligent and patriotic handling of all legislative questions assure the continuance of the Democratic Party in power for many years. They will at least have wise counsel from "the other end of the Avenue," and they will reject it at their peril.

⁂

Really, the Bull Moose movement does not seem to have appealed to the country very strongly. There were 294 Progressive candidates running for Congress, and of that number 277 were defeated, and the grand man, the invincible, the all-resourceful, who never quailed before any foe, the modern Moses who fought and sang "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" in the face of the enemy at Armageddon, was rejected by the deliberate voice of 5,750,000 of his fellow-countrymen. The Democrats now have "the chance of their lives," and the future of the party, as well as of the country, depends upon how they shall acquit themselves.

CALIFORNIA'S WOMEN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The large majority of voting women in California have proved themselves neither gullible nor hysterical. Their first Presidential vote being a big event in their lives, they read all three platforms carefully, besides analyzing the characters of the different candidates. Knowing that the country must have a change and have it pretty quickly, if we were to avoid internal disaster, they rejected the Republican candidate and platform without hesitation, put the other two under the microscope, and were not long discovering that the fancy planks of the so-called "Progressive" platform dealt with State issues; that Roosevelt, if elected, would either have a Democratic House and an old-line Republican Senate that would tie him hand and foot for the fun of hearing him roar, or possibly a Democratic Senate also, which would make matters worse. Few of them needed to be told that even with a Republican Congress it was doubtful if he could carry the necessary Constitutional amendments through, as so large a number of the States had Democratic Governors; that his platform offered little hope of any real tariff reform and consequent relief; and that the general tendency of the Progressive platform was reactionary, as it made for centralization, whereas the tendency of the rest of the civilized world was toward decentralization and democracy.

I made some thirty speeches up and down the State, speaking to probably as many thousand women, and you may bet your life that what they didn't know I told them. I also reminded them that every really clever woman in the country had laughed out loud when Roosevelt announced his eleventh hour conversion to the cause of suffrage.

Only three Moosettes confessed to being persuaded that true progress was to be found in the Democratic platform, and that with a great leader like Wilson we were bound to go forward with the rest of the civilized world instead of being a quarter of a century behind it; but a great many other women, brought up in the bosom of the Republican Party, asked me, after the speaking was over, where they could get the right sort of literature to study before election day. They would add that I had disposed them to vote for Wilson, whom they admired on general principles, but that they would like to study the question at leisure. These were all naturally intelligent women of few opportunities, but eager to do the right thing by their country.

While wholly convinced that the country would elect Wilson by a tremendous plurality, I was particularly anxious that none of the suffrage States, particularly one so conspicuous as California, should go for Roosevelt, as this would have been a severe blow to the cause of suffrage in general. Northern California went for Wilson by a fine majority; and not only is Los Angeles absolutely un-Californian in everything but climate, but there is no doubt in anybody's mind that there has been bad business done there. Morally we have carried the State for Wilson, no matter what may be the see-sawing of doubtful counts.

Of course California was delighted at the news that suffrage had carried in several other States. I was at the Democratic headquarters in San Francisco listening to the Presidential returns, when, following the usual cry of "A-l-l RIGHT!" with which the herald prefaced his announcements, came the unexpected news of the new triumph of suffrage. The men cheered almost as heartily as they did at the Wilson returns. I have not the least doubt, now that men have had this recent and signal proof of the conscientiousness and levelheadedness of women in voting upon great issues, that it will not be long before suffrage sweeps the country.

May it also help the British women!

The Democratic Women's Leagues in this State were admirably organized, and astonishingly effective, considering the dearth of money in camp. Mrs. Caukins and Mrs. Durst in San Francisco; Mrs. Huey and Miss Foy in Los Angeles; Mrs. Isobel Strong in Santa Barbara; Mrs. Peter Hamilton in Marin County; Mrs. Kilgroff and a band of exceptionally clever women in Sacramento—to mention but a few—gave their time, money, and splendid abilities to a cause which we are prouder of having won than of the winning of suffrage itself.

Petty "Graft" in Theatres.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice what is said in Sunday's Times about selling programmes in the theatre lobby, and I want to thank you on behalf of many theatregoers, I am sure, for your timely remarks. Not having made the rounds of all the theatres this season, I can only speak of one where the sale is done brazenly. From the "barking" of the vendor in the lobby the most inveterate theatregoer gets the idea that no programmes are inside the house, yet directly he pays his dime and passes in he finds "gallery" bills awaiting him. This is pretty tough for those who pay $2 and $2.50 for a seat. One can readily see how the London idea will replace the American unless agitation is raised against the petty graft; besides, to one, (and I am not alone,) who saves his programmes for a collection to be looked back upon in after years, these new-fangled souvenir programmes do not lend themselves to filing as do the booklets now in vogue.

There are two other things in the theatre to which I would wish you to add the strength of your pen, namely, the absence of diagrams from the box offices, and also the lack of music during the waits. I know that many will say "rather no music than poor music," and to this we all agree, but why not small orchestras, (a few properly rehearsed musicians playing semi-classic music,) and playing it well?

Miss Beeks and Union Welfare Work.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the interview with Miss Gertrude Beeks of the National Civic Federation, published in last Sunday's Times, she was quoted as having said: "An incident will illustrate how the Welfare Department of the Federation has supplanted the efforts of the unions." Miss Beeks did not use the word "supplanted," but the word "supplemented." To "supplant" the welfare work of the trades unions is the last thing her department aims to do; to supplement it, or any other welfare work, is a very different and worthy endeavor.

SONNET TO ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON.

Friend, who in these sad numbers dost deplore
A faithless deed: because I love thy land,
That gave to me of late so hearty a hand,
In thronged Manhattan, or amid the roar
Of that loud city on Michigan's still shore,
Therefore do I rejoice, that one pure band
Keep not ignoble silence, but withstand
Ev'n Her, their Mother, when she shuts the door
In Honor's face. So Chatham, whose free speech
Yet rings through Time,—so Wordsworth, whose free song
Comes blowing from his mountains,—dared to impeach
Their England, speaking clear for Man; and long
May Earth breed men like these, who scorned to teach

'THE HIGH ROAD' IS THEATRICAL MOSAIC

MRS. FISKE AGAIN PLEASES

Her Acting Skillful and Varied and a Good Company Provides Such Aid as Is Possible.

THE HIGH ROAD, a play in five parts, by Edward Sheldon. Hudson Theatre.

Edward Sheldon's newest play, "The High Road," is a theatrical mosaic. And it serves again to emphasize most of the author's merits and defects. Of the former one might name first a certain grace in writing, and a feeling for a romantic note underneath the commonplaces of life; of the latter an incapacity in the matter of selection. Mr. Sheldon has yet to learn how to catch all the colors of the rainbow in his dewdrop. The thing happens in nature, but the art that seeks to reproduce it is not easy. Better, then, to limit one's ambition for a time.

Wherefore it happens that of those things that happen on the high road, which we take it to mean that part of lifetime represented in some twenty-five years of Mary Page's life, one gets both too much and too little as the story is unfolded. Part III. of "The High Road—that is to say the third act, taking the more familiar theatre nomenclature—is, in reality, a little play of itself. What happens there would be perfectly intelligible had one not previously seen and heard all that transpires in the two preceding acts. Which is but another way of saying that the two first acts are really superfluous.

As they are slow moving the more's the pity. For there is much that is charming in the first and a little that is forceful in the second.

To begin with, one gets a sense of a heavy, heat-oppressing Summer day on an up-State farm, with an introduction trite as to subject matter, but not ungrateful in the treatment. Here one meets the stern, narrow-minded, dictatorial farmer parent, who makes a drudge of his daughter, Mary Page, and is outraged at the discovery that the artist-boarder (Alan Wilson) has been filling her mind with Shakespeare and romance. And here, too, is the young village lawyer, Winfield Barnes, bilked of his just pay by stingy farmer Page, and now about to set out to make his fortune in the world.

When he has gone away Mary is tempted by the poetic musings of the painter, steals like another Jessica from her father's house, and, lured by her own insensate yearnings and the painter's golden words, goes forth with him for well or ill, as the case must be. And presently, after three years in Paris and Rome, but still without the wedding ring, the pair are at home in luxurious apartments on Riverside Drive.

Now it develops that Mary has felt a call to go out into the world, to live her life, to breathe the fresh air, and to do service in the world. The artist and a friend—John Stephen Maddock, prospective capitalist and embryonic journalist—come in just in time to prevent a secret flight.

Mary harps on a strike of laundry workers. And presently she tells Alan that she must leave him. Unable to comprehend her longing he immediately assumes that there is another man. But he repents in time to bid Mary the kindly good-bye she has craved as a last favor. Whereupon Episode 2 is ended.

Now comes what is the most complete entity of the play, the act in which Mary, winner of a campaign favoring a woman's factory law bill, visits the Governor, whose aid has meant much to her and other workers in the field. And the present Governor is no other than that erstwhile country boy, whom her father cheated in the years gone by. Whereupon, in a delicately and naturally written scene, the two compare notes on their experiences, and Mary hears the man's confession of his love for her. Then she must tell him of those three years in which she loved another man, (now dead,) but not shame-facedly, not with any sense of degradation. It has been a part of her experience—she has tried to make the good in her life better, to bring good out of what was evil. And she has succeeded.

Naturally he is stunned. But when she is about to go, he turns to her, tells her that all that matters is their love, and takes her in his arms, while she rejoices at finding him the big man she has thought him.

What follows suggests a sort of composite of the political and social melodramas as we have had them for the last ten or fifteen years—Mr. Jones's "Mrs. Dane's Defense," for example, with its cross-examination scene; Mr. De Mille's "The Woman," with a group of political workers hanging on the testimony of one woman; Mr. Broadhurst's "The Man of the Hour," with its sternly righteous official unmoved by promises of favor or threats of ruin. For now Wilfred Barnes is a Presidential candidate, and his chances are good. But Maddock, influential with a chain of newspapers at his command and a tobacco monopoly to maintain, demands a compromise on the labor plank in Barnes's party platform.

He must have promises or he will expose the story of Mary Page's past, of which he has learned, and of which he has visual proof in the presence of the lady herself, whose face he conjures up out of the memory of that visit eighteen years before. Mary lies very glibly, attempts to establish an alibi, which would have been broken down in two or three hours at the most, then confesses. And for the second time she is compelled to defend herself—now to the husband who preaches of the moral law and of the inevitable consequences visited upon those who break it. When he goes out to make a political address Mary sends for Maddock.

Comes now Part V. with an attempt first to soften the enemy by an appeal to his generosity, then a successful effort in a threat which Mary makes to give the story herself to the Associated Press and allow the "men and women of the country to draw their own conclusions." Maddock, though heaven knows why, feels himself beaten, and notifies his associates not to use the story. And presently, Barnes, apparently forgetting how important it is to immediately notify his own committeemen of the change in the situation, steps out to address a band of enthusiasts. He mourns that for Mary he has lost his pedestal, but she rejoices in the fact that in him she has found what she has always craved—a child.

Much of which is told with rather more distinction than is common in our plays, but still with a considerable effect of tedium, and rather little conviction in important spots. The ending is especially lame and labored.

Also, one has the sense throughout that less skillful treatment in the acting would reveal even greater poverty in resource. For "The High Road" is acted in its main part by Mrs. Fiske, who, as always, brings a highly intelligent and naturalistic method to the proceedings. She succeeds very well, indeed, in conveying a certain impression of youthful enthusiasm in the first scene, and she is notably direct, sure, and comprehending in her treatment of the successive emotional aspects encountered later. This, too, with nothing of the hysterial excess with which some of these scenes might be played and which, while theatrically effective, would be apart from the nature of this rather self-contained resourceful woman.

A particularly fine performance of the suave and cultivated succesful man of affairs is provided by Arthur Byron, who, in fact, has never given a more satisfying performance. And there is virility, variety, and vigor in Frederick Perry's acting of the self-made young man who is ultimately to be a Presidential candidate. The other parts are generally well played.

The several scenes are solid and handsome, but the lighting in the first act was notably ineffective. And the romantic character of the proceedings here are such as to make this an important matter for amendment.

"MRS. XMAS ANGEL."

Laurence Eyre's Play at Special Matinee in the Harris Theatre.

MRS. XMAS ANGEL, a Modern American Comedy, in three acts, by Laurence Eyre. Harris Theatre.

Anna	Ethel Clark
Abraham	Wallace Erskine
Jacob Hennaberry	Albert Reed
Ingeborg	Hilda Englund
Henrietta Hennaberry	Foirine Arnold
Mrs. Egener	Carolyn Lee
Dr. Stewart Marshall	Boyd Nolan
Beulah Randolph	Jane Grey
Dulcie	Ednamae Wilson
Blanche O'Donovan	Ludivine Esmond
Mickey O'Donovan	William Kelly
Frau Bundefelder	Louise Muldener
Mrs. O'Donovan	Nellie Filmore
Signor Vanni	Albert Prisco
Signora Vanni	Gilda Varesi
Signorina Vanni	Dorothy Clark

"The feeling when one first knows one is a grandmother exceeds that of all the passions, sacred and profane," remarks Mrs. Xmas Angel, otherwise Henrietta Hennaberry.

Whereupon she proceeds to demonstrate the fact to the immediate satisfaction of the grandchild herself, and all the other dwellers in the tenement. This population, including Irish, German, and Italian children, as well as their elders, help to make a lively, if somewhat overnoisy, second act for Laurence Eyre's new play, much of which is amusing, some of which is touching, and not a little of which is superfluous.

Presumably intended as a pleasant play for the Yuletide season, and designed for the opening of Philadelphia's Little Theatre, it seems susceptible to amendment, which may give it a chance for popularity. But before that is even remotely possible, its first act will have to be reduced at least a third, the character of Mrs. Hennaberry will have to be made less aggressively inconsistent, and the pathos of its second act climax reduced to the minimum.

What pleased yesterday's matinée audience most were the scenes of the children, several of whom were exceedingly clever. And one is led into their presence through a story which in its main essential is not unlike that of Pierre Wolff's "The Secret of Polichinelle," acted here two or three years ago. The Hennaberrys' son Frank, now deceased, had married an actress, much to his parents' chagrin, and now that he is dead they still refuse to make friends with his widow. She is living in a tenement house, eking out an existence by sewing. And her child is ill and about to submit to a surgical operation. The grandfather comes secretly on a mission of charity, but the grandmother is brought through a rather dubious and far-fetched device, involving jealousy as first cause, and involving both herself and a lachrymose "French maid from Sweden."

The best scenes of the play involve the meeting of the grandmother and the child, to whom the old lady, of course, immediately succumbs. The child has been pining for a real Xmas, and mistakes the grandmother for an "angel in strange form." Here occur the pretty fancyings of the invalid child making a fairy palace of her tenement home, while she imagines herself a fair Princess besieged in her castle. The idea is charmingly handled, and the rôle of the child is delightfully done by Ednamae Wilson. Contrasted with her are the very naughty O'Donovan children, who break in the door, and ultimately find themselves invited to the Christmas party. Ludivine Esmond was capital in her outcries of rage and disappointment, and William Kelly was a properly "fresh" and noisy urchin. When he told the maid to "get busy and spread her wings" he brought down the house.

Excess, due in part to nervousness, was the chief defect of the general performance, but there was much to be grateful for in the acting, especially of Florine Arnold, Carolyn Lee, Jane Grey, Wallace Erskine, and Boyd Nolan.

The curtain was rung down on Mr. Eyre as he was about to respond to the audience's demand for a speech, whereupon Arnold Daly heroically came forward and took the duty upon himself.

Mrs. De Acosta Gives Luncheon.

Mrs. Mercedes de Acosta gave a luncheon yesterday at Sherry's for Miss Edith Logan and Miss Audrey Osborn. The thirty-two guests were seated at small tables, and Mrs. Oren Root, a sister of the hostess, chaperoned the party. The guests included a number of this year's buds and some of last year's débutantes. Among them were the Misses Marie Tailor, Gwendolyn Condon, Genevieve Sanford, Dorothy Cramp, Viola Townsend, Kathryn Motley, Caro Brown, and Helene Underwood.

Luncheon for Miss Mollie R. Bangs.

Mrs. Arthur I. Hoe gave a luncheon yesterday at her residence, 152 West Eighty-sixth Street, for Miss Mollie R. Bangs, whose marriage to Lorenzo D. Armstrong will take place on Nov. 27. The guests were Mrs. John Toucey, Mrs. Frederick S. Armstrong, Mrs. Livingston Platt, and the Misses Adelaide Gardner, Marian Fitch, Dolly La Montagne, Helen Harbeck, Mildred Holmes, Isabel Atterbury, and Gladys McAlpin.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Beginning Saturday, Nov. 30, a performance of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be given on Saturday mornings at the Little Theatre, beginning at 11 o'clock. Since this play opened there has been a demand for Saturday performances, but the afternoons of that day are given up to the only matinee of "Anatol," which is the regular evening bill at the theatre.

Charles Frohman announced yesterday that he canceled Billie Burke's out of town engagements up to Jan. 6, in order that she may remain at the Lyceum Theatre in "The 'Mind the Paint' Girl" until after the holidays. She will give her last performance there on Jan. 5.

The Dolly Sisters are to introduce a new dancing number in "The Merry Countess" shortly. The music will be an arrangement of some of the Johann Strauss airs that are not already used in the operetta.

Renee Kelly and A. Hylton Allen have joined Robert Loraine's company in "Man and Superman," Miss Kelly to play Anne, a role she assumed in London last season, and Hy. Allen to play Ricky Ticky Tavy.

The first performance of Gertrude Hoffmann's new revue, "Broadway to Paris," at the Winter Garden to-night, will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

L. Frank Baum, author of "The Wizard of Oz," and Louis Gottschalk, director of "The Merry Widow" and of "Gypsy Love," are collaborating on a new fantastic musical comedy to be called "The Tik-Tok Man," which is to be produced by Oliver Morosco, first at the Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, on Feb. 2, and later in the East.

Members of the United Spanish War Veterans will attend the performance at the Alhambra Theatre to-morrow evening. After the performance they will have a banquet at a Harlem restaurant.

"Our Wives," the comedy that is now playing at Wallack's Theatre, will move to the Gaiety Theatre next week, replacing "C. O. D.," which closes Saturday night. Cohan & Harris have canceled twenty weeks' booking at the Gaiety to make room for the Gaites production.

TITTA RUFFO APPEARS IN THOMAS'S 'HAMLET'

Great Audience Hears the Philadelphia Company at the Metropolitan.

SCENES OF ENTHUSIASM

Hamlet	Titta Ruffo
Claudius	Gustave Huberdeau
The Ghost	Henri Scott
Polonius	Frank Freisch
Laertes	Emilio Venturini
Marcellus	Edward Warnery
Horatio	Constantin Nicolay
Gertrude	Eleanora de Cisneros

Expectation had been laid in trains of gunpowder all through the Metropolitan Opera House last evening—especially in the upper and rear portions of the house—and was ready to take fire and blaze up when the spark was applied. It was all, of course, for Mr. Titta Ruffo, the very expensive Italian baritone who is at present the chief ornament of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company. That company began its series of representations at the Metropolitan last evening, and presented Ambroise Thomas's opera of "Hamlet," with Mr. Ruffo as Hamlet, it being his first and, as has been announced, his only appearance in opera here this Winter.

Probably for no other reason than the coming of a much-heralded baritone would Ambroise Thomas's "Hamlet"—or, as it was sung in Italian, perhaps it should be "Amleto"—have made its reappearance at the Metropolitan Opera House. It had not been heard there before last night in sixteen years—its last previous performance was in that season when Mme. Calvé and Jean Lasalle found in it congenial opportunity for their remarkable art. For some seasons before that it had had only a few scattering performances, and the mists of oblivion were already slowly gathering about it.

The opera, in fact, scarcely maintains any vitality in the operatic world outside of Paris, and it is known by the rising generation of music lovers in New York chiefly as being the source of that florid song with a waltz rhythm and a Norse ballad sung by the mad Ophelia bringing flowers, and perhaps to a lesser number of a bacchanalian song by Hamlet in praise of liquor, unknown to students of the English drama, but considered necessary by the French librettists. Nor is it likely that "Hamlet" will gain anything more than a transitory flicker of renewed life even from the popularity of Mr. Titta Ruffo.

There was an enormous audience present, and it flamed into enthusiasm at all the opportunities given it by Mr. Ruffo, which were many. It is not often that an operatic baritone can create no speedy an excitement as he created here and is reported to have done in Philadelphia. He was uproariously applauded after every solo number that he sang; and after the drinking song at the end of the second act, in which Messrs. Carré and Barbier, the librettists, made so great an improvement upon Shakespeare, he was recalled many times, and in response to calls of "bis," which came from his countrymen deployed through the house, he repeated it to their even greater approval. Whatever may be said of anything else, it is clear that Mr. Ruffo achieved a great success last evening.

He has, in fact, many qualities that make an immediate popular appeal. His voice is of immense power and sonority. It is still young, fresh and vibrant, and its youthfulness is still one of its chief charms. It is a voice of rather metallic quality; a voice of bronze, until it is forced to its extreme power in its upper tones, when it is as a brazen clarion. And these tones are the sensational feature of his singing. Mr. Ruffo's vocal style allows of little variety of color and of little variety of emotional or dramatic expression, such as a greater musical endowment and vocal skill might find even in Thomas's music. He undertakes very few "covered" tones, and in a tenor such an organ would be recognized as a "white" voice. Mr. Ruffo's stentorian upper tones are of the sort that easily arouse such excitement as prevailed last evening; but it is a voice that soon exhausts its variety of effect.

As an actor he has been extravagantly praised. Now, Thomas's "Hamlet" is a wretched perversion of a masterpiece; but it still retains some dim outlines of Shakespeare's conception, and in this opera he invites some dangerous comparisons that he does not meet with invariable success. His style is tense and vivacious, restless and uneasy. He made certain strongly marked and obvious points; but for subtlety or suggestiveness or consistently and definitely conceived and skilfully executed delineation of character his impersonation was not notable. It is an impersonation whose traits and outlines are chiefly melodramatic.

In the later scenes of the opera, where there is less temptation to extravagance of voice or of action, Mr. Ruffo was more satisfactory, even though provocative of less tumultuous enthusiasm.

Mme. Zeppilli was the Ophelia, a part in which she is a winsome and becoming figure, according to the operatic tradition. She has gained in power and to some extent in quality and smoothness of voice, and several of her songs were in many ways well sung and acceptably. But the part requires a far greater vocal skill to do it full justice than Mme. Zeppilli possesses, and memories of some of her greater predecessors would not be banished by her performance, especially that of the "mad song." With this the opera closed and the whole fifth act was omitted; nor was there any quarrel with the musical director for this summary treatment of the work.

Some of the other members of the cast did admirable work in the performance, and there should be praise in their degree for Mr. Huberdeau as Claudius, Mr. Henri Scotti as the Ghost, and Mme. di Cisneros as Gertrude. Mr. Campanini was warmly welcomed back to the conductor's stand, and conducted a performance that was finished and spirited, and apparently full of conviction. The chorus sang with vigor and precision. The scenic outfit was of rather moderate beauty and appropriateness.

Want Thirty-eighth Street Station.

Lord & Taylor and John Claflin have petitioned the Public Service Commission to establish a station of the Sixth Avenue Elevated line at Thirty-eighth Street. At present there is no stop between Thirty-third and Forty-second Streets. It was announced about a month ago that Lord & Taylor intended to build a store in Fifth Avenue, between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth Streets. The commission has notified the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to reply in ten days whether they will construct the station.

MISS HELEN NORRIS WEDS.

Miss Helen Virginia Norris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Norris of 906 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, was married to Ralph Ward Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Wallace of Chicago Heights, Ill., last evening in St. Bartholomew's Church, Brooklyn. After the ceremony, performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Frank Maxwell Townley, there was a large reception at the Chateau du Parc.

The bride's gown of charmeuse brocade was adorned with old point lace and old lace formed a drapery for her tulle veil. She carried a shower of lilies of the valley, gardenias and white orchids.

Miss Oliva J. Norris, as her sister's maid of honor, was gowned in yellow charmeuse and gold lace trimmed with brown velvet and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaids' frocks were of yellow chiffon with touches of gold and brown, and in place of bouquets they had wreaths of small yellow chrysanthemums. They were the Misses Vera E. Wallace, a sister of the bridegroom; Jessica Baylis of Huntington, L. I.; Ethel Dahn, Wilmah Vaughan and Helen Smythe of Brooklyn. There was also a little flower girl, Miss Elizabeth Dominick.

David Percy Wallace served as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Dr. Carl F. Bornmann of Brooklyn, Dr. Leslie Mulford, Harold Kimball of Philadelphia, Charles P. Hutchinson of Trenton, N. J.; Roscoe Kock of Pottsville, Penn., and Charles Burnett of Binghamton, N. Y.

The decorations at the church consisted of white chrysanthemums and palms and at the chateau yellow chrysanthemums and autumn foliage were used. Mrs. Norris received in lavender charmeuse and Mrs. Wallace was attired in silver gray satin.

Mr. Wallace was graduated from Princeton in '09, and is a member of the Campus Club of Princeton. He and Mrs. Wallace will spend their honeymoon cruising in Southern waters, and are to make their home at Chicago Heights, Ill.

John Slattery Dies After Operation.

John Slattery, a well-known contractor and worker in the local Democratic organization, died yesterday afternoon at Roosevelt Hospital, following an operation for cancer. Although for years prominent in the Democratic Party, he would never run for office, although frequently urged to do so. Mr. Slattery was a friend of Richard Croker and had visited him on his trip to Ireland last Summer. He had been a member of the Democratic Club since its organization. Mr. Slattery was a bachelor, his nearest relative being a nephew, Father John R. Slattery.

EUGENE YSAYE REAPPEARS.

The Great Belgian Violinist Gives a Recital in Carnegie Hall.

It was evident very soon after Eugène Ysaye had begun to play at his recital yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall that he was still the great artist, the master violinist, that he was on his previous visits to America, and that the young men who have arisen in the world of art since he was last heard here have still something to look up to and to grow up to. It is eight years since the great Belgian violinist last played in New York, in the season of 1904-5, and he then appeared after an absence of half a dozen years.

The ravages of time have had little effect upon the essential qualities of his playing, which make him a great master, an interpreter in the highest sense. Such a one glorifies and ennobles what he touches with the communicating flame of an ardent temperament, and raises it to the higher levels of art. Greater technicians there may be, but few who speak with a loftier and nobler eloquence, a serener or intenser spirit, when he is at his best. As he plays considerations of technique recede from the foreground, and the processes by which the deeds are done are forgotten. The personality of the executant is sunk and merged in the significance of the music; and it is as if the listener were put into immediate communion with it, for its own sake alone.

For his first programme Mr. Ysaye drew largely upon the music of the elder masters of the violin. He played sonatas by Veracini, in A minor and Geminani in B minor, both eighteenth century composers, a chaconne by Vitali of the seventeenth century, and Mozart's concerto in G major. And this music revealed many of the highest qualities of his playing—its breadth, repose, and purity of style, its incisiveness of rhythm—for all the capriciousness that he sometimes puts into it—and, above all, the flooding beauty, the singing tone, and the emotional poignancy of his cantabile. There are few who can so tug at the heart strings in the sustaining of such a melody as the adagio of Mozart's concerto; in many of the sections of Vitali's long chaconne—long as it was, and in a sense severe, it gave the audience the greatest delight—or the Siciliano of Veracini's sonata.

Simple music this is, much of it, and not charged with the emotional quality, the subjective expression, that modern composers write into their music. And yet as Mr. Ysaye played it it glowed with a kindling warmth and tenderness that transfigured it, while they did not harm its simplicity or its noble sweep of line. He was at his highest in the beautiful adagio of Mozart's concerto; music of imperishable beauty, which he voiced with supreme repose and eloquence.

Much might be said of his large, rich, and heart-searching tone, rich in shades of emotional expressiveness, of his broad and sensitive bowing, of his subtle plasticity of phrasing, and following of the melodic line. There were moments when the tone lost its beauty and his bow arm its firmness, and certain passages in which his tempo seemed unduly capricious; but they were only moments, and served not at all to break the spell of his magic upon his listeners—the magic of an imposing and dominating artistic personality.

Mr. Ysaye, it must be said, is not equally great as a composer and as an interpreter. Two small pieces of his own—the kind that eminent violinists seem to write in these days instead of the bristling and empty concertos their predecessors half and three-quarters of a century ago produced—were not of a sort to impress the listener with anything at all. They were called "Rêve l'Enfant" and, by somebody's astonishing feat in translation, "Old Mute." The last number was Saint-Saens's "Rondo Capriccioso." Vitali's chaconne—from what original was it arranged?—was accompanied by the organ, well played by Gaston Dethier, and Mr. Ysaye insisted on his sharing all the prolonged applause that this long composition evoked. For himself there were recalls without number by an audience that filled Carnegie Hall to its capacity.

DR. C. A. VON RAMDOHR.

Dr. Caesar A. Von Ramdohr, professor emeritus and one of the founders of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital, who was one of the leading gynecologists of this country, died suddenly on Sunday at his home, 24 East Eighteenth Street, of Bright's disease, at the age of 57 years. He left a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Oscar Von Palmenberg and Mrs. Edward Von Palmenberg.

Dr. Von Ramdohr came to this country at the age of 17 years, and completed his studies at the School of Medicine of the University of New York with highest honors at the age of 20, but a certificate was refused him because of his youth. He captured the Prof. W. H. Thomas and Budd Prizes for expert research.

Dr. Von Ramdohr completed his studies in London and Vienna, and began practicing in this city in 1877. He was consulting physician of St. Mark's, People's, and Post-graduate Hospitals, and of the German Policlinik.

Capt. Oswald Otto Miller.

Capt. Oswald Otto Miller, for more than half a century connected with marine affairs, died on Monday at his home, 2 Pennsylvania Avenue, Staten Island. He was born in Denmark 73 years ago, and was the son of an officer in the Danish customs service. His brothers were in the Danish Army. Capt. Miller was an officer on a French transport during the Crimean war. His vessel was in India at the time of the Indian mutiny. During the civil war Capt. Miller was in the British merchantman service, and was master of a ship that was captured by the Confederate privateer Alabama. After the war he commanded ships in this country. In 1867 he married the daughter of Capt. John H. Austen of Staten Island.

Quality

To the manufacturer or merchant who would win the patronage of discriminating buyers, the element of quality in an article is a consideration of prime importance. Quality always makes a strong appeal to the man of forethought.

When you invest your money it will pay you to keep clearly in mind the element of quality in your investments. Quality is what counts—more than any other one thing—and no one competent to act in an advisory capacity would influence an investor to think differently.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Under the pressure of the continued flow of commercial bills, representing exports of cotton, grain, copper, and a wide variety of merchandise, supplemented by drafts against several blocks of securities which have been placed in the European market, sterling exchange fell yesterday to $4.8475, a figure which had not previously been reached since December, 1910. This is about twenty points under the lowest figure reached during the September-October gold movement, and brings us, even under the conditions now prevailing in the money markets, so close to the gold import point as to give very practical interest to the possibility of an early movement in this direction. When exchange last sold at the rate to which it declined yesterday no gold was imported, but that was largely due to the fact that money was then lending in New York at 3½ to 3¾ per cent., compared with a London discount rate of 3½ per cent. At that time bills were being discounted in Paris at 2⅝ per cent., and in Berlin at 4⅝ per cent. Rates are now higher in all of these markets than they were when exchange last sold at yesterday's price, but a different relationship exists now between our own market and those of Europe. Whereas then rates in New York and London were at an even level, sixty-day money in New York is now a full 1¼ per cent. above the London discount rate. If banks here operating in the international money market cared to forego interest on gold in transit, as is frequently done in effect by some of the European markets for the purpose of stimulating an inflow of gold, yesterday's exchange rates were low enough to permit the start of a gold import movement. It is not likely, however, that the banks will regard present interest rates in New York as sufficiently onerous to borrowers to make it desirable to lend any unusual aid to efforts to import gold. There will prevail, too, an indisposition to add any element of unsettlement to the European money situation, and American competition for gold might be so regarded. Already, however, the tendency in money, both at Paris and at London, is toward greater ease, and an early conclusion of peace between the Balkan States and Turkey might do much to accentuate this tendency, and to relieve the London market of any hesitation in permitting America to share in the new arrivals of gold. The news in respect to such a possibility was favorable yesterday, for it included a reply to the Balkan governments to the recent advances of the Porte, which points clearly in the direction of an early cessation of hostilities. The more comfortable position into which the greatest of the European money markets have been moving and the pronounced recent improvement in the State securities of the belligerent countries both suggest that the broader questions involved in a final settlement of the disposition to be made of the territory conquered from the Sultan by the European allies will be reached without friction among the great powers. Events are thus moving in the direction of improvement in our own money market position, which will profit to some extent by our proximity to gold imports, even though no gold be actually taken at this time. Taking all the factors into account, it seems most probable that a gold inflow will at most be postponed, for the exchanges are moving so strongly in our favor that it seems only a question of a relatively short time, granted a happy settlement of the international questions which have been vexing Europe, before the relation of our own market to those of Europe will practically force shipment of gold to this side.

Another very indifferent market on the Stock Exchange failed to arouse any real interest in the dealings, and for the most part the net changes were negligible. The general drift, slight as it was, was again downward.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 4@6 per cent., with the last loan at 4 per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 5¾ per cent. Time money rates were 6 per cent. for sixty days, 5¾@6 per cent. for ninety days, and 5½@5¾ per cent. for four months and 5¼@5¾ per cent. for five and six months.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $397,018,858; balances, $21,698,551; Sub-Treasury credit balance, $216,274.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 4¾ per cent. for short bills and 4¾@4 13-16 for three months' bills; Paris, 3¾ per cent., and Berlin 5½ per cent. Money was 3@3¼ per cent. in London and 4½ per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 23½ centimes, and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 50 pfennigs.

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

SIXTY AND NINETY DAY BILLS.

London—Commercial, sixty days, $4.80⅝; ninety days, $4.78½.

DOMESTIC EXCHANGE RATES.

SILVER QUOTATIONS.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Tariff a Troublemaker.

It was freely predicted before the election that a Democratic victory had been thoroughly discounted, and that the effect of tariff revision had been written off in the weeks preceding the opening of the current month. It is being made plain by the action of some of the stocks susceptible to tariff influences that the extra session grows in importance from a market standpoint as it approaches. American Woolen common sold yesterday at 18, which was recorded as 5¼ points below the previous sale. As a matter of fact, the decline was but 2 points, since there was a sale on Saturday at 20, which was not officially reported until Monday. Yesterday's price was the lowest touched since the 1907 panic days. The preferred issue lost only ¼ yesterday, but it declined 2¾ points on Monday and 2 points on Saturday, so that it is now selling 15 points below its high price for the current year. Woolen common is off 13 points from its high for the year. It was only a year and a half ago that the American Woolen board aroused a great deal of adverse criticism by paying $31.25 a share for $10,000,000 of common stock bought in the open market. Preferred and common stockholders both wondered who had sold the stock to the Woolen Company at that price, and if the sellers were among those who bought the shares at around 11, during the panic period, three years before.

Jealous Shareholders.

There is friction in the once happy family of American Brake Shoe and Foundry stockholders. It appears that the owners of the preferred stock had selfishly expected to reap all the benefits accruing from the proposed issue of new stock. The preferred is entitled to all profits above the 7 per cent. paid on the common, and the disgruntled shareholders held that this provision should cover rights to subscribe to the new issue. The management evidently thinks otherwise, for the circulars announce that the company will issue 10,000 shares of preferred and a like amount of common, for which the stockholders will be allowed to subscribe at 215. On receipt of this news the preferred sold down to 137 yesterday, a drop of 18 points.

Mr. Schwab and Bethlehem.

Bethlehem Steel issues have acted recently as if many of the holders feared that Charles M. Schwab might carry out a threat, carelessly made, and leave the company. When he was conferring with the Committee of Finance of the United States Senate on the probable effect of a removal or reduction in the tariff on steel products, Mr. Schwab made the following statement: "My chief desire and chief pleasure in life has been to take this industry and build it into a great and sucessful thing. I have not taken a penny out of it. But I do not mind saying, and saying with all the earnestness at my command, that if this bill passes I shall drop it and any further interest in it. It is not possible to make it successful." Mr. Schwab was referring to the Underwood bill, which now seems quite likely to pass, with modifications. The President of the Bethlehem Company, however, is not expected to relinquish his interest in the steel business on that account.

Steel Stocks Sensitive.

Bethlehem shares began to advance early in the year, on the reports of improving business, and on Oct. 2, only one month before the election that was to put into office an Administration committed to downward tariff revision, the common made its high point for the year at 51⅝. The preferred had made its high record at 80 a few days before. Both issues have been declining since the votes were counted, and are now selling about 12 points under the high for the year. Other steel issues have been affected by the same considerations, and while United States Steel Corporation's weakness has not been so pronounced, its shares, as well as those of the Republic Iron and Steel and Sloss-Sheffield, have reflected in their prices the prevailing uneasiness over possible drastic reductions in the tariff.

A Kindly Verdict.

It is not often that a court decision proves pleasing both to the plaintiff and the defendant, but that is apparently what happened in the suit of the Vulcan Detinning Company against the American Can Company. On the announcement that the Can Company had been ordered to pay over from $500,000 to $600,000 to the Detinning Company the latter's shares enjoyed an advance yesterday of 4½ points for the common and 2½ for the preferred. The American Can Company has long carried a special reserve to meet this judgment, which was lighter than the previous damages awarded the smaller concern, and the shareholders expressed their relief over the settlement of the controversy by advancing both common and preferred issues fractionally.

Gold Imports in Sight.

Although the prevailing rates for exchange are close to a point which would seem to justify gold imports from Germany, as well as from London, New York bankers do not expect to see an early resumption of the gold import movement. The foreign situation is so disturbed that Europe would not allow gold to be exported except at a premium, and the conditions prevailing here, where money is in good demand but not scarce, are not such as to make it worth while trying to influence further imports.

The market ended steady. Spanish pig lead was unchanged at £18 2s 6d and spelter at £26 [illegible]

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Limited Activity Results in Few Price Changes of Importance on the Curb.

The Curb market opened moderately active and irregular yesterday, and soon lapsed into dullness in keeping with the inactivity on the Stock Exchange. The tobacco shares attracted less attention than usual, and fluctuations in those issues were small. United Cigar Stores ranged from 114¾ to 115¼, closing at the latter figure. British-American ended the day at 23, while Tobacco Products fluctuated from 102⅝ to 103¼, closing within an eighth of its best price.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

The International Situation Depresses Prices, but the London Market Recovers.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"There is no change in the terms of day-to-day advances in short fixtures. Discount houses were more anxious to secure bills than they have been, and rates for all maturities were quoted lower, but buying was cautious and did not absorb all the paper offered at the lower level.

"One hundred thousand pounds was withdrawn from the Bank for export to Egypt, and more will probably be taken for the same quarter to-day.

"The stock markets opened dull and remained so the greater part of the day, chiefly owing to the circulation of disquieting reports regarding the foreign political situation. These rumors were generally discredited, both here and on the Paris Bourse, and the relapse in prices was slight, while late in the day all markets showed a disposition to harden. In spite of the small volume of business passing, gilt-edged securities were comparatively steady. Purchases on account of the sinking fund again helped the market.

"In the home railways section the underground and tube companies' stocks were practically unaffected by the latest amalgamation developments.

"Wall Street and the chief Continental bourses were very idle, and the tone of the American foreign markets was dull in consequence; but Argentine Railway stocks again met with support at rising prices. Shipping securities attracted less attention, and all sections of the mining market had an easier appearance."

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse to-day.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Trading was dull and prices were flat on the Boerse today.

INSURANCE BROKERS DEMUR.

Equitable and Metropolitan Swinging All Their Business One Way.

One hundred fire insurance brokers, summoned by D. F. Driscoll of 7 Pine Street, met yesterday afternoon to denounce an alleged practice of the Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in demanding that all fire insurance placed on properties on which they hold mortgages be placed through two brokers. It was said that Frank B. Jordan of 115 Broadway gets all the business indirectly controlled by the Equitable, while Dutcher & Edmister of 1 Liberty Street were favored by the Metropolitan.

It was decided to contest this custom in the courts if necessary, and a committee, consisting of Francis H. Ross, Charles L. Fosdick, C. S. Rosenweig, E. Coletti, H. A. Wildman, and C. A. Rogers, was selected to act for the underwriters.

INVESTMENT SECURITIES

All Requirements of Prudent Investors

are fulfilled by the securities of Public Utility companies that we have developed, control and operate. The issues we offer are amply secured by the properties upon which they are a lien and by their demonstrated earnings.

The income from these issues meets the increasing demand for a larger return than heretofore from safe and sound investments. We would be glad to tell you about them in detail.

268 NEW MEMBERS ON MERCHANTS' ROLL

Second Day of the Association's Campaign Brings 31 More Than First.

BREED EXPLAINS PROGRAMME

In Addition to Specified Policies, It Is Purposed to "Boost" Constantly for City's General Welfare.

When the various campaigning subcommittees of the Membership Committee of the Merchants' Association assembled at the downtown Delmonico's for luncheon yesterday, their Chairmen's reports showed that as a result of the second day's battle 268 new members had been obtained, 31 more than Monday's total. The campaign is a part of the association's programme "to foster the trade and welfare of New York City," and President Towne of the association, and Chairman Breed of the Membership Committee expect that the total of new members will reach 1,000 before the end of the campaign to-morrow noon.

After the committees had reported the number of new members obtained yesterday, Chairman Breed, who presided at the luncheon, made a speech in the course of which he paid a tribute to the newspapers as the natural leaders in any movement that had to do with the advancement and protection of the interests of the business men of a community.

"There are nine private clubs in this city," said Mr. Breed, "with a larger membership than the Merchants' Association. The association is not in politics, and no man who is in politics or holds office is eligible for the Board of Directors or other governing bodies. No officer, Director, or Chairman, gets any remuneration for his services except the satisfaction of having done something for the advancement of the city.

"The Budget of the City of New York for 1912 is $189,210,950.33. Are you not as a taxpayer interested in getting your money's worth? The Merchants' Association watches these things. It offers every citizen a chance to bring his citizenship up to the high standard where it counts for something. It is trying to arouse the civic pride of the average citizen and give Father Knickerbocker a shock.

"The newspapers of New York are the natural leaders in any movement to advance and protect the interests of the business men of this community. If they believe New York City is a good place to live and do business in, it will go a long way toward killing the grouch of the man on the street.

"When times are prosperous the Merchants' Association is seeking to get for New York its fair share of that prosperity. When times are hard it is on the watch for every point of vantage to commercial and business interests. Wherever there is a meeting of the Inter-State Commerce Commission or railroad traffic managers to discuss conditions that might affect the City of New York, the association will see that the city is represented and its interests protected. Wherever the inland cities are attempting to divert trade and commerce from the City of New York, the association will, through its industrial bureau, be found on the job.

Specific Plans in Programme.

"The Merchants' Association is attempting to assist in the following matters:

"It is making a vigorous fight for the removal of the antiquated and unsightly Post Office Building in City Hall Park and for the restoration of the space occupied by that building for park purposes.

"It is leaving nothing undone to bring about the adoption of a comprehensive and adequate plan for the improvement of the harbor, docks, and terminals.

"It is making a thorough and comprehensive industrial survey of the city to show where industrial establishments are now located and where other new establishments may be located.

"The special committee on coal supply is investigating the coal conditions in the anthracite coal fields to determine what supplies are immediately available.

"It is urging the extension of the city's transit lines, both subway and elevated, for the protection of the public at large and of the business interests of the city.

"It will endeavor to obtain action by Congress for the re-establishment of the Tariff Commission, which was abolished last year by the withdrawal of the appropriation for its support, and stands for the principle of modification of any tariff by schedule and not in bulk.

"It is making a fight against the proposed establishment of a tuberculosis hospital in the heart of the Croton watershed.

"It is taking a conspicuous part in the effort to obtain direct physical connection by means of an elevated marginal freight railroad between the railway tracks and the steamship docks along the west side of Manhattan."

The committee which obtained the largest number of new members yesterday was No. 54, of which J. C. Eames of the H. B. Claflin Co. was Chairman. This committee obtained twenty-seven new members, while Committee No. 48 came in second with twenty-one. The new members included some of the most prominent business men and companies in the city, among them being August Belmont, the H. B. Claflin Company, the Irving National Bank, ex-Fire Chief Edward F. Croker, Henry Clews, Col. Robert M. Thompson, Stephen H. P. Pell, Calhoun, Robbins & Co., J. B. BIG SURETY DIVIDEND.

American Will Pay 100 Per Cent. Out of Surplus to Double Capital.

President F. W. Lafrentz of the American Surety Company of New York announced yesterday that the Board of Trustees had voted to pay a cash dividend of 100 per cent. out of the surplus to stockholders next month in connection with a plan for doubling the present capitalization of $2,500,000. The plan amounts to a stock dividend of a share of new stock for each share of old, inasmuch as the stockholders will be notified of their right to subscribe for the new stock at par when they receive their extra dividend.

After this operation the company will have a capital of $5,000,000, a surplus of about $1,500,000, and assets of more than $9,000,000. The company maintains more than 11,000 local representatives, and a private wire system between New York and its Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Chicago branches.

HARVESTER HEADS CALLED.

Hearing of Anti-Trust Case Will Be Resumed in Chicago Friday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The hearing of the Federal suit against the International Harvester Company will be resumed at Chicago on Friday, with officials of the company on the stand.

Edwin P. Grosvenor, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, in charge of the Government's case, has summoned E. N. Wood, Secretary; Alexander Legg, Assistant General Manager, and A. N. Reay, Controller of the Harvester Company, as the first witnesses.

The Government will insist that attorneys for the defense cross-examine at once or waive the right of cross-examination of several witnesses whose cross-examination has been reserved.

The Government's presentation of evidence, it is expected, will be finished by the end of December. The defense will then begin its side, and the taking of testimony may be completed by April.

PRESS REBATING INQUIRY.

Railroad and Coal Company Officers Will Be Called.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The recent investigation by the Federal Government of alleged extensive rebating by the New York Central Railroad to the O'Gara Coal Company of Chicago was discussed at a conference here to-day between officials of the Department of Justice and United States Attorney Wilkerson and Rush C. Butler of Chicago, special counsel for the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

As a result it is said that subpoenas will be issued for appearance before the Grand Jury at Chicago on Thursday of several officials of the railroad and coal companies. No official to whom it is not intended to grant immunity will be summoned. The alleged payment to the coal corporation of $60,000 furnishes the basis of the Government's action.

Dr. Wile to Address Hospital Workers.

The After Care Circle of the Jewish Maternity Hospital, which is working to reduce the present 20 per cent. of infants that die before the age of one year, through better care and training of mothers after the birth of their children, will hold its annual meeting in the vestry rooms of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and [illegible] Street, at 3 o'clock on [illegible] afternoon, Nov. 23. Dr. Ira S. [illegible] the meeting.

FIRST DUTY TO REPAY STATE.

Defunct Institutions Must Refund Public Deposits Before Private.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—The right of the people of the State to have public funds on deposit in a defunct institution preferred over the deposits of common creditors was upheld to-day by the Court of Appeals. The decision was rendered in the case of the Carnegie Trust Company, where the State had on deposit $38,445 on account of the general fund and $97,372 on account of the State canal fund.

A surety company paid the general fund account, but there is still due the State from the canal fund deposit $63,373. This must be paid before another dividend to creditors of the insolvent company can be declared by the banking department.

Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl offered to pay the State on the same basis as the individual creditors, but the offer was refused. A referee to whom the case was referred held that the State was not entitled to a preference, and the report was confirmed by Justice Neuberger. The Appellate Division reversed the decision and the Court of Appeals upheld the Appellate Division.

NEW HEAD FOR MOTORS.

C. W. Nash Succeeds Thomas Neal, Who Sought Retirement.

Thomas Neal, who has been President of the General Motors Company for the past two years, resigned yesterday to become Chairman of the Board of Directors. He is to be succeeded by Charles W. Nash of Flint, Mich., who is manager of the Buick Motor Car Company. James N. Wallace declined re-election as a Director and Mr. Nash was elected to his place on the board.

Mr. Neal, who is largely interested in the Acme White Lead Works of Detroit, consented to become President of the General Motors Company in December, 1910, on the understanding that as soon as the company's affairs, then badly involved, became straightened out he would be permitted to retire. The recent report of the company showed earnings equivalent to 17 per cent. on the common stock for the last year, which Mr. Neal took to be evidence that he no longer need give all of his time to the Motors Company. The Cadillac, Buick, Oakland, Oldsmobile, and Cartercar plants are all said to be working to their fullest capacity now.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat Declines on Weakness Abroad —Cotton Soars—Corn Breaks.

Wheat declined to new low records on lower foreign markets, heavily increasing stocks, and reports of an embargo at Fort William. Corn, after advancing early, reacted with wheat, and on favorable weather conditions. Oats were very steady all day on the small stocks. Provisions were active and irregular. Cottonseed oil displayed moderate strength. Cotton has advanced more than ½c per pound since last week's finals. The spot news is still a factor. Liverpool was an aid to holders. Coffee was quiet and a shade easier.

WHEAT.

Wheat sold at new low levels and closed at about the low point. The market opened a little easier on the disappointing English cables, steadied on the firmness of the Continent, but there was no evidence of foreign demand, while the Argentine weather news was more satisfactory. Selling became fairly aggressive toward midday, and in the afternoon the market broke 1½ to 2c a bushel from the high of the day, and final quotations were at 1¼c to 1½c net decline for the day. The afternoon selling seemed to be largely the result of the cash situation. The receipts were heavy at Western points, about three times last year, the total being 2,597,000 bushels against 761,000 bushels a year ago. The interior receipts in two days have been 3,000,000 bushels more than last year; the interior shipments have been only 800,000 bushels more. Winnipeg receipts were again heavy. The report from Winnipeg that the Canadian Pacific had placed an embargo on further shipments to Fort William and Port Arthur started active liquidation, as it was taken as indicating a glut in the elevators and inability to move the grain to Eastern lake ports and, for export rapidly enough to take care of the accumulations. The Eastern traffic situation is not improving. Exporters continue very much disturbed over filling of old contracts, and are making new ones with extreme caution. This applies to all export grain, either American or Canadian. Naturally, in the absence of ability to move the cash grain, hedging pressure comes into the contract market. There were rumors of a few loads of export wheat, but not important considering the decline. The American visible showed a gain in the United States of 6,578,000 bushels, a gain in Canada of 1,757,000 bushels, and a gain in the world's total of 8,635,000 bushels, against a decrease of 1,400,000 bushels last year. The world's visible is now 11,000,000 bushels less than last year. Cash markets were lower. No 2 red was quoted nominal at $1.07; No. 1 Northern, 94¼c; No. 2 hard Winter, 96¼c, and No. 1 Manitoba, 96¼c.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—The corn market showed considerable strength early, influenced by covering of shorts, and reports of rather limited country offerings, considering the favorable weather conditions. Later, however, prices turned heavy and the market closed at practically the same as the previous night. Actual receipts are still small, totaling less than last year, notwithstanding the size of the crop and the good weather. The visible supply showed a decrease of 463,000 bushels. In the afternoon the market sold off easily, influenced by the decline in wheat. Cash corn was inactive. The difficulty of doing export business is a material factor in the situation. Export corn is quoted at 52¼c, free on board, Winter shipment; cost, insurance, and freight corn was quoted at 68c, down to 58c, near by and forward, as to grade.

OATS.—The market was very firm early, with quite active covering of shorts on the more moderate receipts and the small stock of contract oats at Chicago. The total there is only 136,000 bushels, against $2,047,000 bushels last year. The market in the afternoon reacted with other grain, but closed very steady. Cash oats were quiet with standards quoted at 37c; No. 3 white, 36¾c; No. 4 white, 35¼c.

PROVISIONS.

Trading was active and the market strong early, with good commission house buying reported. Later there was a sharp reaction, influenced by the weakness in grain. Hog receipts were the largest for a number of weeks, amounting to 113,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market again advanced to levels near the best of the recent upward movement. There seemed to be but little opposition, and it was evident that the light offerings of crude were having considerable influence. The fact that near positions in the local future market advanced to a premium as compared with other deliveries attracted quite a little attention, particularly as most authorities are reporting only an irregular and rather conservative inquiry from consumers. Continued strength manifested by the cotton market has undoubtedly had a sentimental effect, with scattered buying of cotton oil attributed to this. Sales of crude were reported at 4.94c in the Southeast, at 5c in the valley, and on the basis of 4.87c in Texas.

COTTON.

Most conspicuous in the developments of yesterday was the unusual and decided strength of the near deliveries. Other options were substantially higher, but to a lesser extent. It was a strong market throughout the session, and the overnight gains of from 12 to 20 points were gradually enlarged upon, although frequent profit-taking by some of the larger interests held the rising tendency of prices in check. Ordinarily the evidence of important concerns selling would stimulate aggressiveness in bear forces, but up to the present there has been little or no assurance that these powerful operators will not again re-enter the market at a slightly reduced level.

The active months were within a few points of the best prices scored during the recent campaign. It seems as though the spot news is still the foundation for the bullish enthusiasm, with added attention given to this feature, because of the inherent strength of the options which will soon mature. From several quarters were claims that the local warehouse stocks of 72,000 bales are well controlled by interests operating for higher quotations, that the future market is below a parity with Southern spots, and that the probabilities are for a revision in the differences on cotton when applied on delivery conducive to an enhanced value of the contract. The Revision Committee will meet this afternoon, and the changes which are approved of will remain in force until February, 1913.

With the advent of the high prices was the renewal of statements that spinners would curtail their purchases over the South. Several dispatches were to the effect that demand had already slackened, but not a few of these reports indicated that holders were still adamant in their bullish views. Many in the trade are noticeably actuated in their ideas by the continuation of optimistic trade accounts. The cloth markets in general are presenting a strong undertone with well sold-up conditions admitted. The inference is that as long as mills can purchase the raw material at the South, manufacture, and dispose of it on a profitable basis, their buying will not show any material abatement.

News from abroad is rather mixed. The foreign market again showing relative strength, resulting to a certain extent in the initial advances on this side. Spot sales at Liverpool, however, show no important deviation from the total of about 7,000 bales per diem. Moreover, there have been some cables received intimating that the higher prices are restricting demand at Manchester; also that the crop prospects in Russia were so bright that importations of American cotton will be reduced moderately this season. Meanwhile, the general run of sentiment averages bullish with a good consumptive outlook conceded in this country, a crop of close to 14,500,000 bales thought probable, so that the exports will bear watching. These to date approximate 3,306,000 bales, as against 3,375,000 to this period a year ago, when more than 10,500,000 bales were shipped for the entire season.

COFFEE.

COFFEE opened steady at 2 points decline to 1 point advance, moved within a narrow range, and closed at a net loss of 2 to 5 points; total sales, 47,500 bags. The undertone was easier and roasting interests announced a reduction of ⅜c in one brand. Havre was unchanged to ¼ franc higher; Hamburg was unchanged, and both Rio and Santos were steady and unchanged. Receipts at primary points were fairly liberal, amounting to 100,000 bags, against 74,000 last year.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 19.—The Canadian Pacific to-day announced a general embargo on grain shipments on all its lines west. Elevator incapacity is given as the reason.

COAL MEN EVADE QUESTIONS.

Railroad Commission, Nettled, May Call High Officials, Including Baer.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—Vice-President Theodore Voorhees of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway will be placed upon the witness stand to-morrow morning before the State Railroad Commission by the attorneys for the city and business men's organizations in an effort to determine the factors in fixing rates for the transportation of coal from the mines to this city.

The hearing is based upon a complaint filed by the city and the business men that the tariffs levied by five railroads—the Pennsylvania, Philadelphia & Reading, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, and Delaware, Lackawanna & Western—are exorbitant and discriminatory.

The decision to question Mr. Voorhees was announced by Prof. W. Ward Pierson, one of the counsel for the city and joint petitioners after he had grilled E. B. Crossley, General Coal Freight Rate Agent, and Agnew T. Dice, General Manager of the Reading system, for more than four hours. He said he was not satisfied with the manner in which they evaded giving evidence, and that if the Vice President pursued like tactics he would subpoena President George F. Baer.

The impression was conveyed that the high officials of the other railroads, including the President of the Pennsylvania, would be called as witnesses if freight agents were reluctant in giving testimony concerning the charges of their lines. If this procedure is followed, the present investigation will rival the Government's investigation of the so-called "Coal Trust" here in 1907.

Apparently nettled by the responses of Mr. Crossley, whose examination was continued from Monday, ex-Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker, a member of the committee, with Judge Nathaniel B. Ewing of Uniontown, the Chairman, and Milton J. Brecht of Lancaster, began a volley or rapid-fire questions at the session to-day. Leaning over the rostrum and speaking directly at the witness, with much more emphasis laid upon his remarks, the ex-Governor said that transportation facilities had greatly changed in the last quarter of a century and asked Mr. Crossley if he did not think there should be a revision in freight rates.

"Answer 'yes,' or 'no,' he demanded; and Mr Crossley retorted; "No, I do not think so."

George W. Edmonds, Vice President of the Coal Exchange and a Congressman-elect, who began the sensation of the first session by revealing that the majority of the retail coal yards throughout the city were owned by either the Philadelphia & Reading or the Pennsylvania lines, was recalled to the stand.

"In your judgment, as a dealer of twenty-six years' experience," he was asked, "what effect have freight rates on the market price of coal?"

"There are various contingencies, such as shortage of coal," he replied. "I do not believe they would have any too great effect, for the prices are fixed by the retailers, with an eye on what competitors are charging."

PASS IRISH FINANCE BILL.

Ministry Carries Point on Which It Lost in Commons "Snap" Vote.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The House of Commons by a vote of 318 to 207 adopted tonight the new financial resolution of the Home Rule bill. This replaces the resolution defeated on Nov. 11.

The effect of the "snap" vote by which the Government was defeated, if the House had decided that its action should be final, would have been to cut the sum to be transferred to the proposed Irish Government from $30,000,000 to $12,500,000. The attempt of the Ministry on Nov. 13 to rescind the adverse vote precipitated such disorder that the Speaker adjourned the sitting.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Turner, Tucker & Co. are offering $500,000 7 per cent. preferred stock of the Metal Shingle and Siding Company, Limited, of Canada at par.

J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, Inc., and the Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburgh have been awarded $840,000 Allegheny County (Penn.) 4 per cent. bonds, which are tax exempt in Pennsylvania.

The Borne-Scrymser Company, one of the Standard Oil subsidiaries, declared a first dividend of $20 a share yesterday. The company has $200,000 of stock outstanding.

Sufficient assents of creditors and stockholders having been received, the reorganization plan of the McCrum-Howell Company has been declared effective as of Dec. 2. The balance due on subscriptions to the new shares must be paid by that date.

Jacob Wertheim has been elected President of the George L. Storm Company to succeed Mr. Storm, who resigned to become associated with the new Tobacco Products Corporation. Oscar Reinach was made First Vice President; Homer B. Lyon, Second Vice President; Thomas Crosby, Treasurer, and Henry Marks, Secretary. These men, with Maurice Wertheim, constitute the Board of Directors.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Considerable irregularity was reflected in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange during the day. On the 9:30 o'clock opening call the speculative leaders showed softness, with the general list in the subsequent forenoon dealings inclined to sell off. Later, however, rallying tendencies were displayed, the talk of an armistice in the Balkan war exerting a favorable influence. Movements in certain of the specialties were features of the session. Transactions for the five and a half hours of business totaled 27,660 shares, including 3,290 shares done on the 9:30 o'clock call.

PROPOSALS.

NEW MEXICO STATE BONDS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Loan Commissioners of the State of New Mexico will, at the office of the Treasurer of said State, in the Capitol Building, at the City of Santa Fe, New Mexico, on the 16th day of December, 1912, at the hour of 2 o'clock in the afternoon, receive sealed proposals for the purchase of $1,125,000 of bonds of said State of, Series "C," which are to be issued in accordance with the provisions of Section Three of Article IX. of the Constitution of said State of New Mexico, and of an act of the Legislature of said State, which became a law on the first day of June, 1912, for the payment of the bonds and accrued interest thereof of Santa Fe County, which were validated, approved, and confirmed by act of Congress of January 16, 1897, and assumed by said State in Section One of Article IX. of said Constitution. Said bonds are to be issued in the denomination of one thousand dollars each, dated December 16, 1912, and will be in the form prescribed in Section 14 of said act of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, and the principal thereof will be payable to bearer in gold coin or its equivalent in lawful money of the United States forty years after their date, and they may be redeemed at the option of the State at any time after ten years from their date. The interest on said bonds will be payable semi-annually, March 1 and Septemmer 1, and principal and interest will be payable at the office of the State Treasurer at Santa Fe, New Mexico, or at the Seaboard National Bank, New York City, at the option of the holder. The said bonds are offered for sale to the person who will agree to take the same at par and accrued interest to date of delivery, and at a rate of interest to be named in his bid, and said bonds or any part thereof will be awarded to the person offering to accept the same at par at the lowest rate of interest. Each bid must be sealed, marked "Proposal for purchase of bonds," and accompanied by a certified check for not less than two per cent. of the amount of the bid, as security for the faithful performance of such bid in case said bonds or a part thereof shall be awarded to the person making such bid, and as liquidated damages in case of the failure of the successful bidder to fulfill his contract, but no such check drawn upon a banking house making the bid will be accepted as such security. The Loan Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all bids, and particularly specify that no bid will be considered unless it is an unconditional bid for the purchase of said bonds or a part thereof, not made dependent upon any contingency whatever. It is further distinctly stated that only so much of said bonds will be sold as may be necessary, at the price bid, to realize the amount of the indebtedness to be paid, which indebtedness does ont exceed the sum of $1,125,000. Intending bidders who may desire further information can obtain it by application to said Board of Loan Commissioners at Santa Fe, New Mexico.

W. G. SARGENT,
Secretary of the Board of Loan Commissioners.

UNTERMYER MAY QUIT MONEY TRUST HUNT

Pujo and Others, Vexed by Certain Publications, Plan to Discipline the Lawyer.

CLASH OVER CURRENCY LAW

Another Sub-Committee Resents His Alleged Desire to Have a Hand in That Subject Also.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—What threatened yesterday to be a clash in the House Committee on Banking and Currency between factions headed by Chairman Arsene P. Pujo of Louisiana, who heads the sub-committee investigating the so-called money trust, and the next ranking Democrat, Carter Glass of Virginia, who heads the sub-committee studying a revision of the country's financial system, has proved to be a serious outbreak in Chairman Pujo's own inquiry.

The first indication of the real trouble came to-day in the resignation as counsel of the sub-committee of Edgar H. Farrar of New Orleans. If this should be followed by the resignation of Samuel Untermyer of New York, his associate counsel, no one on the committee would be surprised. From one qualified to know it can be stated that Mr. Pujo is "furious" with Mr. Untermyer and is determined that Mr. Untermyer shall remain as counsel of the investigation, "only in a subordinate capacity." Mr. Farrar is a close personal friend of Mr. Pujo, and his resignation is thought to have been arranged with Mr. Pujo's consent, preliminary to to-morrow's meeting to open the way for the disciplining of Mr. Untermyer.

The chief cause of Mr. Pujo's displeasure lies in certain newspaper publications that have purported to give the results of the committee's investigation to date. Those publications have been ascribed to Mr. Untermyer, and that view has been accepted by Chairman Pujo and some of the members of his sub-committee. They denounce these publicaitnos, not only as unauthorized, but also as being anything but a true statement of the sentiment of the committee.

The publications gave elaborate tables purporting to show interlocking directorates of various dominating financial groups. The inference conveyed was that through Mr. Untermyer's activities as counsel the committee's investigation of the money trust had narrowed down to specific groups, and that the hypothetical "money trust" was about to take tangible form. From other sources, however, it has come that a subordinate employe of the committee has gone through available sources of information and for the convenience of the committee has made unofficial tables. It is asserted that the work of this subordinate formed the basis for the publications.

One of the reports circulated yesterday was to the effect that Mr. Pujo was eager to bring in a bill embodying the Aldrich currency plan, so as to forestall Mr. Glass, who is known to oppose this plan. The whole subject of currency reform was referred months ago to Mr. Glass's sub-committee by Chairman Pujo, who chose the other end of the investigation. Mr. Pujo to-day assured Mr. Glass that he had been misrepresented, and so complete harmony was restored. Members of both sub-committees, however, are criticising Mr. Untermyer to-night on the idea that Mr. Untermyer would not be averse to seeing in the report of the sub-committee, for which he is counsel, a recommendation for currency reform.

Mr. Untermyer came to Washington from New York this evening and held a long conference at the Raleigh Hotel with Mr. Pujo and Mr. Glass that lasted until nearly midnight. After the conference it was intimated strongly that Mr. Untermyer probably would retire from his association with the committee. Mr. Untermyer denied all responsibility for the publication of information concerning the alleged actions of the committee, but it was intimated that little in the way of compromise had been effected.

Mr. Untermyer said there was not now, and never at any time had been, the slightest friction or disagreement either among the members of the committee or with or between counsel. There had been not even the friendly differences as to policy that might easily arise.

The resignation of Mr. Farrar to-day also disclosed that the Pujo committee had practically abandoned the most important aspect of its investigation. That had to do with the National banking system. It has found itself unable without additional legislation to reach the books of the National banks, and will devote itself hereafter to the Clearing House, the Stock Exchange, and a general inquiry into financial control. Instead of waiting for the needed legislation Mr. Pujo has indicated a wish to bring the money trust investigation to an end as speedily as possible, and has announced that by Dec. 20 he hopes to begin consideration of the committee's report.

Representative Glass has called a meeting of his sub-committee for next Monday, Nov. 25. At that meeting there will be a discussion of plans of procedure respecting banking and currency legislation.

Mr. Glass declined to-night to discuss the provisions of a Currency bill, which he is reported to have drafted.

"While it is true that I have been working on currency matters and have a tentative draft of a currency bill," said Mr. Glass, "I would greatly regret to have the impression go out that the sub-committee of which I am Chairman has approved any bill or adopted any definite line of action. The committee, as such, will carefully hear all interests before it will specifically prepare a substitute for the Vreeland law."

CENTRAL ASKS FOR TIME.

Public Hearing Ordered on Delay in Extending Streets Over Tracks.

The New York Central Railroad is applying for an extension of time for the completion of the bridges necessary to extend the west side of Park Avenue, the cross-town streets and Vanderbilt Avenue over its tracks. It had been hoped that the entire Grand Central improvement would be completed by the end of the present year, but now the company is naming a new set of dates for the restoration of the surface of Park and Vanderbilt Avenues.

By Feb. 1 Park Avenue should be restored from Fifty-second to Fifty-third Street and Vanderbilt Avenue from Forty-second to Forty-third Street; by March 1 Park Avenue should be completed from Forty-eighth to Forty-ninth Street and from Fiftieth to Fifty-first Street, and the Forty-third Street cross-town bridge should be built; by May 1 the bridge over the New York Central tracks at Forty-sixth Street should be finished; by June 1 Forty-seventh Street should be carried across the tracks and Park Avenue restored from Forty-ninth to Fiftieth Street; by Aug. 1 Forty-eighth Street should have its cross-town bridge and Park Avenue be finished between Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, and by Jan. 1, 1914, the bridge for Forty-fifth Street should be in place.

In addition the railroad company wishes permission to put off the construction of the elevated roadway from Forty-fifth Street along Vanderbilt Avenue and Forty-second Street to meet the end of the viaduct, to be built by the city over the latter thoroughfare, from Dec. 31 to Feb. 1, and that the time for the completion of that part of this elevated roadway opposite the Forty-second Street viaduct be extended to Aug. 1.

The Board of Estimate has already granted these extensions of time and the Public Service Commission will hold a hearing on the application of the railroad company on Dec. 4.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Sapphire Bearings, Indian Leather, and Fur Scrap at Lower Rates.

The Board of United States General Appraisers sustained a protest by the General Electric Company against entry under the Tariff act of 1909 of small sapphires cut into bearings for electrical instruments, and taxed at 50 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 112 as articles composed of semi-precious stones. The board found that bearings for all instruments of precision other than watches or clocks, made of precious stones, were dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 480, as unenumerated manufactured articles.

The board also sustained a protest by Berkovits, Goldsmith & Spiegel on leather returned by the Collector at 15 per cent. ad valorem as calfskins tanned or dressed. The importers established that the goods were rough leather, dutiable at 5 per cent. and taken from undersized but fully grown East Indian cows.

The Hatters' Fur Exchange gained free entry under the act of 1909 on undressed fur clippings assessed at 10 per cent. as "waste," but shown to be furs, undressed, according to Paragraph 573.

Protests overruled were by Haughton, Lee & Hoyt, T. C. Dunham, M. J. Corbett & Co., Roberts, Cushman & Co., and H. Bischoff & Co.

SPRING OUTLOOK PROMISING.

I. B. Hyman Says Conditions Are Better Than for Some Time.

Few complaints regarding the condition of business are heard in the local waist and dress market. According to I. B. Hyman of I. B. Hyman & Company, 31 West Twenty-seventh Street, the outlook for Spring is better than it has been for the last two years.

"While none of the buyers are plunging at present," said Mr. Hyman yesterday, "the Spring orders already booked are encouraging. Business in the West seems more active than in the Eastern States, but there is a general feeling of optimism in the trade. Retail conditions are healthy and a steady improvement is looked for. The possibilities of tariff revision will not affect this industry immediately, though some effect will doubtless be felt later. The new season is fairly well under way, and, though merchants are not buying heavily, we are not worrying. The tendency now is to buy more often and not so much at a time."

LACES AND EMBROIDERIES.

Trading in Former Dull at Moment—Colored Embroideries Good.

With the initial buying of embroideries for Spring largely completed, one of the principal houses in the local market reported yesterday that the volume of business done to date was much better than earlier buying forecasted. This condition was reflected to a considerable extent in other quarters of the trade. Business improved in the last week or two with certain houses, due, it was believed, to increased confidence following election. Galloons and colored embroideries are good, and the call for the narrower ranges of flouncings continued well.

The between-season dullness usual at this time of the year keeps trading light in the lace market. Heavy laces continue inactive, but there is a belief held that the coming season will witness a return to them. Good Spring business is anticipated, in which Japanese, Paraguay, and craquelle design effects are expected to play a prominent part. The last-named are shown in white, ecru, and flesh color, in a variety of widths.

HABERDASHERY GOING WELL.

Holiday Orders Larger Than at This Time a Year Ago.

Salesmen out with the lines of jewelry usually carried by haberdashers are sending in promising reports, and in many cases the holiday orders on the books of the manufacturers are larger than at this time a year ago. The demand is well diversified, with pearl novelties, cuff links, and pins receiving particularly good call.

The neckwear manufacturers are busy taking care of the orders already received. Many of them are practically sold up for the holiday season. The sale on fine grades of knitted ties is keeping up, and cut silks are steadily becoming more popular. Imperial scarves are in good demand.

Silk shirts are selling especially well for Spring. The demand for plain negligees with soft cuffs is also good. Factories are well supplied with orders and working full time.

BIG JUDGMENTS UNSATISFIED.

Sheriff's Deputies Make Vain Attempt to Collect $270,000.

Although Sheriff Julius Harburger broke the records of his office yesterday by sending deputies to collect judgments amounting to about $270,000, the receipts of the day amounted to exactly nothing.

The large amount was demanded from two sources. Felix Isman, the real estate operator of 1 East Fortieth Street, was visited by Deputy Sheriff Gorman, who expressed his willingness to wait in the outer office while Mr. Isman wrote out a check for the $130,912.06 due to the Provident Life and Trust Company on a judgment obtained on Nov. 8. Mr. Isman explained fully to the officer of the peace that the judgment was entered not against Felix Isman, but against Felix Isman, Inc.—a corporation. Thereupon the deputy took his leave.

The other judgment was against the Melrose Security Company, which owes the Northern Bank $138,135.46 on a judgment. The address of the Security Company was registered as 5 Nassau Street. But Deputy Winters searched that building in vain and finally was forced to give up his quest.

New Yorker Buys Water Power Site.

TELLURIDE, Col., Nov. 19.—For the purpose of reorganization, the entire holdings of the Telluride Power Company, embracing numerous power generating plants, transmission lines, reservoirs, and water power sites in Colorado, Utah, and Idaho, were sold yesterday by the Sheriff. The purchaser was W. E. Wheeler, President of the Bank of Telluride, acting for Neil A. Withers of New York, and the purchase price was $6,460,000.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A meeting of the silk and dress goods buyers of the Dry Goods Alliance will be held at 9 A. M. to-day at 75 Spring Street. Buyers of these goods for the firms represented here by J. E. Manix & Co. will meet to-day at 1,270 Broadway.

B. Jaffin & Co., underwear, 130 West Seventeenth Street, have leased new quarters in the building at 151 West Thirtieth Street. About 7,500 square feet of floor space will be occupied by them.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Waists of crisp finish batistes are selling readily for the coming Spring. Large orders have also been taken for crepes and fancy voiles.

Reports from more than fifty representative retailers in various parts of the country show that they are practically unanimous in the belief that the coming Spring season will be one of the best in some time for embroideries.

Many large duplicate orders for beaded goods in black, white, and colors have been received by manufacturers of trimmings in the local market.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The flax spinners of Rhenish Prussia in 1911 had the worst year in their history, largely because the prices for flax were the highest for forty years, and yarn prices could not be raised on account of the low prices offered by competing foreign firms. In the linen-weaving industry manufacturers held back because of high prices and began to buy only toward the end of the year. Most of them closed the year with heavy losses.

A Brazilian cable from London says that the Brazilian Timber Estates Company has been registered at Somerset House with $700,000 capital. Its object is to purchase the Santa Fe estate, in the State of Rio de Janeiro, with houses and farms, and to engage in the timber trade.

There opened in Hongkong on Oct. 1 a permanent exhibit of Philippine products. Subsidiary to this there are offered for sale embroideries, shellwork, spears, and other Philippine articles, which are sold to pay the running expenses. The exhibit is furnished by the Bureau of Publicity of the Philippine Government and the Manila Merchants' Association.

WEEK'S EXPORTS DECREASE.

Customs Returns Show Drop of $342,058—Wheat Shipments Heavy.

Wheat exports from the Port of New York in the week ended Nov. 16 amounted to 1,464,647 bushels, a substantial gain over shipments of the previous week. Beef shipments in the same period aggregated 1,811 barrels and 603 tierces. Other shipments of important commodities included pork, 3,296 barrels; bacons, 3,078,600 pounds; ham, 125,000 pounds; lard, 5,572,450 pounds; butter, 25,500 pounds; cheese, 86,490 pounds; peas, 23,366 bushels; beans, 3,389 bushels; oatmeal, 100 packages, and flour, 22,389 barrels and 126,382 sacks.

According to figures made public by the local Custom House yesterday, the total value of the week's exports, exclusive of specie, was $16,201,512, against $16,543,570 a week ago. England was again the heaviest receiver, shipments to that country being valued at $2,813,957. Exports to the British possessions and Germany followed in the order named.

COAL TRADE STEADY.

Effects of Cooler Weather Not Greatly Felt in Anthracite Market.

"The sharp drop in temperature that occurred toward the end of last week brought a rush of orders into retail offices," The Coal Trade Journal will say to-day, "but the effect on the wholesale trade has not been pronounced as yet. That is, the premium on individual tonnage was not forced to higher levels than had previously prevailed. Owing to the lateness of the season, the change in the weather had been anticipated, and its arrival brought about less of a flurry than would have followed an unexpected cold wave. Prices range from $6.25 to $7, free on board, for the domestic sizes, with the higher figure obtained only on stove and chestnut. Egg is comparatively easy at $6.25 to $6.50.

"The bituminous market has firmed up still further during the past few days, and the situation early this week was decidedly strong. Inquiries for tonnage have been somewhat more numerous of late, but the main reason for additional strength lies in the railroad situation. Cars are so scarce that shipments of free coal to tidewater have been curtailed, so that even a moderate amount of buying sends prices higher."

CRUDE RUBBER PRICES GAIN.

Smoked Sheets and Pale Crepe Higher at London Auction—Demand Light.

There was apparently not a great deal of interest displayed by traders at the opening of the regular fortnightly auction of crude rubber in London yesterday. According to cable advices received in the local market up to 3:30 P. M., only 145 of the 750 tons of plantation grades offered had been sold. In spite of the absence of an active demand, prices showed advances averaging close to 6 cents a pound over those obtained at the last previous sale. Ribbed smoked sheets were quoted at 4s 7d and pale crepe at 4s 4½d. Some general business was done there in up-river fine for November and December delivery at 4s 5d.

Trading was rather light in this market yesterday, but up-river fine and pale crepe were firmly held at $1.03, under the influence of the increased interest shown by shorts. Reports from the principal Brazilian markets indicate light receipts and stocks at the present moment.

ATTACKS MAILORDER HOUSES

Merchants' Federation Head Says They Sell Convict-Made Goods.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19.—At the opening session of the convention of the National Federation of Retail Merchants to-day the President, Martin J. Maloney, declared the mail order houses were responsible in large measure for the sale and distribution of convict-made goods, thereby entering into unfair competition with retail merchants and union labor.

He also asserted that the mail order houses were not satisfied with the zone system of parcels post, which is looked on as a menace to the retail trade, and will not halt in their efforts to have the system extended until a general parcels post is enacted. He urged the federation to oppose such legislation.

TEA TRADE WINS VICTORY.

Secretary MacVeagh's Order for Read Test Nullified.

The American tea trade won a victory yesterday when the Tea Board of the United States General Appraisers decided that Franklin MacVeagh, Secretary of the Treasury, exceeded his authority under the act of March 2, 1897, in prescribing the so-called Read test to determine the purity of imported teas. Mr. MacVeagh, in May last, ordered that all teas brought into this country should be tested by the Read method, which involves the use of a sieve.

Carter, Macy & Co., representing leading importers, brought a suit before the Tea Board, consisting of Judges McClelland, Howell, and Chamberlain, alleging that the test directed by the Secretary was unlawful, as it was not in harmony with the "customs and usages" of the trade. Importers from all parts of the country testified that the former practice of boiling the tea in water was used generally to detect coloring and facing matter. It was stated that the Read test method originated with a woman chemist in the Department of Agriculture, and was absolutely unknown to the trade in this country or China. William M. Wemple, Assistant Attorney General, argued that the Read method was valid.

Judge McClelland, who writes the board's decision says: "The Secretary of the Treasury exceeded the authority vested in him by Section 10 of the Tea act, and the said regulations must be disregarded by the Board of General Appraisers in proceedings under protest to determine the purity, quality, and fitness for consumption of teas."

As the decision of the Tea Board is final, it means that the Secretary of the Treasury will be obliged to disregard the Read test.

GARMENT TRADE SLOWS UP.

Approaching End of Fall Season Reflected in Business Done.

With the Fall season practically over, conditions in the local cloak and suit trade are generally quiet. Unseasonable weather has affected this market considerably, and few duplicate orders of any moment are coming in. Manufacturers in some quarters are doing little more than looking forward to next season. In other houses there is still a good call for chinchilla coats.

Conditions in woolen dress goods are practically unchanged, with the market steady and firm. Suitings are fairly active for spot delivery. Duplicate orders on Spring merchandise are said to be increasing in the Western States. In heavyweight fabrics, chinchilla is still the most popular, and these goods are scarce in the most wanted colors.

DON'T WORRY, SAYS AHRENS.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 19.—"We see no reason for manufacturers to worry," said Theodore Ahrens, President of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, regarding the decision of the Supreme Court calling for the dissolution of the selling agreement among enameled ware dealers. The head of the so-called Bath Tub Trust also stated that the dealers had no cause to bother about any criminal action on the part of the Government, as sixteen manufacturers who were tried in Detroit were discharged for lack of evidence.

President Ahrens said in part:

> The decision of the Supreme Court, as we understand it, orders the dissolution of the selling arrangement under which the sixteen manufacturers were operating. This arrangement was discontinued Jan. 1, 1911, and, in fact, was therefore only in existence six months.
>
> An Associated Press dispatch this morning states that the economic effect of the prosecution by Attorney Gen. Wickersham is interesting, in that since the combinations were broken up the prices of the product have fallen from 25 to 40 per cent., yet to-day almost all the manufacturers are running their factories overtime, and all are making money at the reduced prices.
>
> The fact is the prices did not decline anything like 25 to 40 per cent., as the prices in effect during the selling arrangement were so low that further reduction was impossible.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Old Perry Street Church Sold—$15 a Square foot for Small Store Lease on Lower Broadway—Apartment House Deals—W. E. Iselin to Build in 86th Street.

Greenwich Village figured conspicuously in the realty transactions yesterday in the sale of the old Perry Street Methodist Church, at 132 and 134 Perry Street. The church building, an old-fashioned brick structure, on the south side of the street, between Greenwich and Washington Streets, has a frontage of 42 feet by 100.6 and irregular. It adjoins the large seven-story warehouse on the southwest corner of Perry and Greenwich Streets.

The property has been purchased from the trustees by James H. Cruikshank and William D. Kilpatrick, who have been active operators in the section for some time. It will be held for investment.

For several years the historic church has been closed. It was erected over half a century ago when the locality was a popular home community, the streets in the vicinity, now devoted to trade, being occupied mostly by three-story brick houses with dormer windows in the attic, of which many specimens are yet to be seen in many parts of old Greenwich. During the war Perry Street Church was the scene of many stirring events and was an influential centre in arousing the patriotic fervor of the old Ninth Warders.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased to David A. Schulte, trading as A. Schulte, Cigars, a corner store, about 14 by 40, in the Smith Gray building, at Broadway and Warren Street, for fifteen years at an aggregate rental of about $175,000. This is approximately $15 a square foot, which is one of the high Broadway rentals for store premises in the vicinity of City Hall. He now controls a chain of thirty-eight stores.

Henry Corn Lofts Transferred.

The Conreco Company and the Roscorn Realty Company have transferred for a nominal consideration, subject to a mortgage for $626,000, to the Municipal Mortgage Company the twelve-story loft structure in the old shopping centre, at 39 to 47 West Nineteenth Street, near Sixth Avenue. The Conreco Company and the Roscorn Realty Company were both organized by Henry Corn.

The Conreco Company also transferred yesterday to the Municipal Mortgage Company the twelve-story loft at 74 and 76 Fifth Avenue, 51.7 feet front, with a 25-foot frontage at 1 West Thirteenth Street, forming an "L" around the northwest corner of Thirteenth Street. The property is subject to a $430,000 mortgage.

Investors Buy Apartment Houses.

The Hotel Premier, a seven-story and basement structure, on a plot 30 by 102.2, at 139 East Seventy-second Street, has been sold to an investor, by the estate of Michael Levenson. The property, which occupies the northwest corner of Lexington Avenue, was scheduled to have been sold at auction yesterday in the Vesey Street Salesroom, by Joseph P. Day. The same estate has also sold 55 and 57 East 118th Street, two five-story new law tenements, on a plot 60 by 100.11.

The John P. Peel Company and Peter P. Sherry have sold for the estate of John Trolan, 433 West Eighteenth Street, a three-story and basement flat, on a lot 25 by 92.

An investor has purchased from Leonard Weil 209 and 213 West 104th Street, two five-story flats, each on lot 25 by 100.11, located between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway.

John Lucker has sold the two four-story double flats, 313 and 315 East Eightieth Street, on a lot 50 by 100, for Herman Kahrs to J. Brinkman.

Buys Central Park West Apartment.

The New York Real Estate Security Company, which recently added to its large apartment house holdings on the upper west side by several purchases of high-class property of that character in the Harlem territory, has made another investment deal of the same sort by acquiring from George William Smith the seven-story house known as the Larchmont on the southwest corner of Central Park West and 105th Street. It covers a plot, 55.11 by 100, known as 447 and 448 Central Park West. The asking price for the property was $185,000. Title was taken yesterday.

Old Astor Holdings Sold.

Samuel Kilpatrick bought from Sarah S. Collier 253 to 257 West Fourteenth Street, three four-story dwellings, on plot 72.6 by 103.3, just east of Eighth Avenue. Mrs. Collier inherited the property from her grandfather, William Astor. The buyer is an investor.

W. E. Iselin Buyer of 86th St. Plot.

William E. Iselin is the buyer of the vacant plot at 9 and 11 East Eighty-sixth Street sold last week by Jules S. Bache. It is understood that the buyer, who now resides at 745 Fifth Avenue, will erect a residence for himself and one for his son. Arthur Iselin, on the plot, which has a frontage of 51.10 feet and a depth of 100.8.

Bronx.

Frederick Fox & Co. have sold for Curtis P. Byron to the Quiller Morgan Company 2,341 Andrews Avenue, a five-story apartment house, on plot 50 by 100.

A. J. Madden has sold for the Duo Company 789 East 163d Street, a three-story frame house, on lot 21 by 52.6.

Brooklyn.

Tutino & Cerny have sold for the Martin Building Company to a client for investment the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Sixtieth Street, a four-story double-brick apartment, with stores, on plot 20 by 100, known as 5,924 Fifth Avenue. The same firm also sold for Alma Larson to Margaret Walsh, for occupancy, the two-story and basement, brick two-family house, on plot 20 by 100, known as 658 Fifty-third Street, this being the second sale of this property by these brokers within the past three months.

The three-story and basement brownstone dwelling, 757-A Union Street, has been sold through the office of F. C. Sauter to Mrs. Filomena Scupari on private terms.

New Jersey.

Pease & Elliman have sold for the Morristown Land Improvement Company to George Marshall Allen about nine acres of unimproved property in the Convent section of Morristown. The purchaser expects to improve the property with a residence for his own occupancy.

This makes the fifth sale made by the same brokers of property belonging to the Morristown Land Improvement Company, all being part of the same tract, recently.

Recent Buyers.

Paul C. Uhlig is the purchaser of the two seven-story and basement loft buildings 169-175 Hudson Street, sold recently through the Duross Company.

Richard L. Morris is the buyer of the four-story dwelling 104 East Seventy-ninth Street, sold recently by the Cabot Real Estate Company.

Brooklyn Lease for Improved Dance Hall.

Sydney S. Cohen has leased for Thomas A. Clarke to the Social Centres Corporation a plot 146 by 200 on the south side of Halsey Street, near Broadway, adjoining the new Halsey Theatre, on which plot Mr. Clarke will erect a one-story building to be used by the lessees as one of their amusement and dancing halls, a series of which is being established in the larger cities throughout the country. The aggregate total of the lease is about $175,000.

Tenements at Auction.

To-day at the Exchange Salesroom, 14 Vesey Street, Bryan L. Kennelly will offer at auction 333 and 335 East Eighty-fifth Street, two four-story flats, each on a lot 25 by 102.2; also at absolute executor's sale 120 Greenwich Avenue and 253 West Thirteenth Street, a corner, improved with two four-story store tenements and two four-story rear houses, the parcel being a Rhinelander leasehold, with twelve years to run; and 187 Fourth Avenue, near Sackett Street, Brooklyn, a four-story store tenement, and 1,429 Forty-first Street, Brooklyn, a two-story two-family dwelling.

Realty Notes.

The Green Room Realty Company has been incorporated at Albany with a capital of $40,000. Franklin Bien, Franklin Bien, Jr., and Thomas Adam are the incorporators.

About $350,000 of German capital, represented by Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., is to be invested in the permanent mortgage on the theatre recently completed at the southwest corner of Houston and Chrystie Streets.

George R. Read & Co. have leased for Louis Canter the building at 625 Greenwich Street to Limpert Brothers & Co. It is between Leroy and Morton Streets.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—THE GREENWICH SAVINGS BANK, Plaintiff, against LOUIS SILVERMAN and others, Defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 23d day of October, 1912, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 20th day of November, 1912, at 12 o'clock, noon, on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain plot, piece, or parcel of land, together with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City, County, and State of New York, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the point formed by the intersection of the westerly side of Fifth Avenue with the northerly side of One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, running thence northerly along said westerly side of Fifth Avenue ninety-nine feet eleven inches to the middle line of the block; thence westerly along said middle line of the block and parallel with One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street one hundred and ten feet; thence southerly and parallel with said westerly side of Fifth Avenue ninety-nine feet eleven inches to the said northerly side of One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, and thence easterly along said northerly side of One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street one hundred and ten feet to the point or place of beginning, be said several dimensions more or less.

Dated New York, October 28th, 1912.

BERNARD M. L. ERNST, Referee.
B. AYMAR SANDS, Attorney for Plaintiff, 31 Nassau Street, Manhattan, New York, N. Y.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $186,457.50, with interest thereon from the 18th day of October, 1912, together with costs and allowance amounting to $498.72, with interest from October 23d, 1912, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments and water rates, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee, is $5,150.67 and interest.

Said premises will be sold subject to rights of tenants under leases made by the receiver in the above-entitled action, and to any state of facts which an accurate survey would show, and to covenants against nuisances contained in deed recorded in New York County Register's office in Liber 256 of Conveyances, at Page 432.

SURROGATE NOTICES.

WIELANDT, OSCAR A.—THE PEOPLE OF the State of New York, by the grace of God free and independent, to HEDWIG ANNA BENZ, Ernestine Yerg, Elsie Wielandt, Hedwig Wielandt, Mathilda Wielandt, Ernestine Wielandt, Ferdinand Wielandt, George W. Wielandt, Paul Wielandt, Julius Wielandt, Oscar Mork, the heirs and next of kin of OSCAR A. WIELANDT, also known as OSCAR WIELANDT, deceased, send greeting:

Whereas Simon J. Stroh of the City of New York has lately applied to the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York to have a certain instrument in writing, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Oscar A. Wielandt, also known as Oscar Wielandt, late of the County of New York, deceased; therefore you and each of you are cited to appear before the Surrogate of our County of New York, at his office in the County of New York, on the 30th day of December, one thousand nine hundred and twelve, at half past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of the said last will and testament.

And such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Hon. John P. Cohalan, a [L. S.] Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said county, the 1st day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov 19.—Rains continue in the North Pacific States, and have extended into California, Idaho, and Nevada, with rising pressure and falling temperature.

Over the remainder of the country clear weather still prevails, with falling pressure as a rule, and with rising temperatures, ranging from 10 to 20 degrees above the seasonal average over the interior districts.

Fair weather and moderately high temperatures will continue Wednesday and Thursday east of the Rocky Mountains, except in the extreme northwest, where snows or rains are probable Wednesday night or Thursday, with falling temperature.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be moderate, mostly southwest; South Atlantic Coast, light to moderate southwest and south, except variable on the Florida Coast.

Harvard Also to Profit Under the Will of Francis Amory.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—The Boston Lying-in Hospital, as the residuary legatee under the will of Francis Amory filed to-day, is expected to receive not less than $500,000. Harvard University is to get $50,000, which is to be permitted to accumulate for 21 years, and is to be known as the Amory Astronomical Fund.

The American Academy of Arts and Sciences is to get $25,000, which must also remain untouched for 21 years. The income of the latter fund is to be devoted to the purchase of gold medals or other tokens of honor for such individuals as discover any notably useful remedy or device for the treatment of certain diseases.

Mr. Amory died in Boston last week, leaving an estate valued at over $1,000,000.

Business Opportunities

RICH AS THE VALLEY OF THE NILE
We sell irrigated land in the beautiful Sacramento Valley in California. It is wonderfully rich, deep, fertile, and the water supply abundant.
This field garden will grow oranges, lemons, peaches, prunes, pecans, Bermuda onions, olives, figs, grapes, and sweet alfalfa; also any other crop grown in the United States.
Think of the enormous returns, where you can use land in this delightful climate 12 months in the year, while here you use it only 5 months.

THE MAYOR REBUKES MINISTERIAL CRITICS

Should Go About Helping People and Assailing No One, He Says, to Fill Their Benches.

TALKS TO THE COLONY CLUB

Tells the Women There Objectionable Women Cannot Be Banished—Inclines to Liberal Sunday.

Mayor Gaynor spoke to a large gathering of women at the Colony Club, 122 Madison Avenue, yesterday, on Sunday observance. He referred to the police situation, the sale of liquor, and the social evil. He said he had been blamed right and left for not stopping crime, but he had been doing everything in his power, since he had been in office, to make the city a better place to live in. He answered the ministers who fight the social evil by asserting that they were spreading it all over the city instead of keeping it isolated. In comparison with large European cities, he said New York was far in the lead in outward order and decency.

"When your committee called on me they suggested that I speak of the police situation," said he, "and I had to tell them that there was no police situation. It is true that a Lieutenant of Police was found to have been corrupted by murderers and gamblers and to have gone astray with them. Certain yellow newspaper proprietors and certain thoughtless people who read those papers in preference to decent papers seemed to be taken off their feet for a moment, but I knew that every sensible woman in the city, if not every sensible man, if given the least chance, would recollect herself and say, 'Why, this is the offense of a Lieutenant of Police, a subordinate officer; how unjust it is to characterize a force of 10,000 men for the fault of this one man!' I had to bear the brunt of it. The Mayor here has to bear the brunt of everything, especially if the yellow newspapers do not like him because he won't bend to them and make himself subservient to their corrupt purposes. He can have an easy time here if he does that.

"Some of them are awfully solicitous of late about the observance of Sunday. Why these I allude to do not believe in your Christian Sunday at all, and it seems to me it would suffice for them to go to their synagogue and hear Rabbi Wise on Saturday, and not meddle quite so much with our Christian Sunday. The Jewish Sabbath is just as good as the Christian Sunday. But I only note the extreme solicitude of these people on the subject as in keeping with all their shams and their hypocrisies.

"I have said several times in public that the first duty of a police force was to preserve outward order and decency. Well, vicious people that I have reference to forthwith began to assail me as encouraging all sorts of vices in this city—some of them clergymen preaching to empty benches, maybe, and such people as that very often think that by assailing the Mayor they may get people to come and listen to them. I could tell them how to get people to come and listen to them. Let them get Jesus in their hearts, and let them preach Jesus to people, and let them go around and stroke and succor and be kind to those who are in distress and who need help, and their churches will be filled very soon. They never will fill them by uncharitableness and by unjustly assailing anybody.

"The first duty of the force is to preserve outward order and decency. That includes also the suppression of all the ordinary crimes—burglary, assaults in the street, and everything you can think of.

"And that requires constant vigilance. It also means keeping order in our streets—and a part of that keeping of order, no doubt, is not to allow unfortunate women to block the streets, not to allow them to ply their trade, as you see them doing in London and other European cities without a word being said to them. And that, duty, I think, is well done in this great city.

The Mayor said he had been beset of late on this subject, as though he ought to get rid of all these women, some way or another, and he continued:

"Why, they talk as though I could banish them all from the city. I cannot banish them from the city. I can only work with the police to minimize the evil. The greatest good fortune that can happen to us is that these women congregate in certain localities, and in that way they do the least evil.

"Some years ago a clergyman in this city, induced the public authorities to drive them and spread them and club them all over the city and filled the flats and the tenements with them. I suppose he thinks to this day that he did something great. Jesus, whom he professes to follow, did not treat the woman like a brute that was brought before Him. He told those who were accusing her that he among them who is without sin, let him first cast a stone.

"Don't say that the Police Commissioner can drive these woman all out of the city. He cannot do it. But he can drive them all over the city, under your noses, and the noses of your children everywhere. That unfortunate thing was done here once, but I trust it will never be done again. Why, we have got to be gentle with them. They are women as you are women, and in gentleness we have to do the best we can to lift them up and correct them."

Referring to the sale of liquor on Sunday, the Mayor said he supposed that the husbands and brothers of his hearers belonged to rich clubs, where they could go on Sunday and get all they wanted to drink.

"Tell me some way," asked the Mayor, "to get the immense east side of New York not to take a drink of beer on Sunday, will you?

"I have no sympathy at all with those who think they can teach morals by the policeman's club. No greater delusion ever entered into the heads of men or women. It cannot be done. Force only excites people to go contrary to force."

CUBAN WINS BARNARD GIRL.

Senor Romay of the Cuban Consulate Weds Miss Kathryn Smith.

News of a romantic marriage, sanctioned by the Cuban Consulate of this city, but which is believed to have met with less favor by the parents of the young bride, leaked from the consulate headquarters, at 82 Beaver Street, yesterday. The bridegroom was Placido Dominguez Romay, Secretary of the Consulate, who is now honeymooning.

"Yes, it is true," said F. Taboada, the Cuban Consul, "but I didn't know a thing about it until the very last moment, when my secretary, or chancellor as we speak of him, asked me to be his best man. That was a week ago last Friday. It happened in the City Hall, and it certainly was romantic."

The bride was Miss Kathryn Smith, the 21-year-old daughter of Bernard Smith, a wealthy manufacturer of Columbus, Ohio. Miss Smith was a student at Barnard College, where she had taken up psychology as a major subject. She received her early education at the Ohio State University in Columbus and then went to France for a year.

It was while returning from France with her mother a few years ago that she met Señor Romay on the steamer. Her mother, it was said yesterday, soon forgot about the new Cuban acquaintance, but the daughter, it seems, never forgot him for a moment. Señor Romay had seen service at the Cuban consulates in London and Buenos Aires, and was on his way to New York to serve with the local consulate. When Miss Smith came to Barnard College last September the romance began in earnest, Miss Smith's parents little dreaming that they were soon to have a son-in-law.

The match was objected to by friends of Miss Smith, it was said, because Señor Romay was a divorced man and ten years her senior. His first wife was Lottie Ferrao, a Cuban girl, and the decree of divorce was issued in the First District Court of Santo Domingo, the certificate stating that it was one of "mutual agreement." Miss Smith didn't mind that chapter in her fiancé's life, however, and Alderman James A. Smith of the Graft Investigating Committee made no objection either when asked to perform the ceremony.

As to Value

VALUE, when you come right down to brass tacks, is nothing more or less than a ratio—the ratio of what you get to what you pay.

If, as in Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes, you pay $18. $20, $22.50 or $25 for a Suit or Overcoat that otherwise would cost several dollars more, you have received more for what you have paid than you could have otherwise.

In other words, you have received greater value—

And this is exactly the case with every Hart, Schaffner & Marx garment that we sell, whether its price be $18 or $75, $25 or $50.

The shrewdest buyers in New York know it, and more and more of them are buying Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes of us each season.

Time and again, we have had men come here and look over our Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes, go out and examine clothes elsewhere, and come back here to buy.

Each one of these men had gone about comparing values and style, and had decided in our favor.

Won't you come in and do the same?

Suits $18 to $50. Overcoats $15 to $75.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6th, 1912.

Editor The New York Times, New York.

Dear Sir: In the amusement columns of your issue of Saturday last, November 2d, you inserted for me the following "Ad":

TO LET.
Two Metropolitan Opera seats; excellent location; Friday evening; for season. Apply Supt., 500 Madison Av.

I had the first inquiry as to the seats referred to made on Saturday morning about 8 o'clock, and sold them then at the full price asked. Since then I have had fifteen replies through the mail, ten over telephone, and seven by personal application. As all this came through one insertion, I thought it might interest you to know about it.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. MORAN.
